That same day two men, evidently disciples and friends of the Master, went to the village of Emmaus, about seven miles from Jerusalem. One was Cleopas, of whom we know no more than this account tells. The other is not identified. As they were walking along, talking of the events that had taken place in the last days, and feeling very downhearted, Jesus joined them, but they did not recognize Him. He asked them what they were talking about and why they were so sad. They were surprised that anyone would be ignorant of the recent terrible doings, so they told Him about the crucifixion and also of the story the women had told about the tomb.

Jesus answered, "O fools, and slow of heart, to believe all that the prophets have spoken: ought not Christ to have suffered these things, and to enter into His glory?"

Then, beginning with Moses and all the prophets, He told them the scriptures concerning Himself.

When they arrived at Emmaus, Jesus would have left them, but they insisted that He go and abide with them. So that evening, as they were eating, Jesus took the bread and blessed it, and brake it and gave it to them. "And their eyes were opened, and they knew Him; and He vanished out of their sight."

How stupid the men must have felt not to have recognized their Lord and their blessed privilege of having Him with them. They said to one another, "Did not our heart burn within us, while He talked with us by the way, and while He opened to us the scriptures?"

They returned immediately to Jerusalem, found the apostles gathered together, and said, "The Lord is risen indeed, and hath appeared to Simon." Then they told of Jesus' appearance to them and how they knew Him when He brake the bread.

"And as they thus spake, Jesus himself stood in the midst of them, and saith unto them, Peace be unto you."

Then it was that He showed them the nail marks in His hands and feet, and ate some fish, to show them that it was really He in the risen flesh.

People of all nations and times have celebrated the coming of the spring season, but only for Christians is it the glorious time when the Master, the Christ that saves, rises from the tomb and proclaims His message of love and life for all.

Only Twice In This Century Does Easter Fall April 13

By THOMAS WAYLING
Central Press Canadian Writer

Easter: "A Christian festival in commemoration of the Resurrection of Christ" will be observed throughout the Christian world on April 13.

It is not an anniversary, for the date of Easter jumps around the calendar like an Easter rabbit.

Only twice in the present century will Easter Day fall on April 13; this years and in 1952.

The original Easter was the Anglo-Saxon Eostra or Eostera dedicated to the Goddess of Spring.

The Christian Easter is set by ecclesiastical authorities as "the first Sunday after the full moon which happens upon or next after the 21st of March."

With the pagans Eostra meant rejoicing over the arrival of spring. With the Jews it is a commemoration of the Passover, with the Christians, the Crucifixion and the Resurrection.

The Hebrews held that their Passover must come on the 14th day of the month. In the Christian church there was much dissension about Easter Day. The western Christians observed Easter Day on the Sunday and the eastern Christians on the 14th day, irrespective of what day it might be.

Fixed by Council of Nicaea

The Council of Nicaea in A.D. 325 decided Easter should be celebrated on a Sunday, and that it should be the first Sunday following the full moon after the vernal equinox, March 21.

The full moon, however, could not always be observed. It had to be calculated. More trouble arose, the astronomical mathematicians did not agree on the cycles to be used as the basis of calculation.

The British, Roman and Irish churches commemorated Easter on different Sundays in different years.

In 1582 the calendar and the sun were 10 days apart, and Pope Gregory XIII had to excise 10 days from the calendar to get March 21 where it really belonged.

Careful scientific investigation puts the most probable date of Easter Day as April 9 in the present century; in 1939, 1944 and 1950, and then not again for 60 years.

As Easter Day dominates about 17 weeks of the church calendar in its fluctuations, the Council of Nicaea didn't do much of a job.

In 1928 the British parliament passed a permissive statute so that Easter would be the first Sunday after the second Saturday in April.

Could Be Fixed Date

There is no real need for Easter to jump about and more than Christmas. December 25 is celebrated as the anniversary of the birth of Christ, but nobody knows if it is the real anniversary.

Theophilus of Antioch recorded that the Gauls celebrated the birth of our Lord on the 25th of December. Hippolytus at a later date declared Jesus was born on the 25th of December and that it was a Wednesday.

A Latin chronographer of A.D. 254 stated that Christ was born on 25th of December, a Friday. A German commentator insisted that the 25th of December, the day of Christ's birth, was a Sunday. Other chronologists put the birth date variously on August 28, May 20, April 19, and April 20. Clement of Alexandria set it at November 17, in the year 3 B.C.

In Africa, a learned writer in A.D. 243 argued that the world was created perfect; flowers in bloom, trees in leaf, and therefore in the spring. "Now the sun and moon," he wrote, "were created on a Wednesday. The 28th of March suits all these considerations, therefore, Christ being the Son of Righteousness, was born on March 28."

While primarily Easter is a religious commemoration, your wife and mine, and their sisters and their cousins, whom they reckon by the dozens—and their aunts, still have a bit of the pagan—Easter is the coming of spring—and spring finery—Mother Earth adorns herself in the spring but it is nature's spring—nature's resurrection. She won't send up crocus and daffodils and spring flowers if Easter happens to fall in the early blustery days of March; nor withhold them when Easter is at the tag end of April. The womenfolk, however, observe the ecclesiastical Easter.

So this Easter which may be Easter (and usually isn't) demoralizes the spring fashion show, and all the trade and commerce connected therewith. The womenfolk are mostly for a fixed Easter, when it will be Easter and spring and there's only the ordinary uncertainty of the weather.

Palestine Spring

In Palestine, where the first Easter morn witnessed the Resurrection, spring comes earlier than the general run for North America, probably about the same time as the southern states. A fixed Easter around April 9 would be a fairly average approximation of spring.

At the general convention of the Episocal church in Atlantic City, October, 1934, a United Press survey found 210 delegates in favor of a fixed Easter and 19 for the status quo (which so far as Easter Day is concerned is never the status quo.)

Proposals have been made before the League of Nations for the reform of the calendar and after the present war steps may be taken, among the democratic reforms to establish a new system of days and weeks and months—and feast days and fast days. Easter is the most moveable of all thecalendar dates, and when it's Easter one never really knows whether it is or it isn't or when it is.

Christ Shows Himself Alive — ILLUSTRATED SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON — By Alfred J. Buescher

Scripture—Luke 24:1-43.

Very early in the morning of the first day in the week, after the crucifixion, the women went to Jesus' tomb to anoint the body. They found the stone rolled away from the sepulchre and the body gone.

As they stood perplexed, two men in shining garments stood by them, saying. Why seek ye the living among the dead? He is not here, but is risen; remember how He spake unto you when He was yet in Galilee?

The women hastened away and told these things to the apostles, but their words seemed to them as idle tales, and they believed them not, but Peter ran to the tomb and found it as the women had said.

Two of Jesus' disciples went to Emmaus, talking as they went, and Jesus appeared to them but they did not know Him. He went with them, and as He brake bread with them they knew Him. (GOLDEN TEXT—Rev. 1:18)

Better Face The Facts

Production Chief John D. Biggers made the statement at Washington that what takes place in United States in the next one hundred days may change the history of the world.

Biggers has charge of the output of American war material for Britain, and each strike which comes to the surface drives him almost to the point of desperation.

We read "It is because the public does not understand."

And we may have that same situation right here in Canada.

It is a delicate situation to handle, and the reasons are not difficult to understand. Leaders feel that they must keep the morale of their people high; they must not allow them to come to the belief they may be fighting a losing battle. When they speak with candor about the dark days now and the dark days of the future they always conclude with the claim that there is something better farther down the road, and they leave in the minds of the people the feeling that it is just a matter of time until things take a turn for the better.

Right now Germany has a noose around the British Isles and is seeking to pull it tight. It is using submarines, surface raiders and long-range bombers on all shipping which approaches those islands, and the results are plain bad. The extent to which food is being rationed in Britain makes that plain enough if we care to look at the situation squarely.

To enter the Balkan war in a large way has taken a tremendous tonnage of British merchant ships, transports and naval strength to the Mediterranean, and it has interfered with the safe convoying of vessels carrying foodstuff and munitions to Britain via the Atlantic.

That is one reason — and that one is sufficient—why the talk of strikes in United States and Canada arouses antagonism. Each day's work lost on war business is adding that much to the chance of the Germans for victory.

The Field Is The World

The first Easter morning attracted little attention. The few disciples of Christ were discouraged at the hour of crucifixion, and they appeared to believe that was the end of it all. They had been looking for and anticipating the setting up of an earthly kingdom, and with the death of Christ that came to an abrupt end. Even after the resurrection they found it difficult to believe it had taken place, and when it had been made plain to them that Christ had actually risen from the grave, there was again that question, "Lord, wilt Thou at this time restore again the kingdom to Israel?"

Instead of restoring an earthly kingdom there was the command given that they should carry the gospel "unto the uttermost parts of the earth." The mission of Christ on earth had been completed, and He was leaving His followers to carry it on. Looking at the situation and judging the possibility of success through the eyes of practical knowledge, one would have to admit it was a rather hopeless undertaking. It is not on record that there was even a committee named to attend to the business; there was no financial campaign to raise funds to carry on promotional work; there were no books or tracts printed, nor was there even a head office. And yet there was the command to carry the good word of salvation into the uttermost part of the world.

We gather in our country in the name of the Christ of Calvary, and we have been doing it for years, generation after generation, and each gathering is proof positive that the simple plan laid down by the Master has worked, and it has been done largely through the means of one person telling another.

The need of the world for this good news is great today. It lives and keeps on living in the midst of a world of hatred; it survives shells and bombing and battle in the air and on the sea. In its truest form it cuts clean across the grasping of men for greater riches. It is founded on love for other people. It places God above all else and it proclaims the Kingdom of God is within you. Easter has a deeper significance than most of us give to it, yet never in the history of the world was its message more needed.

A Strike And a War

A woollen goods company in Oshawa has a strike of its eighty employees, most of whom are women, and their union has received a wire from Hon. Norman McLarty, Federal Labor Minister, stating the strike is illegal, and notifying the workers to return at once or face Government action.

From published reports one gathers the information that the strike was called before submitting the grievances to a board of conciliation. There had been some negotiations carried on, but the suggestions made were not acceptable to the employees.

It has been stated also that when the message from Mr. McLarty was read at a meeting of the workers there was a vote taken and the result was that the strike should continue. The union organizer in his reply to the Minister of Labor said "it was practically impossible to convince the members to return to work," although the degree of persuasion employed was not stated.

The suggestion of the Labor Minister was that the workers should continue operations while a board of conciliation was dealing with the situation. Admittedly we know little enough about the situation or about the wages which have been paid in the plant. They may be, as has been charged, entirely too low and in need of upward revision.

But all that is apart from the main issue. It settles down to one point, whether the workers are going to comply with the plain order from the Minister of Labor that they return to work, or whether they intend to defy the Minister, which is just the same thing as defying the Government.

We doubt very much whether any group of workers desire to be placed in that latter position. When a country is facing such a serious situation as Canada is right now, we look to the Government as the central point of authority, and when a responsible Minister of an elected Government issues an order to return to work, then that must be considered as the last word.

If the Oshawa workers returned then they would be placing themselves in a favorable position because it would then be the duty of a Board of Conciliation to see that justice was done and the workers fairly treated. We would regard it as a dangerous and an unwise decision for workers to remain on strike during war time when they had been instructed to resume operations.

Berlin Within Range

The Royal Air Force is finding its way more frequently to Berlin. When we read of traffic being held up on the Unter den Linden because lines of hose were laid criss-cross across the street we know that Germany will be disturbed. When we read that the last attack on Berlin lasted for three hours we know well enough that there must have been a large number of planes engaged. It is more than a thousand miles from Britain to Berlin and return and planes cannot remain long; they must do their damage and be on the way home.

The number of anti-aircraft guns which are ringed about the city is large, and as such guns go there are admittedly fairly effective, and yet the R.A.F. went through or over the entire barricade and poised the attack on the centre of that proud city which had boasted it could never be raided.

Again there is reference made to the dropping of larger and more powerful bombs than had ever been used before on German territory. There were reports of more fires than ever resulted in previous raids. It is horribly grim work, but we know of no place in the world which needs bombing more than Berlin, the heart of Germany. The German people have worked on the theory for years that in case of war the proper method is to take the war to the territory of other nations, to destroy their property and to torture their people. Not since the time of Napoleon have the Germans had a taste of war on their own territory. In no other way can those people learn the meaning of war.

Britain Needs It

There is not so much being said in United States now about sending supplies to France. There is little heard about the old claim that Britain should allow food and supply vessels to go through and enter French ports.

It is hardly possible to think of any plan which would bring more direct aid and comfort to Germany than having supplies of any kind land in French ports because they might just as well be shipped and landed finally right in Berlin.

People think of potatoes as something which people can eat, but the Germans regard potatoes as something with which to fight. It was the London Sunday Dispatch which recently made the statement that in Germany 187,500 tons of potatoes produced 17,000 tons of fuel alcohol, an amount sufficient to keep 500 German planes in a position to raid Britain for two months.

If there is any shipping space available then Britain needs it if she is going to live.

They All Had a Chance

In the Dominion general election of March 26, 1940, there were 4,620,200 votes cast, and of these Liberal and Independent Liberals received a total of 2,536,514. For the Conservatives, including Independent Conservative and National Government candidates there was a total of 1,416,257.

It is not possible to say that other groups and new ideas had no chance to present their wares to the electors. This list shows not only the votes but the manner in which opinion seeks to find a channel for expression outside the lines of the two old parties:

C.C.F.	393,230
New Democracy, Social Credit	123,443
Communist	14,616
Independent	58,255
United Reform	14,137
Independent Nationalist	12,710
Unity	12,337
Labor-Farmer	8,126
National Unity	7,534
Ind. Anti-Conscriptionist	5,928
U.F.O.-Labor	4,761
Labor	3,916
United Progressive	2,727
National Lib-Progressive	2,354
National Labor	2,434
Anti-Conscriptionist	642
Conservative-Labor	398
Soc. Cr.-National Unity	241

That means that candidates were divided 23 ways, and some of the combinations were such that they were not heard of outside their own bailiwick. Our belief would be that the starting of a new political party in this country with any degree of success in sight would be the most difficult task to which one could set his hand.

NOTE AND COMMENT

The man who is known as a model husband has probably started the rumor himself.

During March there were 1,216 planes for war made in United States. Very good—for a start.

Hens never seem to catch on to the idea. When eggs get cheap they start to lay like everything.

Last report showed Canada with 1,952,000 tons of sugar, so please do not talk about a shortage during the canning season.

Before calling any more strikes in this country it would be advisable to take a serious look at the one Hitler made in the Balkans.

Salvation Army huts in U.S. training areas are making doughnuts with a star-shaped hole in the centre. And possibly this year it looks like Mars.

The wool clipped from five sheep is needed to provide a uniform and three blankets for a Canadian soldier. As a rule we do not include sheep when thinking of war—but there you are.

The voluntary system of enlistment in time of war may be a nice thing for democratic countries to boast about, but in actual operation it divides young men into two classes: (1) those who will volunteer and (2) those who will not.

Young Doukhobors in Saskatchewan will have to appear in person to claim exemption from military service, and our belief is they will have quite a time showing why they should go along as usual while other young men go forth to fight their battles.

CONFIDENCE

(By A.R.K.)

¶ I've watched the summer birds arrive, seen early flowers become alive, concluded this was Spring; I've tried to read the signs aright, and looked about by day and night, to not miss anything.

¶ Short time ago the banks of snow, looked somehow though they'd never go, they seemed both deep and strong; but when the sun turned on the heat, they trickled daily down the street, and didn't last so long.

¶ I've watched the coal pile as it sunk, to help it out I've pitched in junk, but no more junk's in sight; it's been a contest close enough, perhaps my ways are crude and rough, the fire went out last night.

¶ I've read what all the prophets say, it may be cold enough some day, we may have sleet or snow; they tell me I've been fooled before, I best not move the double door, perhaps they ought to know.

¶ They tell me when the frogs will sing, is time enough to greet the Spring, and shed my underwear; they shake a warning finger too, and warn of things I shouldn't do, and I should take more care.

¶ But theres' one sign in which I trust, when other signs break up and bust, I count on it as true; it puts new confidence in me, when I take time to look and see—the rhubarb coming through.

CAP and BELLS . .

By SAMUEL MARCHBANKS

TODAY, the last before Easter Day, is also the last day of Lent, and is therefore a day of considerable excitement to those who observe the Lenten fast strictly. In Ireland, within living memory, and perhaps even yet in some parts, cooking for the Easter Day feast began on this day, and all the family stayed up and made merry until midnight. When that hour arrived there was great rejoicing and cries of "Shidth or mogh or corries," which means "Away with Lent." They then went to bad for a few hours, to arise at dawn to see the sun dance! It was very widely believed in country districts throughout the whole of the British Isles that the sun shook, or 'danced' in the sky on Easter Sunday, as a sign of rejoicing at the Resurrection of Christ. Beliefs like this die hard, and about a hundred years ago a number of distinguished scholars thought it worth their while to discuss the matter at some length and to give it as their firm opinion that the sun did not dance at this or any other time. They condemned the whole thing as a "weak, superstitious error." It is an astonishing evidence of the tenacity of tradition that some of these beliefs of Catholic and medieval origin persisted in England among a Protestant population until so recently.

C & B

Another odd survivial is the old custom of "heaving," which was carried on in England, in the north, up to the beginning of the present war. Groups of girls go about the streets with an armchair, and when they meet a man who looks as though he had a little money about him they invite him to sit in the chair to be "heaved." He is solemnly lifted into the air, and when he is back on the ground again he is asked for a shilling or two for the fair heavers. This odd game is, of all things, a symbolical representation of Christ's Resurrection. The money which the girls got for "heaving" they used to spend on beer, and it was the privilege of the man who was heaved to kiss any one of the girls whom he chose. The kissing has gone out of use, which seems a pity, and the money which the girls collect now is usually given to charity.

C & B

The custom of giving eggs as presents on Easter Sunday is a very ancient one. Of course the egg is a symbol of fertility, as is also the rabbit, and both have become popular Easter decorations. Nowadays the eggs are usually made of chocolate, but when I was a child they were colored hen s eggs, and were a source of great wonder and pleasure. The ones I was given were painted with water color, which was very pretty, but in earlier days the eggs were dyed with vegetable dyes. It was the custom to write the name of the person for who it was intended upon the egg with the hot tallow from a candle; the egg was then dyed, boiling hard in the process, and when the tallow was scraped off there was the name on the egg in pure white shell! Sometimes the designs were scraped on the dyed egg with a knife, and a good artist could make a very pretty job of it. The antiquity of this custom is impossible to reckon, but we do know that four hundred eggs were covered with gold leaf and distributed to the courtiers of King Edward I, who reigned from 1272 to 1307.

C & B

ANOTHER Easter custom, which has now completely died out, is that of telling an "Easter Tale" in church on Easter Sunday. Up until the middle of the 18th century it was usual for the parson to give a lead to his flock in merriment by telling them a funny story in place of a sermon. This seems to us a ribald and irreverent procedure, but perhaps it was thought that after the long mourning of Lent the devout needed something to make them laugh. Some of these Easter Tales are interesting; here is one copied from a book of sermons by a rector of the parish of Dilling: "Christ our Lord was journeying with St. Peter, and had passed through many countries. One day he came to a place where there was no inn, and entered the house of a blacksmith. This man had a wife, who paid the utmost respect to the strangers, and treated them with the best her house would afford. When they were about to depart, our Lord and St. Peter wished her all that was good, and heaven into the bargain. Said the woman, 'Ah! if I do but go to heaven, I care for nothing else.'—'Doubt not,' said St. Peter, 'for it would be contrary to scripture if thou shouldest not go to heaven, Let what will happen, thou must go there. Open thy mouth. Did I not say so? Why thou canst not be sent to hell, where there is wailing and gnashing of teeth, for thou hast not a tooth left in thy head. Thou art safe enough; be of good cheer!'

C & B

Modern readers may not find themselves in stitches over the humor of this Easter Tale, but it was probably much to the taste of a rural congregation three hundred years ago. Other times, other tastes....A joyous Easter to you!

THE C. P. R.

The C. P. R. last year had a net profit of $20,145,050 against one of only $9,782,148 in 1939, which proves that it isn't only government-owned railways which have been profitting from heavy war-time traffic.—Brockville Recorder and Times.

• Says Prayers Are Answered

Letter in Montreal Star

SIR—Last June when France was crumbling and Belgium had succumbed to the German hordes nearly 400,000 of our men were in the gravest danger of being killed or captured. A day of prayer was proclaimed for the whole Empire. It was obeyed and the next week because of a calm sea over a usually boisterous channel and a dense fog, and in spite of Nazi guns and ships and engines of war 335,000 men were brought safely over to England. No other such military feat has ever been recorded in history. It was as much a miracle as the Israelites crossing the Red Sea.

On February 9th 1941 another day of prayer was proclaimed . The following weeks witnessed the most astonishing victories for our forces. At Sidi Barani, Bardia, Tobruk, and Benghazi and 150,000 prisoners captured with less than 500 casualties in our forces—another miracle.

Again, the Empire was called to a day of universal prayer on March 23rd. Results the following week Keren, besieged for seven weeks one of the strongest fortifications in Africa, fell to the British. Harar, a walled city in Ethiopia was captured by our troops. The Yugoslavian people repudiated the treacherous pact of their rulers with the Axis, and as Churchill says "found its soul" and prepared to defend its liberty and one of the greatest diplomatic victories of the war. Then a great sea battle took place in the Mediterranean, when five enemy ships, possibly seven, were sunk, 1000 prisoners captured and 3000 lost by the enemy, and not a single British man or ship lost. The days of miracles are not past. Surely such results after days of prayer should impress every one.

Yet there is a strange absence of anything like a general thanksgiving for such wonderful results. I have looked in vain for anything like a universal voice of thanksgiving from our pulpits and radios and newspapers for these wonderful answers to prayer. It seems to me we ought to have an Empire day of thanksgiving for these wonderful answers to our supplications. Are we not somewhat like the ten lepers who prayed to be healed and were told to go to the temple? On the way they were healed but only one returned to give thanks. Then the master said disappointedly: "Were there not ten cleansed but where are the nine."

• The Fall of Addis Ababa

SO they came into Addis Ababa, with heads up and guidons up and rifles on the sling. Dizzy Italian troops staggered hastily off into the bush and that, generally speaking, seems to be just about the end of the latest experiment of Il Duce with war in Ethiopia.

You didn't hear much about this performance in a day of louder echoes from Greece and Yugoslavia, but no one hereabouts is likely to minimize its importance. As a pageant of audacity and endurance, it is unlikely to be equalled—at least in this war. There are still vagrant forces to be cleaned up—still nuisance troops at isolated strong points in the hills and jungled gorges of the hinterlands—but when the Ethiopian capital fell, the symbol of Mussolini's conquest fell with it.

There is nothing ahead for the Italian empire builders now, save return to Italy if they can get there.

Somewhere in the background, suitably mounted on a white horse with a herd of fire-eyed chiefs struggling for a chance to ride in his shadow, is Haile Selassie, the returning Negus Negusti. He who five years ago was just another ex-king and whose chances, even a year ago, didn't look any too good, can appreciate the miracle wrought by the dust-caked, parched wonder-workers from South Africa.

It is only a couple of months now since he began to think that he might one day see Addis Ababa again. And, lo! Here a brace of Kenya riflemen are dusting off his throne for him. Tomorrow, or next day, he will come riding down the mountain to his palace, and Mussolini's uplift will be forgotten except by Italian taxpayers who pay the bill for experiments in glory.

The Duke of Acsta, Mussolini's Viceroy and head of his forces in Ethiopia, has gone out of circulation, with his army presumably moving northward along the road to Dessye.

Lack of resistance at all points is taken officially to indicate the demoralization of the entire Italian command.

A Bible Message For Today . . . .

And it came to pass as they went in the way, a certain man said unto him, Lord, I will follow thee withersoever thou goest.

And Jesus said unto him, Foxes have holes and the birds of the air have nests, but the son of man hath not where to lay his head.

And he said to another, Follow me. But he said, Lord, suffer me first to go and bury my father.

Jesus said unto him, Let the dead bury their dead, but go thou and preach the kingdom of God.

And another also said, Lord, I will follow thee, but first let me go bid them farewell which are at home in my house.

And Jesus said unto him, No man, having put his hand to the plough, and looking back, is fit for the kingdom of God.—Luke 9: 57-62.

NAZI LINDBERGH

THERE are indications that Colonel Lindbergh is really on the side of Hitler, though he does not profess to be. There is nothing in his utterances that would lead one to believe him a believer in the cause of human liberty or democracy. He speaks like a man who would relish something like Nazism in this country, and, abandoning all disguise, we are frank to express our belief that Colonel Lindbergh is a Nazi at heart. —San Francisco Argonaut.

LARGE OIL TANKER BUCKS ICE TO REACH COBOURG PORT FIRST

Reaches Harbor Thursday With Gas Cargo

COBOURG, April 12 — (ENS). — Upper Lake navigation opening touched on Cobourg's all-year port on Thursday morning early, when the first vessel other than two car ferries arrived at the harbor. The ship, a tanker, was the Windsorlite from Sarnia, carrying 482,000 gallons of gasoline for a local oil company's waterfront storage tanks.

The tanker, a modern ship built in England in 1927 with an overall length of 250 feet, was in command of Captain C. R. Dyon of Toronto.

Arrive Together

The tanker and the car ferry, Ontario No. 2, arrived together off the Cobourg Harbor entrance at 12.20.

Captain S. McCaig of the car ferry showed the courtesy of the sea when he checked his big white ship and laid to, allowing the Windsorite to enter the harbor first.

The Windsorlite was tied up at the centre pier before 12.45, which speaks for the skill with which Captain Dyon handled his long low craft. After company officials went on board a small boom was swung out and the ship's crew began operations.

The large hose used for pouring the fuel into the pier length pipes was swung over the side and coupled up and the ship began to unload almost at once.

The ship had left Sarnia at four o'clock Tuesday afternoon and the trip down was without incident. The lake had been calm and no ice was encountered during the whole trip.

This was the third trip of the season for the Windsorlite and the only trouble encountered had been at Goderich on the first attempt.

Stuck in Ice

There in the small river the ice was badly packed and the Windsorlie was unable to move it or go through.

The Acadiolite, a sister ship, had come along and both ships undertook the task of clearing a ship's lane through the ice. Almost seven hours of first oned an then the other tanker smashing at the floes went by before they could get out into the lake.

This was the only happening of the current Spring season that was in any way out of line with the usual lake duties.

The Windsorlite has a draught of 18 feet at its deepest and she was drawing 16 feet when the docking operations were finished in the local harbor.

The tanker was not full loaded with cargo as she was carrying water ballast put on board in preparation for possible meeting of ice floes, when the ship would if not loaded with cargo need depth in order to go through.

Carries Red Light

The Windsorlite carried the warning red signal lights on the aftermast as well as flying the red burgee in daytime, to warn other shipping that she was laden with dangerous cargo.

She was unloaded and gone shortly after seven in the morning.

Grass Fires Worry Town Firemen

COBOURG, April 12— (ENS). — Gras fires continued to ring Cobourg as the Fire Department answered daily calls to dried out grass lots and fields. On Thursday the truck had two calls, the first to Albert Street. There a grass fire was burning fiercely behind the home of Evor Leonard. The fire was beaten out without damage beyond the smoke nuisance which blew across the neighbors' open windows and doors. The second call was to the north-end of the town where W. Maher's vacant field was ablaze. The fire swept across the tops of the dried weeds and grass with vicious swiftness and menaced the slaughter house and holding pens owned by Mr. Maher. The firemen were forced to string hose and play a stream of water upon the buildings in order to ensure their safety.

From Tuesday night until Thursday afternoon the department had answered five different calls with the Edwards & Edwards lacquer department fire as the only serious blaze.

Cavan Farmers Favor Rural Unity

CAVAN, April 12 (ENS)—Cavan township farmers met Wednesday evening at Cavan Community Hall under the chairmanship of Reeve Garnet Shields.

There was a fair turnout to discuss numercus agriculture problems. Mr. Shields said it was time the farmers were organized, as all other organizations and manufacturers were; also that he had yet to speak to a farmer who was not in favor of Federation of Agriculture.

He called on A. E. Summers, Durham County representative, who spoke briefly on several subjects. He mentioned that this was the time for reforestation work, that farmers and school sections could get different kinds of young trees for the planting; That every farm had some place on it where from one hundred up of pine or hardwood could be planted without much sacrifice to the farmer.

Choose Seed With Care

Mr. Summers, also, had a list of men in the county, who had seed oats and barley for sale. He advised testing any seed the farmers were considering sowing, as he knew of places where grain was very low in germination this spring on account of the wet weather last fall.

He spoke on ways of providing pasture during the early spring and during the summer when the natural pasture is short. He said some farmers were sowing rye early in the fall, for late pasture that fall, and also for early pasture in the spring.

Oats and peas made a good pasture during the summer. He also spoke on fertilizers and how to take samples of soil to send away for tests.

Regulations on the new egg grading, were shown, also pamphlets on hog feeding, care and management of dairy cattle and others.

Inspector Introduced

Mr. Charlton, the new public school inspector of this district was present from Cobourg, and expressed his pleasure at meeting some of the farmers and trustees.

Mr. Wilfred Bowles of Nestleton, a farmer in Cartwright, was the special speaker for the evening. Mr. Bowles is a lawyer, who came back to the farm, that his father and grandfather had worked, for the love of the land, he said, and not the idea of getting rich, which was a good thing too, as he was not making much headway, so far. He said it was a problem for the farmer to know what to gcow, because if you grew a lot of pigs, you were just as likely to lose more by so doing. He could not raise pigs at eight dollars, live weight, if he received any returns for his time, and he was sure it was worth something, and that his audience could not either. He showed how in 1932, when labor was reasonable, that investigation had showed the average investment of farmers in their farms and equipment was six thousand dollars and their weekly returns at that time was placed at eight dollars a week. He said the cost of producing a pound of butterfat was placed at thirty-four cents; therefore we are working just for the pleasure of it, without profit.

Unfair Treatment

He said that the farmers were just as patriotic as any other class of people, but that they hadn't the money to give as they would like to. He said the farmers are working at cost and below cost on some lines of stock. When the war started the government said there would be no extra profits made this war. But "What happened? Contracts were sent to manufacturers and they were turned down, because they couldn't make enough profit. The government rewrote the contracts at cost and 10% plus, but he says he has never been able to find out what 10% per cent stands for.

But he said to show how it worked out, last September, he hired a man at $35 a month, for the year, and in October he left and went to Oshawa, and his first two weeks' pay was $80. The manufacturers can pay such big wages that the farmer cannot even afford to hire help.

Cars Taxed High

He said if a farmer was going to buy a new car and wanted to be patriotic, he should buy it in the United States for two-thirds of what he would pay here, and the duty on that car would go to the government at Ottawa, instead of going to the owners of manufacturing plants here. He advised the farmers to organize, as it was the only way they would be recognized as having as much rights as other classes.

It was moved by L. Winslow and seconded by L. Sutton that a branch of the Federation of Agriculture be formed in Cavan township.

To that effect, a director was appointed from each school section, to report and send all questions to the County Federation.

The directors: No. 1 Cedar Grove, V. Jones; No. 2 Mount Pleasant, H. Jamieson; No. 3 Fairmount, R. Armstrong; No. 4 Beachwood, B. Sharp; No. 5 Cavan, E. Snider; No. 7 Cavan Centre, K. Syer; No. 8 Whitfield'a, L. Sutton; No. 9 Cairo, B. Elliott; No. 10 Fallis Line, J. McKnight; No. 11 Millbrook, L. H. Winslow; No. 12 Cedar Valley, R. Finlay; No. 13 Zion, A. Coulter; No. 14 Fairview, H. Tate; No. 15 Cork, H. Fair; No. 19 Carmel, D. Olan.

It was moved by Miss Malone and seconded by L. McNeil that the presidents of the Women's Institutes should be members of the Federation.

Firemen Busy At Grass Fires

PORT HOPE, April 12—(ENS). — Firemen were called to a grass fire Wednesday afternoon, on John street near the railway tracks, when it was feared the blaze was out of control. Several residences were nearby but fortunately the grass burned away from them. Firemen quickly controlled the flames.

Wednesday evening a thick halo of smoke was over the town as numerous fires were started by would-be gardeners cleaning up gardens and lawns. A fair size blaze was observed on Monkey Mountain as the gorges between Cavan and Victoria streets are familiarly known.

Yesterday the firemen set out to fight an ordinary grass fire in Black's woods on Dorset street but found another blaze in the same area after the first blaze was extinguished. George Austin's shed and contents suffered extensively from the fire which was prevented from spreading.

Barn And Garage Burned

PORT HOPE, April 12—(ENS).— Port Hope firemen answered two alarms Friday afternoon, one of them resulting in the fighting of two blazes on Cavan Street. This is the second occasion within a few days that the department has been called to fight a blaze and found another fire nearby.

Harry Hills lost a barn and garage when fire of undetermined origin was first observed shortly after the noon hour. The blaze had already gained a strong foothold, however, and the property was destroyed. A shed at the rear of his home was also burned.

While fighting the Hill's fire the ensilage stack at the canning company also was discovered burning. Firemen succeeded in stopping the progress of the flames and returned to the fire hall. At 2.30 a second alarm was rung in from the same source, bringing the men back again. This time there was no question of the fire being extinguished.

CATHARINES, April 12 — (Special).—Harry Sniderman, prominent Toronto sportsman, was Friday elected to the position of president of the Ontario Amateur Softball Association for 1941, succeeding Herb Champion of Simcoe. The former pitching ace of many Toronto nines was an easy winner in the election and the position of presidency now gives him a clear sweep of the offices. Last year he was first vice-president. G. Spooner of Galt was made first vice-president after six ballots had been cast, while H. Rollins of Belleville will be the new second vice-president.

Secretary Vern McIlraith and Treasurer Lloyd Alguire both received acclamations. Auditors for the coming year will be R. Horning and A. Webster, both of Hamilton, while the executive will consist of A. H. Jefferies, Hamilton, O. King, Simcoe, J. R. Brush, Sarnia, D. Leether, Peterborough, H. D. Ovenden, Wainfleet, and E. R. Simpson, Kingston.

The feature of the new amendments was the moving of the pitcher's mound back two feet to forty, while the base paths will also be extended five feet to fifty-five for all grades of ball for the 1941 season as a trial. The amendment to sign coaches as players was defeated, while the new way of paying the certificate tax was passed without question.

The teams now pay an extra $3 in their entry fee and do not pay a certificate tax. The amendment to appoint a committee of sport writers as a protest committee was defeated and all umpires of the O.A.S.A. shall be informed to enforce the illegally batted ball rule strictly at all times. The delegates were welcomed to the city in the afternoon at their annual banquet by His Worship Mayor Daley of St. Catharines.

Change Officials In Western Final

CALGARY, April 12—(CP). — A change in officials for the fourth game of the best-of-five Western Senior hockey final between Regina Rangers and Lethbridge Maple Leafs was announced here by Frank Sargent of Port Arthur, Canadian Amateur Hockey Association vice-president. Regina leads the series two games to one.

Lorne Lyndo of Winnipeg will be referee in charge of to-night's game here, replacing Bernie Ost of Winnipeg. Dick Davies of Winnipeg, who handled the previous three games with Ost, will be the other official.

The teams arrived yesterday and it was announced the only change in either line-up will be the absence of Sandy Sandelack, 19-year-old Regina defenceman, who injured his shoulder at Moose Jaw Wednesday, when Regina won 4-2, and will be out for the remainder of the season.

Coach Freddy Metcalfe predicted his Saskatchewan champions will end the series tonight. "We'll go all out to polish them off," he said confidently.

Lethbridge supporters were hopeful, however, that familiar ice would favor the Leafs. Lethbridge showed well on Calgary ice during the Alberta League play this year.

Nearly 800 miners in this Crow's Nest Pass town who stopped work more than a week ago are expected to return Monday.

Sports Writers Pick Reds For Third Title

NEW YORK, April 12 — (AP). — Cincinnati Reds, in the opinion of sports writers in major league cities, are capable of winning their third straight National League pennant this year and taking a place among the leading dynasties in baseball.

All but 14 of the 83 scribes participating in the annual pre-season poll of The Association Press predicted the Reds would finish first, and 13 of the others could see nothing worse than second for them.

With one stray vote cast for the third place, Cincinnati received a total of 649 points on the basis of eight for first, seven for second, six for third, etc.

Twelve of the writers came out for Brooklyn Dodgers to win and the other two stood up for St. Louis Cardinals. But in points Brooklyn received only 51 more than the Redbirds, and it was evident that their chances were considered almost on a par.

Except for Cincinnati's world champions and the last-place Phillies, who were tabbed for the cellar by 80 of the 83 writers, there was a great spread in the balloting with all other clubs receiving tickets for at least five different positions.

Rated on total points, however, the predictions were that the league would line up at the end of the season exactly as it did last year.

The total points received by each club were Cincinnati 649, Brooklyn 558, St. Louis 507, Pittsburgh 390, Chicago 325, New York 268, Boston 203, and Philadelphia 88.

The same writers wound up in a knot trying to pick the American League outcome, finishing in a dead heat between Cleveland Indians and New York Yankees.

Deanna Durbin To Wed Friday

She and her prospective bridegroom studio executive Vaughn Paul 25 disclosed this yesterday when they took out a marriage license.

Because of the number of invited guests, Miss Durbin said, the ceremony next Friday will be at Wilshire Methodist Episcopal Church instead of at the Hollywood home of her parents, as originally planned.

Because of the rainstorm and the couple's early appearance only a few persons observed their visit to the civic centre. Deanna and Vaughn obligingly embraced for the first public pictures of a Durbin kiss.

Deanna hasn't even been given a genuine romantic role in her nine films as a singer, her studio declaring she was too young for love. She and Paul, who met when he was second assistant director on her first picture, "Three Smart Girls," became engaged Dec. 5.

Paul proposed while they were sitting in his automobile in front of her house, Deanna said. He pinned his fraternity pin on her and they were engaged. But today the Winnipeg-born miss showed the cameraman a much more impressive engagement token—a large diamond ring, with half-circles of rubies set in a plain gold band.

"This is my first romance," said Deanna as her fiance, grinning sheepishly, wiped the lipstick from his mouth. "I hope it is going to be my last."

Sold To Detroit

SPORTS — DAY BY DAY

By FRED D. CRAIG

To all intents and purposes the Stanley Cup final series is over with the 4 to 2 win of the Bruins over Detroit on Thursday night. That victory put the Boston team in front in the series 3 games to 0 and although a fourth win is necessary before the round is completed the Red Wings only chance for triumph is to defeat the Bruins four times in a row and that is a feat that can rightly be described as impossible. The only "if" remaining to be settled is whether the Boston power houses will wind the thing up tonight when they meet the Wings in Detroit in the fourth game of the series or whether they will have to wait until Tuesday night's game in Boston to decide the issue. Twelve times have the two teams met since late last season and Detroit has not been able to win one of the dozen games. The thirteen jinx might get in its work tonight to send the series into a fifth game but the odds favor a Boston victory and the end of the season.

* * * * * *

Jack Adams' team made a valiant attempt Thursday night to salvage the series but their effort was not good enough. They turned on everything they had in the first period when Johnny Mowers only stopped one shot as against a dozen for Brimsek and twice took the lead only to have the Bruins tie it in short order and the teams were on even footing with two goals each at the close of the first twenty minutes. Then Milt Schmidt who had sewed up the game in the first period and was Bruins' outstanding performer all night put Boston in front for the first time after one second less than a minute had been played in the second canto and that was the payoff counter. Red Wings were held at bay by Frankie Brimsek and his pals for the rest of the game and Art Jackson made victory for Bruins sure by rapping home a third-period goal to make the final count 4 goals to 2.

* * * * * *

The series has run true to form. Boston, in spite of the loss of Bill Cowley and injuries to Bobby Bauer and Milt Schmidt, ranked as 2 to 1 favorites to take the title and they are living up to those odds by a battling performance against a team that has fought stubbornly and well but lacks the punch to defeat such a well-balanced outfit as the Bruins. Boston may not be as good as Art Ross has claimed them to be but they are a tough, capable scrapping gang of puckchasers who seem to have the faculty of coming through with their best performance in the clutches. Six of the last seven games in which Art Ross's team have been won by the narrow margin of one goal and the Bruins were victorious in all but one of those contests, losing that struggle to the Leafs in overtime. That record tells its own story of steadines and ability to produce a goal when the fate of the game hangs on a single marker. When the going is tough the Bruins arise to the occasion and that after all is the real test of a great club.

Playoffs Too Long

With the contention of Ralph Allen that hockey playoffs are too long we are in hearty agreement. Says the Globe and Mail's sport columnist: "Sure, playoffs are necessary to the amateurs at least. There is no other logical way of deciding the national champions. But long playoffs aren't necessary, and more than that, they are contributing to a state of public mind which, misguided or not, is doing the game permanent harm." We believe that is 100 per cent correct. The fans are souring on these best out of seven series, figuring and figuring rightly that the sole object in arranging such lengthy playoffs is to garner in more gate money. And from that they go on to argue that the series are prolonged unnecessarily by having the stronger club ease up. Personally we do not believe that any of these series have been rigged by throwing games. The explanation is to be found in Allen's statement that "long playoff series, by their very length create a mental attitude among the players that is conducive to unbelievable form reversals." But the point is thousands of fans believe games are fixed and the adoption of long playoffs is responsible for that belief. Eventually it will kill interest in playoffs altogether.

American sports writers who went out on the limb last season and almost unanimously picked the New York Yanks to win the American League have this season divided up their allegiance and have made the Cleveland Indians and the Yanks joint favorites to take it all in the junior loop. Once again the chances of the Detroit Tigers who crossed everybody up last season by grabbing the pennant are almost completely ignored by the men who write sports. Twenty of the scribes as a matter of fact have rated the Tigers as low down the ladder as fourth place, and only two out of 79 name Detroit as pennant winners. Well, the boys were wrong last year and they could be again, especially if Hank Greenberg remains with the Tigers. They still have plenty of power, those Bengals.

* * * * * *

Apparently the sport writers think that once more the Boston Red Sox have failed to discover a pitching staff and for that reason Joe Cronin's powerful club is not even conceded a chance to finish in the first division. Probably the accident to Williams who will be missing from the lineup for weeks with a broken ankle has something to do with the lowly position predicted for the Red Sox. At that the Boston club could easily be the surprise outfit of the loop. They have plenty of oomph at the plate and if it should happen that some of the young pitchers come through as winners the Cronin machine might pull a Detroit stunt on the other clubs and on the scribes. Anyway here is how the newspaper boys have sized up the whole field on a point basis, eight points for first, seven for second etc.: New York 612, Cleveland 611, Detroit 583, Chicago 377, Boston 363, St. Louis 268, Washington 138 and Philadelphia 136.

The Combines Come Through

As expected when the checks were down the Kingston Combines came through with one of their best games last night in Owen Sound and as a result the winners of this group of the senior B group are Ontario champions in their division. The score was 3 to 1 for Kingston who thus took the best of seven series four games to three. Peterborough fans will unite in congratulating the winners on bringing the title to this section of the province. In the first place, as representative of the group in which the Petes were engaged, the Combines naturally carried the best wishes of the hockey enthusiasts of this community. And then Peterborough had some share in the victory in as much as the Petes good right-winger Honey Tompkins played a prominent part in the triumphs of the Kingston team since they entered the Ontario playdowns.

Softball diamonds will have to be laid out all over again this season as the result of the decision of the Ontario Softball Association at its annual meeting at St. Catharines yesterday to move the pitchers box back two feet, making the distance 40 feet and to make the distance between bases 55 feet instead of 50. These moves are stretching out in the direction of hardball dimensions, although of course there is still a long way to go before the two setups will be the same. The changes made yesterday will handicap the pitcher a little by making him throw two feet further but on the other hand the defence will be helped by extending the distance around the bases. The well known Harry Sniderman was elected president and G. Spooner of Galt got the first vice-president's post after six ballots. Dave Leether of Peterborough was returned to the executive and this district will have wideawake representation on the provincial body.

Tuesday evening lowly Brinton team ousted the St. Georges team in the same style, losing the first by 9-6 but coming through the last two games 12-7 and 5-4 in the last game. The losers got the only high score with a two in the first end, the next seven being all singles.

On Wednesday night the Fire Hall gang got into action at the Legion Hall, taking the Sons of England team No. 2 in two straight games 10-3 and 8-6.

Thursday witnessed the final game when the Fire Fighters got to work again only to lose to the lowly Brinton Carpet team. Brinton won the first 7-6. The Fire Hall squad took the second 11-7 but Brinton came back in the third to win the cup by a score of 10-6.

Royals Have Examinations

TORONTO, April 12 — (CP). — Coach Lorne White of the Montreal Junior Royals said today that if the Eastern Junior Hockey final between Royals and Oshawa Generals should go to five games it would be "utterly impossible" for Royals to ice a team for the fifth game if it is played in Toronto.

Under present arrangements, the fifth game, if necessary, will be played here next Wednesday. Royals could end the series tonight with a victory over Generals in the fourth game here. The Montreal club won the first and third games of the series by 7-4 scores, with Oshawa taking the second contest 10-2.

White said that should the fifth game be played here four of his best players would be unable to play as they have to take University examinations next Wednesday afternoon in Montreal. They are: Goalie Ross Ritchie, Defenceman Brice Ward, and Forwards Buddy Farmer and Grant Morrison.

"We think the Royals have been more than fair in playing four games in Toronto," said White. "If the fifth game is necessary we simply will have to play it in Montreal or we won't be able to ice a team."

(George Dudley, President of the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association, said at Midland, Ont., a few days ago that if the series should go the five-game limit it "just possibly may be switched from Toronto to Montreal. He said the matter may be taken up at the association's annual meeting, which will start today in Calgary.)

C.A.H.A. Assets Total $61,277 Hewitt Reports

CALGARY, April 12 — (CP). — Revision of Canadian Amateur Hockey Association regulations providing for replacement of players lost through enlistments and through transfer of men serving with the armed forces will be considered at the annual meeting opening here to-day.

Regulations in force during the last two seasons permitted teams to obtain wartime replacements any time before entering interprovincial playdowns.

It is now proposed to permit replacement of a player lost to a club prior to September 15 only before November 1; a player lost to a club between September 15 and November 1 would have to be replaced within 15 days after the teams play its first C.A.H.A. game; and a player lost after the club enters competition would have to be replaced within 15 days. No replacements would be permitted after the club enters branch playoffs.

CALGARY, April 12— (CP).. — W. A. Hewitt, registrar-treasurer of the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association, said in his annual report to the association's annual meeting here to-day that registrations during the 1940-41 season had declined sharply and estimated that more than 20 per cent of the former playing strength of the C.A.H.A. is now on active service with the Canadian armed forces.

He listed total registrations at 20,751, the lowest figure in a comparative chart showing registrations for the last six years. The total was 4,201 below that of last year. Mr. Hewitt said that many military teams were included in the registrations this year and that the percentage of enlistments was greater than comparative figures would show.

He reported the C.A.H.A. to hve assets of $61,277.78, of which sum $56,971.78 was in a trust fund to "protect th future of the association." Receipts for the year were $23,36.51, with $25,724.63 of that representing the surplus from Allan Cup and Memorial Cup playdowns.

Grants were reported at $14,243.43 including one of $9,000 to provincial branches for promotion of minor hockey; $3,980 subsidies to clubs competing in 1940 playdowns; and bonuses of $500 to each club reaching the Allan or Memorial Cup finals.

In his report he commented briefly on controversy between Sydney and Glace Bay in the Cape Breton Senior League, and said that a telegraphic vote of the C.A.H.A. executive committee had decided that had Glace Bay won the league championship it would have been unable to use Goalie Bill Fraser in interprovincial playoffs. Fraser was substituted after Glace Bay's goalie, Jimmy Foster, was declared ineligible for not obtaining a transfer from the Quebec Amateur Hockey Association.

Registrations by branches: Ontario (O.H.A.), 9,187; Quebec, 4,077; Ottawa and District, 1,972; Manitoba, 1,523; Alberta, 1,275; Saskatchewan, 853; Maritimes, 697; Thunder Bay, 601; British Columbia, 566.

Win Final Game In Owen Sound By Score Of 3-1

OWEN SOUND, April 12.—Kingston Combines are O.H.A. Senior "B" champions of 1941. They defeated the Owen Sound Wreckers in the seventh and deciding game here Friday night by a score of 3 to 1. Inability to count when close in on the nets and the magnificent goal-tending of Burrows for the Combines spelled defeat for the Wreckers, who had much the best of the territorial play. Burrows was the outstanding star of the game, some of his stops being sensational. Lane also starred for the Combines, even though he took a terrific lot of punishment.

Owen Sound scored their only goal of the game in the first period, a solo effort by Tommy Burlington. After that the Wreckers were in time and again on Burrows, but could not get the puck in the net.

Kingston scored twice in the second period: Lane from Radley at 14:20 while playing a man short, and R. Neilson at 19:50 on a pass from Mel Williamson to end the period. At 12:33 in the third period Lane scored his second goal on a neat pass from Hepburn, and although the Wreckers were in on Burrows time and again they failed to count. The game was fast and free from rough work, and was well handled by Mike Rodden and Dal Houston of Toronto.

Kingston—Goal, Burrows; defense, J. Neilson and C. Williamson; centre, M. Williamson; wings, Hepburn and B. Neilson; subs, Radley, White, R. Smith, Lane, Hood, Tompkins.

Owen Sound—Goal, Dunne; defense, Small, Bishop; centre, Burington; wings, B. White and Shears; subs, Bowen, T. White, Williams, F. Smith, King.

Markham Wins Junior Title

TORONTO, April 12. — Markham Aces won the O.H.A. Junior C championship on Friday night by defeating Bolton Flyers 4-2 in overtime at the Gardens. Victory gave Markham the title in three straight games. They won the first two 6-4, 10-5.

Weakened by the absence of Defenceman Bruce Harper, who sustained a badly injured eye in the second game, Charlie Hempstead's Aces had all they could do to turn back the battling Bolton brigade. But a goal by Baker in the sixth minute of overtime proved the deciding factor. Rowe make Markham's victory safe by scoring into an empty net after Goalie Dempster of Bolton had been removed for an extra forward less than a minute from the final bell.

Baker's goal was retribution for a penalty he drew late in the third period and through which Bolton capitalized for the tying goal. Bolton led 1-0 in the first period, but Markaam equalized in the second, and went ahead 2-1 with less than seven minutes to play in the third.

Oshawa Bees Eliminate St. Catharines

ST. CATHARINES, April 12 (Special).—Oshawa Bees eliminated St. Kitt's Masons Saints here last night in the final game of the O.H.A. Junior "B" round robin series when they handed the Garden City team a surprising 12-5 setback. The victory stepped Bees into the finals with Branftord Lions, making the fourth time in five years that Coach Black has placed his Oshawans in the Junior "B" finals.

Saints went out to make it a wide-open game and played more or less into Oshawa hands, as the speedy Bees broke away fast and Saints rarely caught them. Bees also showed brilliant passing plays, combining smartly to the penalty-shot strip and the jockeyed Burrell out of position for the counters. Oshawa led 4-1 and 7-2 by periods.

Play roughened in the second and climaxed with seven minutes to go when a free-for-all broke out. Melville drew a major and misconduct and Art McMullen a major. They joined Davies, McComb and Junior McMullen already benched and the rivals continued with three a side.

Seven of Oshawa's tallies were scored on breakaways, as Saints penned them in for 2-3 of the second and third periods. Galbraith, who had scored two goals all season, paced Bees with five goals last night to win for Oshawa.

Facts gleaned in surveys reveal seventy five per cent of the children suffer defective feet! Why? Because parents do not early enough recognize the symptoms of a coming foot ailment. If the child complains of tired feet, aches or pains in the feet or legs, excessive perspiration or swollen feet—something is wrong! In 9 cases out of 10, the fault lies within incorrect shoes! Check your child's shoes now!

The Peterborough Examiner

VOL. LXXXV, No. 86 — PETERBOROUGH, SATURDAY, APRIL 12, 1941 — PAGE 9

FIVE WILD GEESE

Motorists on the Lakefield-Buckhorn Road report that five wild geese have been feeding in the fields beside the road, and on several occasions motorists have stopped to admire the beautiful creatures. Several flocks of wild ducks have been noticed in the open stretches of water on the river and in Lake Katchawanooka.

AN EARLY START

James Conroy on Armour Road started the ball rolling in garden plowing for the Spring when he plowed up his own garden plot this this week. The ground was in perfect condition for turning and did not appear to be heavy with moisture.

A COMPLAINT

At Thursday night's meeting of the Board of Education a letter was received from a mother complaining about a teacher at one of the schools. The letter was referred to the Supervision committee, on motion of Mrs. Morris and H. G. Walker with power to settle the matter, but Chairman D. G. H. Melton requested that the usual procedure of reporting to the Board be followed.

MAYOR CALLS MEETING

Mayor Hamilton has called a meeting at the City Hall next Wednesday evening, to which he has invited builders, realtors and others interested in the city's housing problem. The council has given some thought already to this question; and frankly wishes to get the advantage of opinions from those citizens who are engaged in the industry.

PIANO TROUBLE

Pianos in the public schools are getting out of tune too soon after being properly adjusted, according to a report tendered the Board of Education at the last meeting. Mr. Wightman said the worst offenders were the pianos at King George and Queen Mary, and that the sounding board in the piano at Queen Mary was cracked. Mr. Wightman was asked to discuss the question with the man who does the piano tuning for the Board and to report back at the next meeting.

THEY MAY BE FINED

Motorists who drive girls and men to work at the Westclox plant and then drive up on the newly sodded section of the King George school property are heading for trouble. The Board of Education were decidedly annoyed when this act of carelessness was reported, and the Police Department will be asked to make a check-up and take vigorous action.

BUSY WEEK

Fire Chief George Gimblett and his men have had one of the busiest weeks on record; no less than 37 alarms have been registered at the department headquarters, and most of them have been due to the careless burning of leaves and rubbish. Chief Gimblett issues a warning that before any grass or rubbish is burned in the city, permission must first be obtained from the Fire Department. Care is also asked by the Chief, on the part of the public; everything is dry now, and a carelessly thrown match or cigarette butt may easily cause a major fire—be careful where you throw your matches.

APPOINTMENT CONFIRMED

The appointment of Miss June Best to the position of stenographer in the secretary's office was confirmed by members of the Board of Education at the meeting on Thursday. Miss Best lives on Elias avenue, and is a graduate of the Commercial Dept., at the Collegiate. She is to start work as soon as possible.

HIGHWAYS BAD

Jack Frost has been up to some of his worst tricks in this part of Ontario during the past week, and due to his efforts, motorists are warned Highways 2, 7-A, and 28 are in bad condition. The best way to Toronto is via the Lindsay Highway, for No. 2 is extremely bad the other side of Whitby.

GRENFELL MISSION.

In spite of heavy calls upon every purse in war time, the local branch of the Grenfell Mission feels sure that a little can be spared for their most important work. Friends in Peterborough are appealed to for help to carry on as usual. Let us not fail the brave men who have left their homes to fight for our security, confident that "The Mission" will stand by their women and children during their absence. Send contributions to treasurer, Mrs. G. R. Langley, 290 Burnham street, or leave at the Examiner.

ON NEW JOB

Friends of Bill Scott, former employee of the Royal Bank, will be interested to learn that he has taken a position with the North American Life Insurance Company. He has been with the bank for the last five years and is well known for his activities in the Y.M.C.A.

NEW GAME

Children in Ashburnham, in the Engleburn section, have invented a new game to take the place of the old tea party play. Now they dress up in tattered clothes, blacken their faces, and knock on their own doors to ask for a "hand-out." Mothers being kind, of course, have also been considerate enough to have a package of sandwiches already done up, and these are taken to some secluded spot and eaten.

$5,000 TOURIST BUDGET.

The South-western Ontario Tourist Association decided this week at a meeting in London to raise $5,000 for advertising tourist attractions or that part of the province including the Blue Water Highway. Part of the money will be used to issue 50,000 booklets to be circulated among prospective American tourists this year.

TWO CARS DAMAGED

No one was injured but two cars were extensively damaged in a traffic accident at McDonnel and Reid streets Friday night. John Hayward, 475 Downie street, was driving south on Reid street with three children in his car and at McDonnel street there was a collision, with another automobile driven east on McDonnel street by Dan. Ryan, 275 Reid street.

START EARLY

At least one farmer in Peterborough County believes in plowing early. R. A. Dobbin, Highway 28, has considerable of his land plowed before Easter, and a neighbor, G. Westman, was seen planting potatoes on Good Friday. Mr. Westman has retained a reputation through the past few years for having the first potatoes on the Peterborough market.

FUNERAL MONDAY

The funeral of the late Minnie Guiry of Downeyville will be held at 9 o'clock on Monday morning from her late residence, 64 Lindsay street south, in Lindsay, to St. Mary's Church. The funeral mass will be celebrated by the Rev. Father Guiry of Port Hope, brother of Miss Guiry. Interment will be at Downeyville Cemetery. The funeral mass starts at 9 o'clock standard time.

Citizens Approve Training Centre Mayor Declares

The citizens of Peterborough welcomed the establishment of a training centre here, Mayor Hamilton told the officers of the Training Centre at their weekly mess dinner at the exhibition grounds Thursday evening. The mayor stated the annual exhibition of which the people of the city and district were proud, had to be sacrificed in order to make the grounds available to the government of Canada to further the country's war effort.

Mayor Hamilton was a guest of Lt.-Col. E. D. Keeler, M.C., V.D., officer commanding the training centre, and the other officers of the centre at dinner. Other dinner guests included Col. J. A. Dewart, M.C., E.D., officer commanding the P.W.R and a group of his senior officers.

The mayor and visiting officers were introduced to the officers of the centre by Major Lorne Johnson, president of the mess. The official welcome to the visitors was extended by Lt.-Col. Keeler. In a brief address Lt.-Col. Keeler spoke of the pleasure it gave him on behalf of his staff of officers to welcome Mayor Hamilton and Col. Dewart and his officers. To Mayor Hamilton, Col. Keeler stated the officers had enjoyed their work in Peterborough and were looking forward to exploring the natural beauty of the city and its environs with the coming of spring and summer weather. The administrative and training staff had arrived in Peterborough last October when the beauty spots of the city were not at their best. The relations between the personnel of the centre and the people of the city had been most cordial during the winter months and he had ever reason to believe these ties would be strengthened as the summer progressed. He invited Mayor Hamilton to avail himself of the privileges of the mess and Col. Keeler stated he hoped in the near future to again have Mayor Hamilton and the city council as guests of the officers of the centre.

To Col. Dewart, and his officers, Col. Keeler extended an invitation to them to visit the mess often. He realized that Col. Dewart and his officers had been busy during the fall and winter months with the training of members of the P.W.R. which of necessity had to be carried out in the evenings. He spoke of the excellent hospitality which had been extended to him and his officers on their recent visit to the mess of the P.W.R. and hoped that these visits would become more frequent.

Col. Dewart in replying to Col. Keeler expressed pleasure at the reception he and his officers had been given during the evening. He reiterated the sentiments of Col. Keeler that visits of the two groups of officers of the training centre would be welcome at any time in the P.W. R. mess at the Armouries.

Mayor Hamilton in replying to Col. Keeler's welcome spoke of the excellent record the city of Peterborough had established in a military way. Officers and men from the city had fought in the South African War and in the Great War, the mayor stated the city had a record that was equal to any city in the Dominion. In the present conflict, said the mayor, Peterborough had made an excellent contribution both in men and money. He was glad of the opportunity to extend an official welcome to the permanent staff of the training centre and stated they would find the residents of the city were willing to co-operate in every way possible to assist in the training of the men and also in making life pleasant for the officers and staff of the centre who were serving away from their homes.

Officers of the P.W.R. who accompanied Col. Dewart on his visit were Major G. Melton, Major R. J. Bolton, Major V. Eastwood, M.C., and Major J. McGrath, M.M.

Marmora Hunter Bags Wolf At Burnt Lake

MARMORA, April 12 (ENS)—He's probably the finest specimen out of the number I have shot in my lifetime, said Sanford Lawrence, who returned to Marmora village on Tuesday from Burnt Lake with the carcase of a wolf which measured approximately six feet from tip to tip.

Sanford knows no territory better than that of Burnt Lake, where about fifteen years ago he made the headlines through bagging five wolves.

He had been back looking over the prospects for trapping as the season should start.

"It was the last day of March" he said, when about 3 o'clock in the afternoon I saw where the carcase of a deer was almost eaten by wolves. I thought I would hang around for a while so I sat down under a bushy pine. I kept looking for signs of any movement and after being there for about 2 hours I thought I heard brush crack. I looked down a small gully where I had noticed the wolves had been travelling all winter and about fifty yards away I saw a wolf approaching. The wind was in my favor so he didn't sense my nearness. I let him come to about twenty-five yards and then fired. I hit him close to the heart and he turned right round. My second shot must have hit the same mark for it finished him."

"Do you know," he continued, "I had to snowshoe part of the way out. There is still about two feet of snow in some places in the woods."

"Now I have another trip to Belleville to collect the bounty" smilingly remarked the happy hunter.

High Class Entertainment Arranged For Army

Entertainment for the troops at the training centre here during the week was featured by many highlights. The entertainment group of the Westclox plant held the stage at the Salvation Army hut on Tuesday night, and one of the most enjoyable evenings since the opening of the centre was enjoyed by a large number of officers and men.

Wednesday evening the troops were treated to a display of physical culture by the girls from the Y.W.C.A. under the supervision of Miss Littlefield. Every number on this program was enthusiastically applauded.

Thursday evening a variety program was presented in the hut by the Central School Chorus under Donald Munro. The youngsters put on a show that was thoroughly enjoyed and the ability displayed promises well for the future.

Friday evening, Good Friday, a community sing song was held, and on Wednesday evening next the A.Y.P.A., of the various Anglican churches of the city will present "High Pressure Homer," a comedy in three acts. On Thursday evening of next week the entertainment will be given by the Park Street Baptist Church group, Adjutant Bamsey announced.

On Sunday, ladies of the Catholic churches of the city will carry out the canteen duties at the centre. In the past various organizations who have assisted in canteen duty include members of the Peterborough Red Cross Society, I.O.D.E., and ladies of St. James' and Knox United churches. The efforts of these ladies have been greatly appreciated by the troops and also by the officers and the members of the Salvation Army hut staff.

City Students Abhor Farm Work Only Rural Dwellers Volunteer

Sixty-five girls and boys practically all from farm homes are trying Easter examinations on the short term plan so that they may help with the farm work at home during the next two months.

This information was conveyed to the Board of Education on Thursday evening by Dr. H. R. H. Kenner, principal of the Collegiate when Alex Donnelly asked if many boys and girls would leave the city to take up farm work in connection with the special plan introduced by the Department of Education.

"The city boys and girls don't seem to be farm conscious," Dr. Kenner said and went on to explain that practically every boy and girl who had volunteered for farm work were from farm homes.

A few boys from the upper grades of the high school are hoping to take jobs in industry at Easter, but Dr. Kenner added that industrialists were not keen to take students for just the summer period as the length of time they would be working would scarcely justify training them as a time such as we are passing through now.

More Soldiers Coming

Mr. Johnson reported to the Board that the class of 42 Engineers taking the electrical course at the Collegiate would finish on Tuesday and would leave for their quarters at Petawawa the following day. He added that a request had come in from Lt.-Col. T. A. Williams of M.D. headquarters, Kingston, asking if another class might be accommodated. There was also a request for training facilities to take care of 20 fitters, and motor mechanics.

He was given authority by the Board to undertake this work, when he explained that it could be done without any disruption of existing classes. The two classes will arrive here on April 28, and will probably take a three months course.

H. G. Walker, J. E. Huggins, the secretary and a member of the Advisory Vocational committee were delegated to attend the Urban School trustees convention at Owen Sound, when a resolution dealing with fire insurance rates for schools will be discussed.

Mr. Wightman reported that a safety club was being formed at Central School by R. J. Bolton under the sponsorship of the Lions Club, and said the plan was a good one, and sought the Board's approval. On motion of Mrs. Morris and Alex Sollitt it was decided that a letter be sent to the Lions Club commending them for this worthwhile venture in service work.

MANY HOME ON LEAVE

A considerable contingent of Peterborough soldiers, members of the Stormont, Dundas and Glengarry Highlanders, the 4th Anti-Tank Battery and the Engineers arrived home on leave this morning from Debert Camp, reaching Port Hope on a special train at 6 o'clock this morning.

Special Services Marking Easter

All the churches of Peterborough have completed preparations for the commemoration on Sunday of the great Christian festival of the miracle of Easter.

Special service are announced for all the churches sounding to the people of faith and goodwill the profoundly hopeful message of the Resurrection following the sacrifice of Calvary and the agony of Jesus in the garden of Gethsemane.

Large congregations are expected for this Easter Sunday. Good Friday was solemnly celebrated by all faiths with a special union communion service at St. Andrew's Church in the morning. News from England reported religious recognition of Good Friday as usual in those churches which escaped German bombs.

The Easter services in Peterborough will begin with the Low Mass at the Church of the Sacred Heart for men engaged in necessary and essential work. Others who wish to do so may attend that Mass, but it was recently added to the Sunday lists for the accommodation of workers.

Cycling for pleasure is just developing in Colombia.

Reports Highlanders In Good Spirits

Lt.-Col. R. T. E. Hicks-Lyne, officer commanding the Dundas, Stormont and Glengarry Highlanders, arrived home early this morning from the big military camp at Debert, N.S., on an Easter leave until Tuesday.

"All the men of the battalion are in good spirits," he told the Examiner. "Spring has come to Nova Scotia, and we have had some fine sunny days, and we have all enjoyed them."

Quite a number of Ontario men came up from Debert, some of them by special train during the night. Captain Ross Hood and Lieutenant James Gillespie were officers who got permission to come home, and others were five or six members of the pipers band.

To Hear Father

ONE of the English boys temporarily in Canada who will hear Easter greetings from their parents by radio on Sunday is Clifford Roydhouse, fourteen, of Hull, England, who is a war time guest of Mr. and Mrs. George F. Jackson 177 Dublin street.

Clifford was out with the Boy Scouts when the cabled notice came on Friday advising him that his father would speak to him from the Old Land on Easter Sunday. He has been in Canada since last August, has become quite a Canadian in the meantime, but is eagerly waiting to hear his "Dad" on the air Sunday morning, with a rebroadcast about 1 p.m.

"My wife is a sister of his uncle," Mr. Jackson said, indicating Clifford's relation to the family by marriage.

"He came to us about the end of August or the first part of September, and has escaped the bombing of Hull," Mr. Jackson added.

City Children Assisting War Victims

Trinity United Church Young People's Club handed $25.00 over to the British War Victims' Fund at the Examiner office today and plan to stage a repeat performance of the play, "Here Comes Patricia" in the near future.

Mrs. Mary Windren, an energetic member of the Mount Pleasant Women's Institute, Group 3, made and donated a quilt to the Peterborough fund. Campbellford Veteran Of The Fenian Raids Recalls Trip To St. Catharines

CAMPBELLFORD, April 12 — (ENS)—One of the last veterans of the Fenian Raids is now living in this town less than 40 miles from the home where his father, a rugged Scot settled a century ago. George Temple is a Canadian, though by a strange coincidence he was born in the United States where his mother had gone to pay a brief visit to a sister in Elmira, New York.

Now in his ninety-fourth year, Mr. Temple ranks not only as the town's oldest citizen but also the only living veteran of the Fenian Raids of 1866. He was a rangy youth of 17 when he first joined the No. 1 Company of the old 40th Battalion back in 1865 and was still not 18 when he went with his unit to St. Catharines to repel the invasion which later had turned out to be little more than a skirmish.

Did Not See Any Action

Now Mr. Temple, slightly stooped and with graying hair has nothing more than a deafness in his left ear to mark his age and this early campaign. The fact is that his unit didn't see any action after they were called out but strangely enough he was shot before returning and it was this that left him partially deaf.

It was no stray bullet that ripped into his temple just below the ear but instead the well-aimed shot of one of his comrades that got him. According to his recollection of the time he was standing, talking to a group of men when suddenly there was the report of a gun and to use his own words: "I was knocked senseless".

The old muzzle loader which was standard equipment in those days, was aimed by Pte. Chas. Bonnycastle who had loaded it was a wad of paper he had chewed into a hard ball then put it into the gun and fired. "He wasn't ten feet away from me when he fired."

Went With Brother

"How did you happen to join the army," we ventured to the veteran whose strong voice and scarcely wrinkled skin belies his years. "My older brother Peter, joined the company so I volunteered so I could be with him. We used to go to Cobourg and Kingston for drill and travelled by stage coach but when we went to St. Catharines at the time of the Fenians we got a boat at Brighton and this took us up the lake. It was a side wheeler and it took three days to get there. I think we left on a Saturday and arrived the following Monday at St. Catharines."

"Do you recall the names of some of the officers in your company?"

"There was a Captain Tice in charge. I don't remember his first name. Then there was Lieut. Hugh O'Neill, Sgt. Frank Shea, a Sergeant Taylor and Sergeant (later Captain) Richard Bonnycastle."

Taking everything into consideration, life in the army back in 1866 was not so bad, except in the matter of weapons and transportation in the opinion of Mr. Temple. Of the food, he declared there was always plenty in camp with beef being the principal meat along with an adequate diet of vegetables and soup. "We were paid either 50 or 60 cents a day and got a free ride to and from camp by train, which was quite a novelty in those days."

Though Mr. Temple was born on this continent, four of his brothers were born in Dumphreyshire, Scotland and while the family lived on their farm near Grafton, the two youngest children were born to Mr. and Mrs. John Temple, but the hard work of clearing a farm proved too much for the senior Temple who died while George was a lad of four, the youngest boy in the family. Following his death the family moved to Campbellford where the younger children went to school. There were 32 buildings in the town.

George Temple, 94-year-old veteran of the Fenian raids and resident of Campbellford is shown above wearing the special medal presented about three quarters of a century ago by the Dominion Government to the Canadians who volunteered and served in this battle.

By the time he was 16, George Temple decided he wanted to be a carpenter and began his apprenticeship with the late William Dunk, this was briefly interrupted when he went with his Company in 1866.

Recognized By Government

He recalls that it was not until 1900 that this action was recognized by the government, which then had silver medals struck for these veterans who were each sent one along with a cheque for $100.00. The medals bear the picture of Queen Victoria on side and engraved around the edge of the coin is the veterans name and the date of the action. The provincial government also made its contribution by giving each veteran a section of land. Mr. Temple's 160 acres was in the Rainy River district and he deeded the property which he never saw to his daughter three years ago.

By the time Campbellford was experiencing its first building boom Mr. Temple was a carpenter of the first order. He was employed on the contruction of the Methodist and Presbyterian churches and also on the Ferris Block and was a foreman in charge of building the old Windsor Hotel, Wallace Block and Smith Block all of which stand as monuments to the towns early growth. He also worked on some 50 dwellings in the town getting in those days, from $1.25 to $1.50 for a 10-hour days, then the standard rate.

Twice married, Mr. Temple's first wife was Jane Kieth, whom he wed at the age of 23. She died seven years later after bearing him three daughters, two of whom are still living—Mrs. Jennie Davidson of Coldwater, Mich. and Mrs. Thomas Peake of Campbellford at whose home he resides. He married a second time to Amanda Clark, who also predeceased him.

Though he lived in this town for nearly three-quarters of a century he never took any part in municipal life. He did however join the Masonic order 51 years ago and has been an Orangeman for nearly 71 years. He does not attribute his long life to any particular reason other than that he has been temperate and regular in his habits. He admits having first starting to smoke a pipe when he was 14 but declares he later abandoned the habit in favor of chewing. However for the past two years he has given up all form of tobacco.

In sound health he frequently walks down town and is planning to help with the garden during the coming summer, however, he spent most of the winter in reading and listening to the radio, and though he makes no claim to being an arm chair critic he expects to live to see the fall of Hitler.

Britons Can Yet Turn Tables In Balkan Scene

WASHINGTON, April 12.—German blows rained on Greece and Yugoslavia with stunning speed and devastating effect have ominously changed the war trends in the Balkans.

Even before the British force in Greece had come in contact with its Nazi foe, London appeared to have some apprehension over its fate. Again, as in Norway and Flanders, the battle seemed all but lost before the British forces could come to grips with the enemy.

Even before Salonika fell, Berlin commentators claimed that the British troops were preparing to re-embark from Greek ports on the Aegean.

That still seems wholly improbable. Difficult as the situation is for the British Army, there are circumstances that might be exploitable.

Its line of deployment, mentioned only as south and southwest of fallen Salonika, is in defensible mountainous terrain west of the Vardar River. It covers presumably rail and river valley routes such as Monastir Pass through which contact with Yugoslavian troops in the southwestern mountain area of Yugoslavia is still possible.

Might Turn Tables

And from that British line, which may reach the Aegean coast fairly close to Salonika, a heavy British striking force conceivably could turn the tables on the Nazi light column which speared its way to Salonika. German communications to support it are no less exposed than were those of Greek troops on the Struma front and along the Metaxas line.

This possibility and the British occupation of Massaua, main Italian port in Eritrea, are almost the only relieving features of the war news from the British viewpoint. Prime Minister Churchill's refusal to disclose to Parliament the actual whereabouts of the British Army in Greece or its present mission might mean that he expects an early offensive movement rather than a withdrawal from Greece.

The crucial German breakthrough into the Lower Vardar Valley to jab a fast-paced column into Salonika was made possible by a Yugoslavian withdrawal (as yet unexplained) on the left flank of the Greek Struma front. A Berlin claim of wholesale Greek surrenders eastward of the break-through should be accepted with caution until British army dispositions become known. That Yugoslavian retirement, however, could prove an irreparable blow.

Nor is there any concealing the gravity of the situation for Britain in other than military ways. Virtually at a stroke the German Balkan attack has ended the possibility of an early Italian collapse.

It would be a miracle if a junction of German and Italian troops at the Yugoslavian-Albanian border were not accomplished. They may already be in contact, stiffening Italian forces in Albania incalculably.

German claims of wholesale Greek surrenders east of the Vardar hint at Greek wavering under smashing Nazi blows. The situation in Yugoslavia is far from clear but a majority of her armies are probably already cut off from contact with the British-Greek allies in the south. What the ultimate effect of these disasters may be in Greece and Yugoslavia is beyond conjecture.

There seems little in the situation in the Balkans to encourage hope of either Russian or Turkish intervention.

The fall of Massaua probably means early release of British forces in East Africa in substantial numbers for use elsewhere. Whether in Libya, to help stem the German-Italian counter-attack, or in Greece depends on major British strategic purposes yet to be revealed. There is small doubt, however, that the British success in virtually clearing Italian forces from the Red Sea approaches to the Suez Canal opens a wide avenue for increasing the flow of both Empire and American help for British or Balkan nations resisting Germany.

US Moves To Buy Danish Ships But Danes Say No

WASHINGTON, April 12—(AP)—United States acquisition of 39 Danish cargo ships was expected to be asked of Congress by President Roosevelt today, presumably as a move toward strengthening Britain's Atlantic convoys.

Speedy congressional authorization was anticipated by the admmistration. Once it is given, Mr. Roosevelt may charter or purchase the vessels from the controlling Danish interests which have had them in American ports since Germany moved into Denmark a year ago.

Informed persons believed that soon thereafter the President either would make the ships available to Britain to transport American war supplies across the Atlantic or else would turn over to Britain a similar amount of American ships.

The latter method was considered a possibility because if the vessels were chartered it might not be legally possible to place them in service under a foreign flag. The Danish ships aggregate more than 300,000 tons.

Other efforts to put more than 100 vessels now lying idle in American ports back on the high seas were expected within the next few weeks.

Among these are 28 Italian and two German ships which, like the Danish vessels, were taken into protective custody by the Coast Guard recently because of sabotage by their crews or fears that sabotage would be undertaken.

As for the Danish transfer, the President has said it had the acquiescence of the Danish minister to the United States. However, the foreign office at Copenhagen said today it had instructed the minister to advise the United States not to sell or lease them. The legation here would not comment on this word from Denmark.

The president directed attention also in his message to the fact that an inability to remove materials piling up in ports could result in stopping production, with a consequent effect on employment and on contracts.

It is essential, both in the defence and domestic economy, the President declared, that "we shall not permit the continuance of the immobilization in our harbors of shipping facilities."

Yukon Resident Addresses Mission Circle

HASTINGS, April 11.—(ENS)—In an inspiring address given at the monthly meeting of Trinity United Church Mission Circle, held on Tuesday evening, at the home of Miss D. Plant with Miss Jessie Lamb as hostess, Mrs. A. C. McCullum, wife of Rev. A. C. McCullum, rector of St. George's, Hastings, and formerly of the Yukon, told of the mission work in the diocese of the Yukon. She made particular references of the true devotions of the Indians in the far north by explaining how they often attended prayer services with an attendance of 100 per cent at 2 or 3 o'clock in the morning. Their habits and customs, especially at weddings proved most interesting.

The meeting opened with the worship period by Miss Carrie Doxsee, who led in a brief discussion bearing on the theme "The Cross." Miss Claudine Hoard gave the scripture reading of the "Easter Story." Miss Mae Huycke gave an Easter solo and Mrs. C. Baker and Mrs. E. Hess an Easter duet. Mrs. Arthur Orr gave an account of the meaning of Easter after which the worship period was closed by prayer by Mrs. C. Oliver.

Tea Is Planned

Miss Margery Scriver then took the chair for the business period when plans were made to hold an afternoon tea at the home of Mrs. C. M. Baker on April 22. The following are a committee in charge: Menu, Mrs. A. Orr, Mrs. C. M. Baker and Mrs. Hubble; table, Mrs. W. Dodd and Mrs. E Hess; program, Mrs. J. E. Glover, Miss Jessie Lamb and Miss C. Doxsee.

A complete and beautifully made baby's layette to be donated to the Red Cross and made by the members was then displayed.

The program which followed, included a playette on "Stewardship" by Mrs. A. Orr and Mrs. Iden Bonds and an account of the study book by Mrs. Hubbel assisted by four members.

The main feature of the program was in the form of a shower in the form of a treasure hunt for Miss Claudine Hoard, a bride-elect of Saturday, April 12, who has been a popular and efficient member of the Mission Circle, the church, Sunday School and choir and has always given of her time and talent whenever possible.

Bride Honored

The bride-to-be was asked to take her place beneath a large white parasol from which streamers were attached from each spoke. At the end of the stream bows appeared, containing a verse. Following an appropriate address, read by Miss Margery Scriver in which she voiced their appreciation of Miss Hoard's worth, the honored guest was asked to read the verse and then guess what it represented. A complete set of cream and red kitchen gadgets were then displayed as the gifts from the wrapped parcels.

Two Dynamite Boats Will Be Launched Soon

Canadian-built vessels may now be among the fleet of ships thrown into the battle against the Nazi submarines. TOP is a "Fairmile" submarine chaser of the type now being built in a Toronto shipyard. Rugged, seaworthy, fit for service in any weather, are the two 112-foot submarine hunters now nearing completion (BOTTOM). They will be launched soon, and followed by others during the summer. Some will go to Britain, others will remain in Canada as patrol vessels. Each ship carries 20 depth charges, a three-pounder gun and other undisclosed armament. J. J. Taylor, 75-year-old Canadian shipbuilder, is directing the construction.

Fears Sabotage For U.S. Power

CHICAGO, April 12—(AP).—Maj. Charles W. Leihy of Chicago declared today that "should hostilities develop" sabotage could be expected in vulnerable portions of the United States' electric power system and would be "more dreaded than bombing."

The Major, a field artillery officer and the editor of "Electric Light and Power," suggested in a paper prepared for the Midwest power conference that the power industry consider sabotage-combatting measures.

He said portable sub-stations, large in capacity but small in physical size, could be mounted on trailers, barges or flat cars for quick transportation to trouble spots. Standardized equipment, particularly turbines and diesels, would facilitate rapid replacement of damaged or destroyed units, he said.

Carters' Stand Is Recalled

William Lundy recalled to the Examiner this morning a community practice that has been long forgotten,—the carters' stand on Simcoe street, on the south side west of George street, along the Kresge store.

"I am not sure whether we had telephones then," he said, "but any way they were comparatively few. Most people didn't have them, and when anybody wanted to engage a carter they went up to the "stand" at Simcoe and George streets. I think that was a common practice at that time, because I can remember when I used to go to Toronto there would be a long line of carters at Queen and Victoria streets. So it was not just a local custom. Strange how things change. In a few years, I suppose, there will be nobody in Peterborough who will know anything about the carters' stand."

The next meeting is at the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. S. Kidd. Delegates were appointed to go to Spring convention.

Silk Stockings Swinging Artificial Fast

OTTAWA, April 12 (CP).—Widespread changeover from all-silk stockings to a variety of combinations and artificial silk is expected to be made by manufacturers within the next few months, bringing a pinch of war to Canadian women.

Reports from the Canadian Manufacturers Association, textile journals, the Dominion Bureau of Statistics and retail distributors indicate that for a time at least the quantity, color and variety of stockings may be limited.

Distributors here said their stocks of all-silk hose are beginning to run low and that new shipments from some manufacturers were bringing in stockings which show the limitations imposed by the exchange conservation act passed by parliament last December.

Under the act silk imports were reduced to 75 per cent of normal March 1 this year, and will be reduced to 50 per cent June 1. The new stockings have lisle or other substitutes for silk in feet and tops, but have a good stretch of silk remaining in the leg.

But an official of the C.M.A. said: "Tops and bottoms are getting closer and closer together—in fact, they will be squeezing the silk right off the girls' legs."

Most factories, officials said, are trying combinations of real silk with artificial fabrics. The use of a viscose yarn which can be entirely produced from Canadian wood-pulp is being tried.

Colored stockings made of fine cotton now are being shown in shops throughout Canada. They are of all-Canadian manufacture.

Egyptian cotton, manufactured into fine lisle in England and turned into colored stockings, is expected in Canada during the summer.

Oratorical Champion At Campbellford

CAMPBELLFORD, April 11.—(ENS)—An Easter pageant with a cast of five formed one of the features of this week's meeting of St. John's Y.P.U. which met on Monday evening while other numbers in keeping with the season were contributed by Miss Grace Payne who offered a talk on "Good Friday and Its Meaning" and Doris Mason read an Easter story. President Len. Smith opened the meeting and Betty Blake and Mazo Archer assisted with the call to worship.

Members enthusiastically received the talk by Gordon Jacobs, district oratorical champion who next week will contest the provincial title when he speaks at Convocation Hall, University of Toronto. The young champion spoke before the young people on "How I Can Assist In Our Empire's War Effort."

Those who took part in the Easter pageant were Mrs. A. G. Watson, Miss Nellie Hoover, Mrs. Doris Potts, Edna Cochrane, Ruth Holmes. Following a short business period conducted by the president the meeting closed.

Ontario Makes Numerous Changes In Acts

TORONTO, April 12 — (CP). — Legislation enacted during the present session of the Ontario Legislature included the following: A change was made in the Securities Act to permit the setting-up of a board of review to hear appeals from the Securities Commission's decisions and allowing the Board's rulings to be taken to the court of appeal.

The Magistrate's Act was amended whereby a magistrate cannot be removed after two years' service unless for misconduct as determined by a Supreme Court Judge. The retiring age for future appointees to the bench was set at 70, with provisions enabling the Lieutenant-Governor-in-Council to continue a magistrate in office after he reaches that age if his services are necessary.

A revision of the Highway Traffic Act makes suspension of a driver's licence automatic upon conviction of reckless driving, regardless of whether personal injury or property damage has occurred.

The Devolution of Estates Act was amended to give the widow of a man dying intestate priority rights on the first $5,000 of her husband's property and two-thirds of the residue. Under the old law the widow received only the first $1,000 and one-half of the remainder.

Eventual abolition of Court Criers is the object of an amendment to the Sheriff's Act which provides that upon the death or retirement of one, no new appointment will be made, the duties being assigned to the clerk or registrar of the court.

The Ontario Milk Control Board, during discussion of an amendment to the Milk Act, was criticized vigorously by urban members of both parties for its "arbitrary" rulings. Agriculture Minister P. M. Dewan defended the board and declared it was enforcing admirably "a most contentious piece of legislation." The amendment permits a municipality to send a representative to the board to participate in any deliberations concerning price increases in the municipality in question.

Conservative members opposed the transfer of the Ontario Agricultural College Buildings to the Defence Department for the training of air-force wireless operators, claiming other institutions should be utilized instead of the continent's major agricultural school. However, the Government explained later that classes would be continued, but the students would have to be billeted in Guelph.

The Government's bill to place women on juries was dropped when Liberal members from the rural constituencies opposed it. Because of the opposition that developed, it never was called for second reading.

Of the many lighter incidents during the deliberations there were two outstanding. Hon. James H. Clark, the Speaker, admitted he had been under the delusion for years that his home town of Ingersoll had the honor of manufacturing the biggest cheese. The honor, he admitted after the matter had been introduced by George Doucett(Con., Lanark) belonged to Perth which in 1893 manufactured a 22,000-pound cheese—more than three times the size of Ingersoll's best.

The other touch of humor came when Hon. T. B. McQuesten, bachelor Minister of Highways, revealed he changed the name of Honeymoon Bridge at Niagara Falls to Rainbow Bridge, because former didn't "appeal" to him.

Tax Roll Returned To Seymour Council

CAMPBELLFORD, April 12. — (ENS). — Members of Seymour Township Council voted to renew their liability insurance policy with J. P. Archer who drew the matter to their attention at the regular session on Monday. Reeve W. J. Ross presided for the meeting.

Tax Collector William Fisher turned over his roll to Council together with a statement of collections and unpaid taxes which revealed that a large portion of the $3,974 in unpaid taxes indicated in February had been cleaned up. The monthly report of the school attendance officer G. W. Anderson was also presented and filed.

The secretary read a communication requesting information regarding ownership of a pavilion at Trent River and this was turned over to the township solicitor.

On motion of Deputy-Reeve Rowe and Councillor Wight the following acounts were passed:

G. W. Anderson, school attendance officer, $5.50; D. T. Petherick, road superintendent, $5.95; John Bennett, labor, $2.04; John Kelly, labor, $2.30; Ernest Fairman, labor, $2.07; Counties Treasurer, charity, $7.88; Campbelford Herald, printing, $8.50; W. Stephens, stationery, postage, etc., $123.24; K. B. Ferris, rent, $15.00; Bell Telephone account, $5.50; Belleville General Hospital, Department of Health, $6.00; Municipal World, supplies, $6.91; G. J. Pickens, S.S. No. 12, $100.00; R. Young, relief account, $3.00; W. W. Clarke & Son, $6.90; A. Milne, relief account, $8.78; Municipality of Smith's Falls, relief account, $2.27; Town of Campbellford, relief account, $5.53; George O'Sullivan, relief account, $12.50; William Fisher, supplies, $17.57.

Norwood Ladies Study Life Of John Buchan

NORWOOD, April 11.—(ENS)—The Norwood Reading Club held its monthly meeting at the home of Mrs. E. P. Cuffe on Tuesday evening with a good attendance.

Mrs. Roxburgh gave the paper for the evening based on John Buchan's book, "Memory Hold the Door," this book being the biography of his life.

"His early life was spent in the borderland country, and he was the eldest of five children, four boys and one girl. His father was a Presbyterian minister, something of a poet, with a remarkable memory. He was a minister of the old school, with no idea of compromise and with a firm conviction that the "majority were always wrong." For 40 years he labored giving a simple and complete gospel yet always looking on life as a very hard fight, deferring to no one except the poor and the young. He was rather impracticle with character of "Mary" whilst the mother (who was married at the age of 17) was the "Martha" and undertook the entire management of the house as well as a great many church duties. She had just two passions, her home and her church, and rarely spoke of anything else during the first half of her life. At middle age she suffered a severe illness, but recovered and lived to the age of 81. The latter 20 years of her life were perhaps more enjoyed as she began to travel more and take a deep interest in literature.

As for John himself, as well all know he was a man of wide culture, brought up under the influence of the true, but not stern Calvanistic rule. As a child he had a vivid imagination, and linked the stories in the Bible, John Bunyan and stories of history, with nature and the scenery around him, and this he made the foundation of a great deal of his most interesting play. He tells us from the book, "The Holy War" he gained his first idea of military strategy, although he is sure that such a thing never entered the author's head. From the seacoast vilage of Dysart, which was near his home, he learned from the sailors the art of carving little boats and heard from them their stories of adventure in strange lands, and saw their souvenirs gathered from the four corners of the earth.

Another sources of delight to him was visiting his grandmother's farm. The woods, beaches and hills made a deep impression on him which lasted throughout his life, when a little older he spent his holidays by taking walking tours all over his beloved Scotland.

His education consisted of Dame School, Board School, High School and eventually university. He makes no claim to excellence in school work, but read all kinds of literature. At first it was mere unconscious absorption, but at university he became very diligent, and he kept up a conscientious study right to the eve of the Great War. During this time he tried to cultivate the art of writing, although he decided that literature was to be a hobby, and a lawyer his profession.

In his early years he was a very patriotic Scotchman, even England a place which had very little place in his thoughts, but at University of Oxford the great charm of the place held him in a spell to which he ever remained loyal. After graduation from Oxford he was "Articled" to a Lawyer in London, and supplemented his income with his writing.

In 1901 he went to South Africa to work with Lord Milner, whom he describes as a great character, beloved by all. His first work there was to take over the camp of the wives and children for the government in South Africa and to settle them back on the farms. This he tells us was a very exacting piece of work, but he labored there for three years, and seems to have wished that it might have continued, but he was not permitted to continue after the death of Lord Milner and for a time this caused him great unhappiness.

In the year 1907 he married, and he says "he no longer wished to go alone to the ends of the earth, for England now held all he needed, and he really began to know it, and its people for the first time. For ten years afrte this he was associated with the Nelson Publishing Company, then went into politics, for the reason of obtaining reforms which he felt to be so much needed. He was an ardent admirer of Balfour. During the war he served in the intelligence office and as a war correspondent, owing to ill health he was unable to take a more active part. In 1919 he moved back to the country and bought a home at Elsfield. Here he wrote all kind of books, romantic and serious novels, also historical ones.

He was privileged to know many very fine men, some of whom he mentions particularly, Lawrence of Arabia, Earl Grey, Lord French, Earl Haig, Ramsay McDonald.

At the conclusion of the paper a hearty vote of thanks was tendered Mrs. Roxburgh for the extremely interesting subject, and the time spent in preparing it. A general discussion followed. Lunch was served by the hostess, Mrs. Perrin Rork.

Zetta Nixon Is Married In Emmanuel College Chapel

Tall Ionic columns of Easter lilies with a centre standard of cathedral candles formed a lovely setting for the marriage of Zetta Eleanor Nixon, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Arthur Nixon, Lakefield, to Lieutenant Stanley Frederick Sharpe, Dufferin and Haldimand Rifles of Canada, only son of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Frederick Sharpe, St. Thomas, Ontario. Reverend William C. MacLeod performed the ceremony, which took place at four o'clock in Emmauel College Chapel, Toronto, and Mr. Edward Gray played the wedding music.

The bride, given in marriage by he father, wore a becoming gown of mist blue, with insertions of matching ribbon in the bodice, the skirt shirred in graceful young lines. Her hat was a navy blue felt with underfacing of mist blue, and her accessories were navy. She carried a plumage bouquet of Calla lilies with centre of myositis. Mrs. Ernest F. Legon of Ottawa, attended her sister as matron of honor. She wore a redingote of navy sheer, the full-length coat flaring from the waist, and matching hat accented with white trim. Her corsage was of longiflorum lilies centred with forget-me-nots. The bridegroom was attended by his cousin, Mr. Neil Suhring, Sarnia, Ont. Mr. Ernest F. Legon of Ottawa, and Mr. Reginald Button of Stouffville, were ushers.

WE . . . NOTICED

. . . That Richard Llewellyn in "London Calling," tells us that strange as it may seem, in these days of blitz and Fritz, women are still looking in their handbags for a dab of powder.

. . . What we lived about his comment was that he was commending the girls for not having shiny noses even in a crisis. Girls on the Auxiliaries, he tells us, before all the excitement has died away, have their compacts out ready to do any repair work on their complexions.

. . . He thinks it is no worse than men wanting to shave because it improves their looks. We quite agree with him, since we women have to stick together.

"The Crucifixion" Heard In Two City Churches

"The Crucifixion," a meditation on the passion of Jesus Christ, the best-loved and most familiar of all Lenten Cantatas, was presented in two Peterborough churches Friday evening. The combined choirs of Mark Street United church and Park Street Baptist church handled the presentation with professional skill at Mark Street church, with Miss Isobel Duthie and Mr. George Coleman as guest soloists, and the Northrop String Ensemble, with Miss Elva Throop at the piano, supplying an impressive musical background. Mr. Harry Northrop conducted the choir, and Mr. Stanley Northrop was at the organ.

At All Saints' church the story of the Saviour's last days on earth, with all its glory and heart-breaking pathos, was unfolded in solemn and beautiful melody by a well-trained choir under the direction of Mr. George E. Chandler, accompanied by the organist, Mrs. W. A. Logan, with Mrs. Percy Hooper assisting with the violin. Soloists were Mr. T. H. Boddy (bass); Mr. James Howard (bass); Mr. Thomas Pitchford (bass); Mr. Douglas Weir (tenor); Mr. George E. Chandler (tenor). Mrs. A. Watkins, contralto, was heard in the solo "He was Despised" from the Messiah.

The infinite pathos of the Garden of Gethsemane, the sudden appearance of the hostile crowd, Jesus forsaken by his disciples, His utter loneliness among ruthless foes, the passage of the cross, and the tragedy and triumph of Calvary, is depicted in this dramatic narrative.

"The Crucifixion, a Meditation on the Sacred Passion of the Holy Redeemer" is the full name of the cantata, which was written during the years between 1872 and 1886, when Sir John Stainer was organist in St. Paul's Cathedral, London.

Stainer was a shining example of the foundation of sound musical knowledge which may be obtained from the various duties of a clever chorister in one of the cathedrals of the old land. His compositions also include the orator's "Gideon"; "Daughter of Jairus" and "St. Mary Magdalene."

THE ALL-DAY ENSEMBLE

By ALICE ALDEN

THE little dark frock splashed with white and dressed up with its own little packet returns each year. No wardrobe is complete without one of these practical favorites. The model above is one of the newest versions. It is made of sheer crepe of Celanese rayon and wool woven with a fine Bedford cord or pique effect in its texture. This is a fabric that is nice for sports things as well. Groups of tucks lend interest to the skirt, while the white-buttoned bodice has a collar of sheer white appliqued with white pique.

THE STARS SAY . . .

By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

For Sunday, April 13.

SUNDAY'S horoscope holds testimonies of some very active and important happenings of a public, community or philanthropic nature. All church and charitable activities may be under high stimuli, but these may suffer minor delays and peculiar perplexities, especially in relation to writings or contracts. It would be well to shun extravagance, excess and possibly litigation.

Those whose birthday it is may have a year of some progress and success in public affairs, or in group or community objectives, although this advantage may have delays, disappointments and the menace of duplicity, litigation and loss. Extravagance and indulgence may be regrettable. Sign papers cautiously.

A child born on this day may be active, ambitious and devoted to the public welfare and collective prosperity, although it may have fluctuating personal fortunes.

For Monday, April 14.

MONDAY'S astrological forecast is for a day of unusual liveliness and activity, although the sudden precipitation of events may call for the utmost skill and discrimination to prevent unexpected upheavals and disruptions. Such striking adventures may concern the emotional, romantic or artistic life, which could be thrilling and lucrative if discreetly managed.

Those whose birthday it is may be prepared for a year of the sudden and unpredictable, with matters moving at thrilling pitch in both private and public affiliations. It is probable that the romantic, emotional or creative faculties are pitched to high tempo and call for much discernment and clever management.

A child born on this day should be talented, public-spirited, have unusual talents and creative ability. Also a strange urge for romance and adventure.

SMART SIMPLICITY

By ALICE ALDEN

MAGNIFICENT fabrics, deftly cut and simply styled with emphasis on line is a formula that always works in the world of fashion. It is one that is favored by the best designers who do not go in for much trimming or extraneous detail. Charles James shows this style secret at its best in this beautiful evening frock fashioned of navy blue taffet. The fitted bodice is gathered over the bosom and slim bands of the fabric make a halter neckline, cut in a very low V in back. The dress features a full, circular skirt.

HEALTH PROBLEMS

By DR. L. A. CLARK, Peterborough M.O.H.

By DR. L. A. CLARKE,
Acting Medical Officer of Health

During the past week or 10 days we have had occasion to do a number of skin tests on various people who have been in contact with tuberculosis and scarlet fever, and on some school children, to see whether or not they were immune to diphtheria as a result of their toxoid inoculations. Since there seems to be a good deal of confusion with regard to the method and purpose of these tests we thought that a little explanation might be in order.

Dr. Clarke

The materials used in these tests are, of course, different for each disease. The purpose of the test is to ascertain in the case of diphtheria and scarlet fever whether or not the individual is immune to the respective disease and in the case of the tuberculin test, to find out whether the person has been in contact with tuberculosis.

The method of administration is to inject what amounts to a large drop of the material that is being used between the layer (not under) of the skin of the forearm.

We will deal with the Tuberculin test first. This test is read in between 36 and 48 hours and any swelling or redness measuring ¼-inch or over is considered positive. Doubtful cases are re-tested with a stronger solution. This test is accepted as a aid in the diagnosis of tuberculosis. A red reaction indicates that the individual has had a previous infection with the tubercle bacillus. The infection may have occurred years ago or may be of recent origin. It does not mean that the person has tuberculosis. It means that at some time or another the person has been in contact with the disease and if the contact has been fairly recent as in the case of a person who has been living in the same house or working in the same factory with a person who has tuberculosis, x-rays of the chest should then be taken and repeated if necessary at suitable intervals to rule out the possibility of the positive reactor having active tuberculosis.

The Dick Test is used to ascertain whether or not a person will take scarlet fever if exposed to it. If the person is a positive reactor, as indicated by any degree of redenning about ½ inch or over in diameter at the site of injection, this means that the individual will take scarlet fever if exposed to it. If there is no redenning, the chances are very strongly against the individual taking scarlet fever. The reading of the Dick Test must be done between 22 and 24 hours after injection. This is important in the case of people in whose houses a case of scarlet fever has developed because people who are not immune, i.e., are positive reactors, must be quarantined while those who are negative reactors are not quarantined.

The Schick test is used to tell if a person is susceptible to diphtheria. The reading of the test is similar except that it is made 48 hours after the injection. Its importance lies in the fact that if the person has been in contact with diphtheria, he can be given, if he has been found to be susceptible, a preventive dose of antitoxin, or if there is no urgency, he can be protected against diphtheria by having three doses of diphtheria toxoid as is now being done with practically all school children. One should emphasize here that a preventive dose of antitoxin given to prevent contacts of the disease from contracting diphtheria, gives protection for a very limited length of time, possibly only two weeks, whereas the protection given by 3 doses of toxoid will give protection for a period of some years.

There are a few cases of whooping cough in town. Whooping cough at the beginning appears like an ordinary cold. The cough, however, instead of abating, gradually increases in severity and frequency, especially at night. So if your neighbours's child has a cold try to keep your own children away from him. There is a vaccine which will give protection against whooping cough in over 80% of the children to whom it is administered. Three doses are given at intervals of three weeks. The chief immediate danger with whooping cough is that the child may develop pneumonia but some children are left with chronic lung conditions which may make partial invalids of them for the rest of their lives. So if there is whooping cough in your neighborhood and your child has not had whooping cough or been vaccinated against it, you would be wise to have him protected against this disease.

HAT HARMONY

AIDED and abetted by the right hair-do, the brief hat presents a complete picture of charm and flattering appeal. Many smart designers are working with hair stylists to achieve delightful effects such as that shown here. Lily Dache did the hat and fashioned it of black shantung straw massed with pink and red roses and set off with a voluminous veil of magenta and green fishnet. The hat sits way on top of the head to permit ringlets to shine forth in all their glory.

LIVING WITH MOTHER-IN-LAW DILEMMA FOR YOUNG BRIDE

It Can Be Done and Both Be Happy, but It Requires Every Ounce of Diplomacy on Part of Each Other

Dear Dorothy Dix—I am going to live with my husband's mother when we are married. Can you give me any suggestions about how to get along with her, as I am determined to live in peace with her if it is possible? ELEANORE.

ANSWER—Well, of course, mothers-in-law and daughters-in-law CAN live together without getting into each other's hair. It has been done, but, as the English say, it takes a bit of doing, and you should think long and carefully and prayerfully before you undertake it. If, however, your have determined to tackle the job, my first suggestion to you is to make an honest effort to make a success of it. Realize that both you and your mother-in-law are put on the spot, because neither one of you wishes to live with the other. She wants to go on living as she has done for years in her old home, monopolizing her son, doing things her own way. You want your own home where you will be alone with your husband and where you can fix everything up according to your own taste and have everything just as you want it, as you have dreamed of doing ever since you played dollhouse as a little girl. These things being true and it being impossible for the two schools of housekeeping to be put into operation in the same house without conflict, I think you will do much to propitiate your mother-in-law and to promote peace if you will simply take a back seat of your own accord as soon as you enter your new home. Tell your mother-in-law that you want her to continue to sit at the head of the table and run the house.

It will require sacrifice on your part to do this, but you have told your husband a thousand times that you would die for him, if necessary, so why not live for him a little?

Also, I would earnestly recommend to you to keep on with your job, if you have one, and, if not, to get one, or take up some study or hobby that will take you much out of the house. No two women, even if they were female angels, could live in the same house with one of them having nothing to do and no authority and no interest in it, without getting on each other's nerves.

Things to Remember

Then I would ask you to remember that it is always a wrench to a mother to have to give up her son to another woman. Her boy has been her all-in-all so long that it makes a terrible gap in her life when he leaves her.

So make this as easy for her as you can. Don't rub it in on her that you are first now. Don't do your billing and cooing under her eyes. Urge your husband to be more affectionate and more attentive to his mother than he has ever been before.

Finally, use as much tact and diplomacy in winning your mother-in-law's heart as you did her son's. Old women are very susceptible to flattery because they get so little of it. Tell your mother-in-law how grateful you are to her for having given you such a fine husband. Compliment her cooking. Ask her to teach you how to make certain dishes.

If you are living in her house, be the perfect guest—cater to her in every way possible, and you will make a friend of her. And a mother-in-law can be a very useful and helpful friend to the daughter-in-law she likes.

And some day you will be a mother-in-law yourself, and may Heaven reward you as you deserve by sending you a model daughter-in-law.

"Army" Marriages Are Great Risk

Dear Dorothy Dix—For five years I have been going with a grl. Nothing serious, just that we liked to be together, and now that I have decided to join the army she thinks we should rush into marriage because every one else is doing it. Nine out of 10 of the boys are in the same fix that I am. They don't want to marry because they know that nothing will be the same after the war is over. We may come back to no job and have nothing to support ourselves on, let alone a wife and perhaps a kid. And, most of all, we may not care quite so much for the girls we left behind us. Yet the girls insist on an immediate marriage. Why can't they be willing to do their share here until our work is finished? It all comes to this: I don't want to marry and my girl is giving me the deuce about it. How can I get out of it? Can you help?

ANSWER—The way out is easy enough if you have the courage to take it. Just tell the girl up and down that you do not intend to commit the folly of marrying under the circumstances, and that you expect to have troubles and anxieties enough to bear during the next few months without adding to them the extra load you would have to carry if you were worried all the time about what had become of a wife.

After all, a girl can't take you by the scruff of the neck and drag you to the altar against your will. So be man enough to stand up for what you know to be the right thing to do, and don't let her weep or cajole you into acting contrary to your best judgment.

Any girl who really loved you unselfishly would not try to force herself upon you in this critical hour of your life. She would send you away with her blessing and tell you that she would be waiting when you came back, and then, if you still loved each other and you had some way to support a family, she would marry you.

Teen-Age Boy Should Not Marry

Dear Miss Dix—I am a teen-age boy in love with a woman of 30 and wish very much to marry her. She is divorced and has a small child and I would like to make a home for them both. But I am also attracted by a girl of my own age. What shall I do? SAMUEL.

ANSWER—The G-men should get any woman of 30 who is trying to marry a boy in his teens, for kidnapping. Don't let her get you. Try to have a moment of sanity in which to consider how you would support a ready-made family. Why, you couldn't make a living for yourself now if you tried.

And if you are already attracted by a girl of your own age, think how tired you would be of this woman, who is old enough to be your mother, if you were married to her. And don't do anything so foolish as to let her drag you to the parson.

Dollars To Doughnuts

By EDITH ELLINGTON

YESTERDAY: Anthony kisses Bee and they realize they have fallen in love. Bee cannot understand this new thrill. Kisses never meant so much before. Like happy children they swing in the park. "This is our world!" Bee knows it.

SO THIS IS LOVE

CHAPTER XV

"ARE you getting cold, sweet?" Anthony asked.

"Oh, no! I could stay here forever!"

She slipped out of the swing and put her hands on his shoulders. "Tell me, Anthony, doesn't this frighten you a little? Everything's changed, now. The things you told me about wanting to be a merchandising man, getting ahead . . . .do you know that some part of the drive you gave them will be lost?

"I mean, when you're in love, when you want to spend every minute of your time with someone, you—you don't give ambition all the strength and force you've got." It was difficult to put into words this feeling growing inside her that she wouldn't be good for Anthony.

"Don't be foolish, darling. Loving you will make me work 10 times harder." Yet, illogically, he hurried on, "Let's not even talk about work now. Let's sit by the lake."

There was a little slope of hillside, above the lake where people rowed on sunny afternoons. With its back against a clump of bushes, they found a bench. "We'll surely slide off!" she said.

"I'll hold you tight."

THE water below was still and black, and the bushes at its edge made soft, rustling noises in the wind. Beatrice let Anthony draw her head down to his shoulder. So they sat, content, until she murmured, "Funny, how we never thought of anything like this when we were fighting, in the store. You didn't think anything special about me then. I was just a new girl who was stubborn and dumb, wasn't I?"

"No, you weren't. I wondered right away, what a girl with those eyes, and hair like yours, and that self-confident, lovely poise was doing in Budget Fashions.

"Bee, you simply don't belong there. You're like a flawless diamond on a dime store counter." His lips moved in her hair. "Did you think anything special when you first saw me?"

"I thought you were the most earnest young man I'd ever seen," she admitted. "I wondered how you kept your face so straight, listening to all those ridiculous customers. And I wondered"—she laughed deliciously—"I wondered if you were as smug and polite down inside."

"I usually swear in three languages, inside. Luckily I studied Spanish. It's useful for swearing."

"What's the other? French?"

"Yes." They rocked with foolish merriment.

"Later," said Beatrice, "I wondered why you didn't simply punch Miss Dane in the nose. And still later, of course, I wondered how Huntington's could be so blind as to keep you down there. Now if they'd put you right at the front entrance, all the women would flock in! And if they made you general superintendent . . . ."

"They ought to put you in the window, in that case. They'd never find anything half so lovely to exhibit."

"But I'm not for sale."

He became suddenly sober. "If you were, I couldn't pay the price tag. I've got my nerve, expecting you to care for me. Why, Bee, I'm just a chump. A penniless sucker. I haven't got a thing but two hands and a strong back and a lot of gall to even dare to want a girl like you."

He stared off into the darkness. "A girl like you shouldn't be working in the store. You don't belong there. You were made for lovely clothes and furs and jewels and a life like a dream. You were made to be cherished and spoiled with luxury—"

Beatrice put her fingertips quickly against his mouth. "Don't." She'd had all those things all her life, and they hadn't been enough.

Anthony caught her hands, kissed her palms. "You're too good for me."

"You don't know anything about me."

Guilt and a self-accusation that was strange to her, who had never blamed herself for anything, gnawed at her. She thought, wildly, that maybe if she broke down right now and told him the truth, he might understand. He loved her. It wouldn't seem underhanded and sneaky now, on this bench, with the sweet spell of tenderness still around them.

But the moment passed. She couldn't tell him. It would spoil everything. If, indeed, he believed her at all. She shivered.

"You are cold!" he accused. "Take my coat."

He bundled it around her masterfully. "Sure you're warm enough now? Maybe I should take you home."

"No. Not yet. I—I don't want this night ever to end."

"Tell me about yourself, Bee. It's funny, how little I know."

"I don't know anything about you, either," she said softly. "I wish I'd known you when you were a little boy. You must have been one of those heartbreakingly sober little boys, with big innocent eyes. The kind that takes clocks apart and cures sick dogs."

"I was a revolting little boy. Always fighting. We lived in one tough mining town after another, and I had to fight, because I was always marked sissy before I got there. My father was an engineer, and their fathers called him 'boss' . . . ."

She thought bleakly, "I've been tagged sissy, too. Because my grandfather was boss."

Anthony was saying, his voice ragged, "My father died in a mine cave-in. I was in prep school. I came home and saw my mother go to pieces. After she went, if it hadn't been for the old man who was my father's best friend, I'd have been all alone."

"I'm alone," Beatrice told him. "I don't even remember my mother and father. My grandfather brought me up. He was everything to me, mother, father, and the best friend a girl ever had."

She wanted to show Grandfather to Anthony as she had known him. "He had a loud, blustering voice, Anthony. He'd shout at me, and wave his arms around, and say I'd never amount to a hill of beans. . . . But he was the kindest, sweetest man who ever lived.

"He was always doing things for other people. Swearing he didn't believe in charity, vowing he had his own troubles, couldn't be bothered. And all the time he had found a job for some unfortunate man, and sent money to a woman with children. You know. That sort of thing."

She saw again Grandfather's ruddy, lined face, his twinkling blue eyes. Her own eyes were wet. "He hated dressing up. He called it a lot of fol-de-rol. He'd sit around in his shirtsleeves, his thumbs stuck in his suspenders, with his shoes off."

She caught herself. Almost she had told Anthony of the disapproving countenance of the stiff English butler Grandfather was always threatening to fire.

Clouds scudded across the moon's face. The wind was stronger, and Beatrice's toes grew cold. But she didn't want this hour to end.

A policeman, whacking the bushes and throwing the beam of a powerful flashlight into odd corners in a business like inspection drove them away at last.

"Pretty late for woo pitching, ain't it?" he grinned. "No matter how bad you've got it. Go on, find a nice warm hallway, or save it up for tomorrow." He was a young policeman, and merry. "Me and the missus used to carry on like that not so long ago, but we got sense now. Anyhow, I'm supposed to bust up parkers. Brr. It's cold. Good night, folks."

"Good night," said Beatrice.

"Ape!" muttered Anthony. They got up reluctantly.

ENQUIRY COLUMN

By MARY MOORE

QUESTION: I was wondering if you would please send me a recipe for a salad dressing with very little or no oil, and thank you.

May I add too that I enjoy your recipes and weekly menus so much, they contain so many of the "different" ideas for which housewives are eternally searching. Thanking you. —Mrs. D. A. McGillivray, Wheatley.

ANSWER: We are glad to hear you like the weekly menus. The recipe for Boiled Dressing I am giving you contains no oil—only 1 tablespoon butter.

Boiled Dressing.

One-half teaspoon salt, 1 teaspoon mustard, few grains cayenne, 1 tablespoon flour, 1 tablespoon sugar, 2 yolks of eggs (or 1 whole egg when eggs are expensive), ½ cup milk, ¼ cup mild vinegar, 1 tablespoon butter. Mix dry ingredients in upper part of double boiler, then add yolks well beaten and milk, then add vinegar very slowly. Cook over boiling water, stirring constantly until thick. Immediately remove from heat, add butter, strain and cool.

If you have other cooking problems I shall be glad to hear from you at any time.

QUESTION: Please send me recipes for bread and Parker House rolls, also date loaf. I saw your inquiry service in the paper.—Mrs. E. G.

ANSWER: It is easy to give you recipe for bread and Parker House rolls, but one must have experience with making bread before expecting successful results every time. Possibly you have this experience—but if you have not do not be discouraged if your first batch is not as light as you would like it.

White Bread.

This recipe will make 4 1-lb. loaves.

Four cups liquid—either water, potato water, milk or milk and water—1 tablespoon salt, 1 tablespoon sugar, 2 tablespoons lard, 3 quarts bread flour, ½ compressed yeast cake for overnight bread, or 2 yeast cakes for bread made in 5 or 6 hours, ¼ cup lukewarm water. Heat the liquid, then add salt, sugar and lard and cool to lukewarm—that is about 100 deg. Fahr. Then add yeast cake, dissolved in a little lukewarm water. Add the flour — just enough to make a sponge—it takes about 1½ cups of flour to each cup of liquid. Beat very well until bubbles form. If sponge is to set over night, cover and let stand in warm place—about 68 deg. Fahr., and let rise until foamy. If to be done during day 80 deg. Fahr is about right.

When ready to cut down add enough of the remaining flour to make a dough just stiff enough to be handled, and turn out on lightly floured board. Knead until elastic and squeaky, adding only enough flour to board to prevent sticking. Return to bowl, moisten top, cover and set to rise until double in bulk.

To shape loaves turn dough out on lightly flour board, and knead to break gas bubbles, divide and shape into loaves. Put into greased pans, cover lightly in a warm place to rise again. When nearly double bake at 350 deg. Fahr., increasing to 400 deg. Fahr. for 50 or 60 minutes for a 1-lb. loaf.

Parkerhouse Rolls.

Two cups milk, 2 tablespoons sugar, 4 tablespoons butter, 1 teaspoon salt, 6 cups bread flour, ¼ cup lukewarm water, ¼ yeast cake (if set at night) or 1 yeast cake if to be made in 5 or 6 hours. Scald milk, add sugar, butter and salt. Cool to lukewarm, then add yeast which has been dissolved in the lukewarm water. Add enough flour to make a sponge, beat until very light, cover and set in warm place to rise. When foamy add enough flour to make the dough. Knead until elastic, set to rise in warm place until double bulk. Knead slightly, roll out to 1-3 inch thickness, lifting dough from board to let it shrink, then cut with round cutter; crease each piece through middle deeply with back of knife, brush over half of the piece with melted butter, fold over, press edges together, place in greased baking pans, set to rise to double in bulk, and when light bake at 375 to 400 deg. Fahr. for 15 to 30 minutes.

Date Loaf.

One and one-half cups dates, 1 teaspoon baking soda, 1⅛ cups boiling water, 2-3 cup brown sugar, 1 egg, 1 tablespoon butter, 1 teaspoon vanilla, 1¾ cups flour, 1 teaspoon salt, 1 teaspoon baking powder. Wash, stone and cut dates into small pieces, add soda and boiling water, mix well and cool a little. Add sugar, beaten egg, butter and vanilla. Add flour sifted with salt and baking powder. Turn into greased loaf pan and bake 1¼ hours at from 275 to 300 deg. Fahr.—very slow oven.

IN MEMORIAM

DUNFORD.—In loving memory of my dear mother, Mrs. William Dunford, who passed away April 13, 1940.

God knew that she was suffering,
That the hills were hard to climb,
So He closed her weary eyelids
And whispered, "Peace be thine."
Away in the beautiful hills of God,
By the Valley of Rest so fair;
Some time, some day, we know not when,
We will meet our loved one there.
—Ever remembered by her daughter, Mrs. Harold Wall and Family.

In loving memory of a dear wife and loving mother, who departed this life, April 12, 1939.

If she could only be with us to-day,
Talk to us in the same old way;
To hear her voice, to see her smile,
The life would really be worth while.
Not just to-day, but every day,
In silence we remember.
—Sadly missed by Husband and Family.

GRAHAM.—In loving memory of my dear mother, Elizabeth Graham, who the Lord called home, seven years ago to-day.

She is gone but not forgotten,
And as dawns another year,
In our lonely hours of thinking
Thoughts of her are always near.
Days of sadness will come o'er us,
Friends may think the wound is healed,
But they little know the sorrow
That lies within the heart concealed.
—Ever remembered by her son Clifford and daughter-in-law Pearl, and Family.

SHRIMPTON—In loving memory of Edward T. Shrimpton, who died one year ago, April 11, 1939.

We often sit and think of him when we are all alone,
For memory is the only friend that grief can call its own;
Like ivy on the withered oak, when all other things decay,
Our love for him will still keep green, and never fade away.
—Ever fondly remembered by friends.

GRAHAM.— In loving memory of our dear mother, Elizabeth Graham, who fell asleep in Jesus seven years ago today, April 12, 1934.

In Lakefield Cemetery, peacefully sleeping,
Where the flowers gently wave,
Lies the one we loved so dearly,
The one we could not save.
And deep in our hearts lies a picture
Worth more than silver and gold,
It's a picture of you, dear mother,
Whose memory will never grow old.
—Sadly missed by her two daughters, Hazel and Viola, and sons-in laws, Robert and Royden, and grandchildren.

IN MEMORIAM

DUNFORD.—In loving memory of Mrs. W. L. Dunford, who died April 13, 1940.

There's a vacant chair in our home, mother,
Where you used to sit and sew;
Now the time is lonesome without you
In the days that come and go.
We all stood round your bedside
To bid our last good-bye,
Then the Saviour called you home,
To dwell with Him on high.
Out in the quiet graveyard
Where the pines their branches wave,
Lies our dear mother peacefully sleeping,
One we loved but could not save.
Dear mother, how we miss you
In this world so bright and fair,
We miss you at our table,
We miss you everywhere.
As the time of life rolls on and when the journey's o'er,
We all hope to meet you, mother,
Over on the other shore.
—Ever remembered by her daughter and Family, and granddaughters Leah and Ida.

DUNFORD.—In loving memory of mother, Mrs. W. L. Dunford, who died April 13, 1940.

We miss her at a thousand turns
Along life's weary way;
For life to us it not the same
Since she was called away.
The world may change from year to year,
And friends from day to day,
But never will the one we loved
From memory pass away.
—Fondly remembered by her daughter and son-in-law and children, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Booth.

WALKER. — In loving memory of Mrs. John Walker, who passed away four years ago, April 14, 1937.

Four years have passed and gone
Since one we loved so well
Was taken from our home on earth
With Jesus Christ to dwell.
The flowers we place upon her grave
May wither and decay
But the love for her who sleeps beneath
Shall never fade away.
—Ever remembered by Husband and Family.

Good Golf Is Good Swing, Says Teacher of Aces

Practise by Swinging a Weight

How you swing—that and that alone decides the class of your golf, says Ernest Jones, famous golf instructor.

Really swing and you're right up with the good players; just think you swing and you stay a dub. But there's nothing hard about learning to swing properly.

The best way to get the feel of a real swing is to tie a pen-knife to a handkerchief and swing that. Then try swinging the club and the weight at the same time. If weight and club move back and forth together you've got it! If not, here are a few helpful pointers.

Don't steer the club with your wrists, but—with arms relaxed, with a rhythmic feeling—SWING the club, in wider and wider arcs. Think of the club head as a weight hanging from your hands, swinging like a pendulum.

And don't study the actions of other golfers piecemeal—the way they move their arms, shoulders, legs or hips—because swinging isn't any combination of separate motions. It's a single motion, as simple, relaxed as throwing a stone.

Our 32-page booklet by Ernest Jones, teacher of champions, thoroughly explains the right way to swing, correct stance, balance, how to hold the club. An aid to both beginners and more advanced golfers.

Send 15c in coins or stamps for your copy of SWING'S THE THING IN GOLF to the Examiner, Home Service, Peterborough. Be sure to write plainly your NAME, ADDRESS and the NAME of booklet.

BARCLAY ON BRIDGE

WRITTEN FOR THE EXAMINER
By SHEPARD BARCLAY
"The Authority on Authorities"

SQUEEZE AFTER RUFFING

USUALLY a squeeze play comes at the end of running a long suit or suits. On the early rounds of it, the defenders may select their discards without any particular trouble. Then it gets more difficult, so they must be careful about what they throw away. Finally comes the trick on which it is absolutely impossible for one of them, or both, to discard something which is not damaging. That same finish can be brought about, however, at the end of a cross-ruff, which winds up with the lead of a card on which the troubled opponent cannot discard except disastrously.

	♠ K Q J 9 4 ♥ K 10 4 3 ♦ 6 ♣ K 5 2
♠ A 6 3 ♥ 8 7 6 2 ♦ K J 10 5 3 ♣ 10	W E N S	♠ None ♥ A Q J 9 5 ♦ Q 8 7 2 ♣ J 9 8 7
	♠ 10 8 7 5 2 ♥ None ♦ A 9 4 ♣ A Q 6 4 3

(Dealer: West. North-South vulnerable.)

West	North	East	South
Pass	Pass	Pass	1 ♠
2 ♠	3 ♠	4 ♥	4 ♠
5 ♥	5 ♠	Pass	6 ♠
Dbl	Rdle

North's bidding and redouble were brilliant, based on his reading of South's heart shortness from the opponents' strong bidding of the suit, his filler K in clubs, his shortness in diamonds and the location of the spade honors over the doubler. Plus, of course, his confidence in a fine partner. South proved the latter part of the case with much gusto.

West led his club singleton, the A winning, and South fired back a spade, which West took with the A, East signaling with the heart 9, so West returned his heart 2 to the J, South ruffing. That launched a great cross-ruff, preceded by a lead to the spade 9, on which East shed a diamond. A heart was ruffed, the diamond A scored, a diamond was ruffed, another heart ruffed, another diamond, and then South led the spade K from dummy to the tenth trick. At that stage the dummy also held the heart K and the club K-5, and the declarer four clubs headed by the Q. East could not discard his heart A, which would have set up the dummy's K, so he cut down to the club J-9 by discarding the 8. Then the club K and Q dropped those two cards, the 6 making the last trick.

Your Week-End Lesson

Have you ever made a squeeze play against the declarer when you were on the defensive? Do you understand the principles of such a play well enough to set up an example of a normal hand on which one can be made consciously?

Charged With Robbery

WINDSOR, Ont., April 12 (CP).—Sixteen-year-old Eddie Cyriakow of Windsor today was charged with robbery with violence of 62-year-old Z. Katzman, well-known Windsor cattle buyer who was slugged and beaten by two youths in his garage early Wednesday.

One of the youths, said by police to have been Cyriakow, was chased onto Louis avenue where Elmer Farkas, former Sarnia Imperials football player, captured him.

This Messerschmitt Didn't Stop Until It Reached California

The R.A.F. did such a neat job of shooting down this Messerschmitt 110 that it scracely cracked-up in landing. They shipped it across the Atlantic and across a continent to California for study by Vultee Aircraft engineers, who wished to compare it with the best in the United States. Their report: "Fighters produced by Vultee, Wright, Lockheed and Curtiss are as good as Messerschmitts in construction, and in general our instruments are finer, more reliable and more versatile."

ian units. From the beginning of hostilities in Eritrea to the fall of its chief seaport, Masaua, Wednesday, the communique said, the British have taken 41,000 troops, including 1,000 Italian officers, 14,000 Italians of other ranks, and 26,000 colonials.

In Ethiopia, the main British column, having passed through Addis Ababa, the capital, was reported continuing "to press the retreating enemy" in the mountainous hinterland. At Addis Ababa 5,000 prisoners were taken, including 4,000 Italians, an official announcement declared.

Another imperial force was said to be driving deeper into southern Ethiopia from Italian Somaliland.

Advances Claimed

BERLIN, April 12 (AP)—The Germans claimed today that British North African troops have been pushed back by German-Italian forces from defence positions they built between Derna and Tobruk.

Co-operating German and Italian air units were claimed to have struck on ahead of the advancing Axis ground forces, effectively raiding port facilities at Tobruk with "superbombers." It was claimed that 250 German planes are operating in the Derna-Tobruk area.

dustrial Organizations) abandoned their posts at gates of the 1,100 acre factory. State policemen who maintained order during the dispute also left.

Restore Equipment.

About 10 days—longer in some departments where equipment was damaged—will be needed to restore normal production, company officials said. First calls wre expected to go to workers in the foundry, rolling mills, coke ovens and blast furnaces.

Resumption of Rouge plant operations means a Ford assembly line again can start rolling off "Blitz buggies," small trucks for the army; it means a speeding of preparations, in a huge factory within the plant, for output of airplane engines beginning in June. The Ford company holds defence orders totalling $155,000,000.

For sales officials notified branch plants to plan for early reopening. Including employees of these units and independent firms supplying parts and materials to the Ford Company, an estimated 200,000 workers were made idle by the strike. For the 118,000 Ford employees alone, the wage loss was placed at $900,000 daily.

First Major Strike

The end of the first major strike in the Ford Company's 38-year-history came after more than a week of day and night conferences in which Gov. Van Wagoner and James F. Dewey, U.S. Department of Labor conciliator, played active roles.

Dewey said the settlement was assured at 4:30 a.m. EDT Friday when the National Labor Relations Board agreed to postponed a hearing it had scheduled for Monday on a complaint by the U.A.W.-C.I.O. against the company. This postponement was a condition of the company's acceptance of Van Wagoner's peace formula which broke a deadlock in ngeotiations.

The settlement calls for rehiring of all employees without discrimination, including five or eight union committeemen whose discharge was the immediate cause of the strike; for re-establishment of grievance procedure used before the strike, and co-operation of both sides in expediting an employee election which the N.L.R.B. recently ordered held within 45 days.

Join German Forces.

ROME, April 12—(AP).—The Italian High Command claimed that Italian troops in Southern Yugoslavia occupied Debar and Ohrid, where they joined German forces which had smashed through from the east.

(Ljubljana, a city of about 53,000, is an important railway centre, with links to Belgrade, Vienna, Fiume and Trieste).

In the air, the high command reported attacks along the Yugoslav coast in the vicinity of the Italian city of Zara, where it claimed six seaplanes at anchor were set afire and two others sunk.

Fall Wheat Has Come Through Winter Well

Durham Branch Of Federation Rapidly Takes Form

The new crop of fall wheat has come through the winter in good condition, according to reports from the Peterborough farm district. A rough estimate suggests that the seeding was about 30 per cent less than a year ago. Apparently the wheat has wintered well, and a confident feeling is now expressed that weather setbacks are unlikely.

Seedmen of the district intimated this week an active demand. Robert Armstrong of Cavan had sold most of Erban oats and barley. Gordon Hancock also reported that his surplus seed grain was moving actively. Some information indicated that there might be a slight local shortage of O.A.C.-21 barley.

From another source it is learned that enquiry for grass seeds for pateurage has been quite promising, showing a rather notable increase generally throughout the district in this phase of providing natural feed for cattle this season.

Recent Hog Survey

An incomplete hog survey of the district points to a decline in present litter numbers in both Hastings and Peterborough county. According to canvass figures which reached the desk of F. C. Paterson within the last week or so the township of Ennismore is the only one in which there is promise of an increase. In Dummer, North Monaghan, Smith and Otonabee the reports indicate that the number of hogs in sight this season is likely to be less than expectations.

This information coincided with the news that Britain wants another 28,000,000 pounds of pork. Hog prices across the border recently reached $9.10, the highest since the outbreak of the war, almost double the price of a year ago, and an advance of $3 since Christmas.

It is not the intention of these comments to moralize on the importance of the Canadian farmer in what Winston Churchill refers to as the Battle of the Atlantic. Shipping losses reflect the gravity of the situation which demands more and more that transport of munitions and foodstuffs to the Mother Country stands out as a primary factor in the winning of the war. And depending on transport is the whole Canadian enterprise of production. It links the farmer with the British people and the German menace that is being directed at cutting off those supplies.

It is obvious to every one that not only is greater output of foodstuffs needed from this country, an agricultural responsibility, but they must also be delivered to the British people. The appeal to agriculture has been sounded in startling phrases, and as the new productive season opens the job rests in the farmers' hands.

That is the big broad phase of the problem, but conversation with several farmers this week suggest something in the way of irritations that tend to distract his thoughts from the important duty he is being called upon to perform. Labor is not only scarce, they say, but some hired help is showing signs of exploiting in little ways that tempt farmers at times to throw up their hands and get along as best they can without help. This annoyance does not refer to the wage question. Generally wages have been increased, but there are also little domestic demands that "were not in the agreement" and that would not be heard of in ordinary times of peace.

Possibly that is not a general condition of irritation, but the several farmers who mentioned the matter this week were not at the moment thinking of themselves as key men in a great war time industry. They felt rather that some one was trying to stick a burr under their collars when they had enough trouble on their hands planning the new season's work and preparing to get started at it.

Country Egg Grading

"The new egg grading regulations make full provision for a producer to continue to grade his own eggs for sale as in the past," says an Ottawa newspaper item, quoting some authority in the Department of Agriculture. Erroneous reports are causing confusion, it says, and one of those reports is to the effect that producers selling eggs to consumers or to retail stores must first take them to a registered egg grading station to be graded.

"The Department asks that country merchants at points where no registered station is located, avoid making any change in their method of handling eggs until they have full and correct information about the requirements of the regulations, preferably from the Department or one of its officers. Members of the inspection staff are endeavoring to visit all egg handlers, including country merchants, as quickly as possible, for the purpose of explaining the regulations."

Farm Forum Ends

"On an almost perfect Spring night we gathered at the home of Mr. and Mrs. William Seymour for the concluding broadcast in the Farm Forum series this season," writes a Cavan correspondent. "The radio discussion was followed by a general review of the series by our own company, and final questiin was 'What shall we do without it?.' Members of the Milk Producers' Association believe that their organization in units is probably the best method. Their structure is in township, county and provincial groups, with a representation in the Federation of Agriculture. Certainly more information is needed by the average man and woman on the farm, and it is now realized that the Farm Forum has accomplished a great deal in the stimulating of thought on farm problems.

Herbert Morton moved a hearty vote of thanks to Mr. and Mrs. Seymour for their warm hospitality all through the winter.

The program of the concluding social hour was made up of singing and amusing readings followed by lunch. Everybody is deeply grateful to Mr. and Mrs. Seymour for the leadership they have given to the community meetings to hear the Forum discussions and especially for their unfailing hospitality."

Durham Meetings

The Durham branch of the Federation of Agriculture is proceeding with its organization on a township basis. Meetings were held at Cavan Wednesday night and at Orono Thursday night. Both of them were fairly well attended. About forty Clarke township farmers were at the Orono meeting.

Roads have been heaving with the frost during the week, and in some places are breaking up extensively, not only side roads but also some of the county roads. Some of them were said to be impassable, and considerable repair work will be required by the time they dry out.

A few farmers were noticed at work on the land along the Peterborough-Port Hope highway during the last few days, and several others in Douro were also getting down to business.

Hybrid Corn

Better corn hybrids have yielded from 15 to 25 per cent more shelled corn than standard varieties, and tests conducted at Ottawa show that well adapted hybrids producted 10 to 20 per cent more ensilage, according to the Federal Department of Agriculture's report. Incidentally, there was a little story the other day about a Peterborough county farmer who, at some meeting during the winter, was heard discussing hybrid corn in the manner of one who had done considerable experimenting with it. And only recently, it was said, that he had applied for the vocational instruction course at the Collegiate, presumably in the expectation of getting a job at a local factory where such men are about to be needed. If that be so, there seems to be something deplorable and disheartenining about the necessity or the preference for such a switch in work especially at the present time when so much emphasis is being placed upon intelligent farming.

London Press Lashes at 'Ostrich' Glossing of Axis Successes

CHARGE FAIRY TALE SPREADERS REAL CREATORS OF GLOOM—SEE NAZI-FASCIST AFRICAN DRIVE NO "DIVERSION" BUT REAL PUSH FOR ALEXANDRIA AND THE SUEZ.

LONDON, April 14—(CP Cable). — An outspoken London press viewed alarmingly today the African situation and criticized official announcements minimizing the German push across Libya into Egypt.

"This is no diversion," said the Evening News. "It is a well prepared blow for a glittering prize—to overrun Egypt, stand astride Suez, and seize Alexandria, the key to all British power in the Mediterranean and the Balkans.

"Glossing it over with vague offiical words of comfort—words which long since have lost all their par value on the public market—is mere futility.

"Even while they were crouching to spring we were told how lost these poor inexperienced Germans from the north would be in the desert if they ever came there and how trying they would find the hot sandy climate. We can see the worth of that talk now—and the worth of the talkers.

"It is time that some of these spreaders of fairy tales were given a long rest. They are the real creators of gloom and despondency."

The Daily Mail said: "North Africa no longer is the mere sideshow it was thought to be in many quarters only a fortnight ago. It has grown into a large-

Greeks See Mountains Real Slaughterhouse As Nazi Panzers Slow Up In Mud; Slavs Counter-Attack South Of Belgrade

ATHENS, April 14 — (AP). — With British and Greek forces holding back the Germans on the 150-mile front of Northern Greece, the Royal Air Force has launched an offensive designed to cripple Germany's mechanized columns.

An R.A.F. communique to-day announced "a large number of sorties" against German columns in Greece with direct hits by most of the participating planes.

"Direct hits were obtained on these columns by most of our aircraft."

The R.A.F. found a battle in the sky when its fighters intercepted Axis bombers over the Koritza area of Albania, the communique added. One Italian plane was reported shot down and several others were damaged. Near the eastern anchor of the British-Greek line, an R.A.F. fighter shot down a German Messerschmitt west of Mount Olympus.

Greek despatches said that a combination of heightened resistance and bad weather had frustrated the German push—presumably by the advance guard of mechanized forces—all along the principal front, from the Albanian mountain passes to Mount Olympus and the Gulf of Salonika.

Hitler's Best Routed.

LONDON, April 14 — (CP). — British infantrymen fighting in Northern Greece have routed Germany's "SS Adolf Hitler" motorized division with heavy losses, it was officially announced to-day, and Yugoslav troops are believed to have captured the strategic Adriatic seaport of Durazzo.

Durazzo lies 25 miles west of Tiran, the Albanian capital.

(The battle between the British and German forces apparently was fought between Phlorina, Greece, and the Bitolj Gap, in South-west Yugoslavia, where Nazi armored

Tobruk Holds Out-Nazis at Salum

ROME, April 14 — (AP). — The Italian high command said to-day the British garrison at Tobruk, 80 miles west of Axis-captured Bardia in Libya, is resisting encircling German and Italian forces.

The British garrison was admitted to be putting up stiff resistance despite a "ceaseless" hammering by German and Italian airmen.

D. N. B., German news and propaganda agency, claimed that British troops at Tobruk, Libya, are withdrawing by sea.

Dive bombers were said to be attacking transports and other vessels in that Libyan harbor.

(There was no immediatte comment from British sources. The latest reports said the British garrison at Tobruk was still fighting.)

From Berlin the German high command claimed that Axis forces have captured Salum, Egypt, just across the border from Libya.

(Cairo advices previously had reported the Axis forces in the vicinity of Salum and had hinted the British troops might fall back to Mersa Matruk.)

The Nazi war bulletin said the advancing German and Italian units moved into Egypt after taking Fort Capuzzo, Libyan fortress near the frontier and south of the Libyan port of Bardia, occupied by the Axis forces on Saturday.

German dive bombers raiding Malta last night claimed a hit on the stern of a destroyer and destruction of two Hurricane fighters.

CAIRO, Egypt, April 14.—(AP)—With Axis and British forces fighting on Egyptian soil, British military observers predicted to-day that the army of the Nile might withdraw as far as Mersa Matruh before digging in for a decisive stand.

It was there, 130 miles east of the Egyptian-Libyan frontier, that the British army made its stand against the Fascist advance last year, and from there that Gen. Sir Archibald Wavell launched the winter counter-attack which swept more than 600 miles, beyond Bengasi and Libya.

British authorities said German and Italian motorized forces took the port of Bardia, 10 miles west of the Libyan-Egyptian frontier, then crossed the border and clashed over the week-end with British units in the vicinity of Salum, Egypt.

Fighting also was reported continuing around Tobruk, 80 miles west of Bardia.

The Axis advanced skirted Tobruk and the Royal Air Force reported that British bombers and fighters dispersed tanks drawn up by the Germans and Italians for an attack there.

British sources stresesd that the troops in Tobruk were not surrounded and declared contact with them might be established across the desert, where Axis lines were said to have been drawn exceedingly thin.

Bardia was undefended as the British command withdrew under tactics of giving ground but saving strength while awaiting further replacements from East Africa.

Paint Move Bolster For Neutrality In Expanding War

MOSCOW, April 14 (AP)—A Soviet-Japanese neutrality pact was regarded today by the Communist party press as clearing the way for political and economic co-operation—without, however, binding Russia to the Axis.

The pact, signed yesterday by Premier Yvacheslaff Molotoff and Japan's Foreign Minister, Yosuke Matsuoka, fitted the general pattern of expressed Soviet policy—neutrality in the midst of an expanding war.

It is the first political pact concluded between the two countries since the retsumption of diplomatic relations after the Bolshevist revolution of 1917.

Pravda, Communist party organ, said the pact and its accompanying declaration pledging respect for the integrity of Manchoukuo and outer Mongolia "clear the way for the regulation of other unsolved ques-

Four Men Die In Break At Sing Sing

2 Make Their Escape Across Hudson In Stolen Rowboat

OSSINING, N.Y., April 14 (AP)—Two long-term convicts who shot their way from the Sing Sing prison infirmary in a sensational break which cost four lives were captured a few hours later today in the woods across the Hudson River.

The two convicts, still armed with smuggled guns with which they and a confederate, who was later slain, had broken from the prison in a battle in which a prison guard and an Ossining policeman were killed and a convict patient died of shock, were cornered on the slope of Mount Hood in Palisades Interstate Park.

Patrolman William Mullen, an experienced woodsman member of the park's police and one of 250 peace officers trailing them, flushed them from underbrush within a mile of the shore point from which they had fled after forcing a fisherman to ferry them across the river.

The break and its resultant gunfire began at 4 a.m. (EDT) on the third floor of the prison hospital, where Guard John Hartye was shot and killed.

From there the white-shirted, gray-trousered trio made its way as far as Lower Main Street in Ossining, where Radio Car Patrolmen James Fagan and William Nelson spotted them and opened fire. In that duel Fagan and Convict John Waters were killed.

Before going into Hull's office the Minister told reporters that he had received a recall order signed "Foreign Office" but that formal letters of recall from the King of Denmark had not yet reached him.

Although he said he understood the Copenhagen government had declared the agreement invalid, the Minister said he had not received official notice to this effect.

Washington, April 14 (AP)

THE United States Navy was understood today to be preparing for the swift arming of hundreds of government and privately-owned merchant vessels should such action become necessary.

In addition, congress has provided funds to enable the navy to acquire equipment to protect such vessels against magnetic mines.

President Roosevelt's action last week in opening the Red Sea to American shipping stirred conjecture as to whether United States merchant vessels carrying supplies to African ports would be armed in view of Hitler's threat to torpedo all ships carrying supplies for Britain.

Bordeaux Docks, 3 Hun Ships Pounded By RAF

LONDON, April 14—(CP).—British bombers attacked Merignac airdrome and the docks at Bordeaux in German-occupied France last night, the Ministry of Information reported today.

Air activities over Britain during the night were described as "slight" in a communique which said "a small number of bombs were dropped at one or two coastal points."

Some damage was caused and casualties were reported in a night attack on a town in the northwest of England.

The Air Ministry reported that in attacks off the Netherlands and German coasts yesterday, British planes scored bomb hits on a 1,500-ton supply ship, which was last seen "well down by the stern," and attacked another supply ship of 2,000 tons and a naval patrol vessel.

CANADIAN Red Cross headquarters announced today that word had been received during the week-end of the safe arrival of food parcels sent from Canada for British prisoners of war in Germany. A shipment of 4,800 parcels was sent on an America Red Cross "mercy ship" several weeks ago.

Mrs. H. P. Plumptre, vice-chairman of the Red Cross executive committee, said a cable had been received saying the parcels arrived in "admirable condition" and that "distribution of the parcels is proceeding."

This shipment was the first of many now being made by the Red Cross here at the rate of 10,000 parcels a week.

Hun-Held Coast Hit By Norse, British Raiders

LONDON, April 14 — (CP) — A Norwegian warship, operating under an agreement with British naval forces, was reported authoritatively today to have raided the northern coast of German-held Norway yesterday.

This possibly was the second landing on Norwegian soil in as many days and the third in recent weeks.

Reuters News Agency carried a Swedish press report from Stockholm last night that a British landing party raided a small, undisclosed Norwegian port, attacked a Fish Meal factory and machine-gunned the home of a local "Quislingist." The Daily Mail said this incident occurred Saturday.

In the first landing, March 4, British forces sailed up to the Lofoten Islands, fired oil tanks, sank 11 ships under German command and captured 225 prisoners.

From this sortie, described by some London sources as the forerunner of bigger things to come, the British expedition also brought back 300 young Norwegians who expressed a desire to join the Allied forces to carry on the fight for freedom.

Jap-Red Deal Puts New Strain On US Policy Says Hong Kong

CHUNKING, April 14 (AP)—The influential Chinese newspoper Ta Kung Pao declared today that war in the Pacific now is inevitable as a result of the Japanese-Soviet neutrality pact signed yesterday in Moscow.

The paper headlined news of the singing "Soviet Appeasement of Japan" and declared that the conference at Signapore between the British Ambassador to China, Sir Archibald Clark Kerr, and British military and naval officials would have to weigh carefully the implications of the accord.

A source close to high Chinese military authorities expressed confidence that any new Japanese drive in China resulting from the treaty could be handled successfully by the Chinese and added that the pact must be regarded as merely an incident in the four-year struggle in China.

Observers here expressed keen interest in the reaction of Chinese communists, who up to now have insisted that a Japanese-Soviet agreement was impossible. Some sources said that if the communists continued to follow Moscow, their position in China would deteriorate seriously.

SINGAPORE, April 14 (CP) — The Singapore radio broadcast the comment today that the Soviet-Japanese neutrality pact would not necessarily have any immediate effect in southeastern Asia.

The commentator declared that nothing in the printed version of the pact would prevent Russia from continuing to supply material aid to Gen. Chiang Kai- Shek's Chinese forces.

Convoy Issue Due for Action

F.D.R.'s Opening Of Red Sea To Shipping Stir House Ruling

WASHINGTON, April 14 (AP)—Critics of United States administration foreign policy forecast today that the long-developing debate over a proposal to forbid naval escorts for war materials would break wide open in the senate this week.

The convoy question was of main immediate concern to legislators returning to the capital from Easter vacations today and their interest was sharpened by these two developments:—

1. President Roosevelt's removal of the Red Sea from the list of waters closed to United States shipping under the neutrality act — an action which raised discussions in congressional circles as to what protection might be given American cargo vessels in event they were attacked while delivering British war supplies to Suez Canal ports.

2. Announcement of the Russo-Japanese neutrality agreement yesterday—foes of naval convoys said this pact would free the Japanese for further southward moves in the Orient and provided them with a strong argument for not diverting any naval vessels to convoy duty.

While this view of the Russian-Japanese accord envisioned far eastern developments unfavorable to British-American policy of discouraging Japanese expansion, diplomatic quarters speculated that the pact might foreshadow developments in line with British-American interests in Europe.

These sources said that Russia, like Japan, had gained "back door" protection through the non-aggression agreement and might therefore feel more free to pursue her present anti-Nazi policy in the Balkans.

The issue of whether congress should prohibit specifically convoying of war shipments will be considered by the senate foreign relations committee Wednesday. Before the committee is a resolution by Senator Charles Tobey (Rep.-New Hampshire) to forbid convoying. In-

ADDIS ABABA, April 11.—(Delayed)—(AP)—Thousands of Ethiopians watched today as princes and chieftains prostrated themselves before Emperor Haile Selassie and protested their allegiance to the Emperor at his headquarters about 100 miles from this capital city.

From time to time, the Emperor used field glasses to study the approach of some of the 6,000 men who were snaking their way across a plain hundreds of feet below the town.

Russia, Japan Sign 5-Year Neutrality Agreement; Biggest Since Red-Axis Deal

Experts Claim It Assures Moscow Backdoor In Case Hitler Attacks Ukraine, Others See It Favoring Tokyo Expansion

MOSCOW, April 14—(AP).—For the first time since the Bolshevik revolution 24 years ago, Russia and Japan were bound together today in a neutrality pact regarded by observers here as the most important diplomatic stroke since the Moscow-Berlin accord of 1939 which preceded the German march into Poland.

The Easter Sunday accord, which pledges each nation to remain neutral in the event the other is made "the object of hostilities on the part of one or several third powers" was considered the main prize of Japanese Foreign Minister Yosuke Matsuoka's three-week European tour to Moscow, Berlin and Rome.

Matsuoka left for Tokyo only a short time after signing the pact. Joseph Stalin saw him off, the first time Stalin ever has been known to pay such a tribute to a visiting statesman.

The treaty, valid for five years, pledges the two powers to respect each other's "territorial integrity and inviolability."

It was accompanied by a declaration specifying that Japan would respect the borders of the Russian-dominated outer Mongolian people's republic and the Soviet would do the same for Japanese-sponsored Manchoukuo.

permit the transfer of Japanese troops from Manchoukuo for a southward push in the Pacific, "thereby constituting a grave menace toward the United States," one newspaper commented.

Whether Japan would strike southward depended largely on the outcome of the war in the Balkans, it was said. The newspapers expressed the opinion that if Britain's position in the Balkans remained firm and Washington's policy toward Japan did not change, Tokyo would not be likely to take action immediately in this part of the world.

ROME, April 14.—(AP). — The Russian-Japanese neutrality pact was greeted in Italian political circles to-day as a diplomatic triumph for the Axis line-up of Germany, Italy and Japan.

Although the new treaty did not bring Russia in as an Axis member, the pact still would serve the war plans of the Axis powers, sources here claimed.

Observers declared Japan now has a freer hand in China so far as Russia is concerned, and more easily could aid Germany and Italy against the United States in the Pacific if such a step should be deemed necessary.

As Tokyo Sees It

TOKYO, April 14.—(AP)—The new Japanese-Russian neutrality pact "definitely is a blow to the activities and policies of the United States in the Pacific," the newspaper Yomiuri declared today.

The newspaper Asahi described the treaty, signed yesterday in Moscow by Japanese Foreign Minister Yosuke Matsuoka, Japanese Ambassador Yoshitsugu Tatekawa and Soviet Premier and Foreign Commissar Vyacheslaff Molotoff, as "a non-aggression pact" which will "certainly strengthen the three-power alliance."

Premier Prince Fumimaro Konoye, in announcing the signing of the accrod to the Japanese people, declared it to be a contribution to the "promotion of world peace" entered upon for the very purpose of realizing the intent of the Rome-Berlin-Tokyo pact—namely, to "prevent the world-wide spread of war and to secure the peace of greater East Asia."

The agreement, which observers said would alter many aspects of the Far Eastern picture, was described by the newspaper Nichi Nichi as a document which means that the "diplomatic offensive of the Axis front has reached a stage to achieve the final fruits.

"The effects which the pact give to Chungking and the anti-Axis powers, including Britain and the United States, must be great, it added.

divisions stormed into Greece last Friday.)

"There is good reason to believe that the Yugoslavs have captured Durazzo," the Ministry of Information declared.

Other Yugoslav troops, rallying from the first violent impact of Hitler's invaders, were reported to be counter-attacking fiercely against the Germans in mountain ranges 130 miles south-east of captured Belgrade.

Mud, Snow, Lend a Hand

ATHENS, April 14 (AP) — German mechanized columns, hampered by mud and snow, have failed in their push against the strengthening British-Greek front from the Albanian passes to the Gulf of Salonika, Greek dispatches declared today.

Fresh troops, including additional Greek reservists, were being moved to threatened positions while Allied patrols clashed at several points with armored scouting forces from the Nazi ranks.

The Germans, reports from the front said, still were pre-occupied with mopping up Yugoslav forces fighting in a wide area at their rear, meanwhile bringing up reinforcements for the offensive into Greece.

Military men here generally expressed doubt that the Germans could carry any successful offensive through the mountainous defiles of northern Greece, where Artillery ambush is possible.

To say the least, the commanders of the Allied forces were reported "optimistic" that any German break through the defence zone would be the costliest thrust of the war.

Greek newspapers declared that the mountain barriers "will prove a slaughter house to the enemy if and when he tries a big attack."

Following the repulse of minor German attacks in the Phlorina Valley, Nazi motorized equipment has been massed in the Bitolj district, and there has been subjected to aerial bombing and machine-gunning.

Those S.S. Troops

Military circles said the SS Adolf Hitler division was composed of picked troops, fully motorized.

"They played an important part in the operations in Holland, but not as a division," it was said. "At that time, they were known as the Adolf Hitler Leibstrandart (bodyguard). They were stationed at Metiz and were at Bucharest, Rumania, in March. Hitler spent part of his Christmas with them.

"To become an SS trooper, there are certain strict rules—including height and racial qualifications of self and wife.

"Their ceremonial dress is a black uniform, but in battle they wear ordinary field grey."

The SS—or Schutzstaffel—was originally constituted as a guard for Hitler.

Slavs Pound Scutari

ROME, April 14 (AP) — Italian dispatches today reported strong mass attacks by Yugoslavs on Mussolini's troops at Scutari, in northern Albania, but claimed the Yugoslavs had been held in check.

At the same time the high command said the railroad centre at Knuin, 50 miles from Zara on the Adriatic coast in western Yugoslavia, is under seige by the Fascists and that four islands off the Yugoslav coast have been occupied.

Il Lavoro Fascista's correspondent on the Albanian front said the Scutari sector had been the scene of sharp fighting in snow, rain and cold for the past 48 hours.

The Yugoslavs made violent drives, the correspondent said, and tried to land troops from boats on the eastern shore of Lake Scutari.

Deny Progress

"Serb troops operating against Scutari are numerous, composed of divisions of the 3rd and 5th armies reinforced from the garrison at Kotor," said the Fascist correspondent. "The attack started 48 hours ago, but has failed to make progress and is effectively held in check by our troops, who are resisting with a line of safety beyond Kopliku about 12 miles beyond Scutari."

The Yugoslav plan, he said, was for three columns to converge on Scutari with a fourth column operating against Precali having the task of forcing a passage over the Drin River and threatening the Italian garrison from the rear.

The operations started from Antivari (Bar) on the coast west of the lake, Podorica, the Vermaschi Valley and the Azen River, he said.

"Two Serb divisions operating in the front line suffered serious losses, but nevertheless the yelling masses throw themselves in ever larger number but uselessly toward our positions," he wrote.

Other dispatches claimed four Yugoslav divisions numbering 60,000 men were routed in the zone between Debar, on the central section of the Albanian frontier, and Lakes Ohrid and Presba.

of open country," said one pilot just returned from the raid. "We let them have everything we had — bombs and machine guns. Many charged wildly to and fro, but could find no cover. We must have inflicted many casualties."

Many Deserting.

The main Italian forces still were concentrating in the northern area, but it was believed there had been considerable disintegration through desertions.

Quiet prevailed in the capital and the British military had the situation well in hand after disarming all Italians and Ethiopians in the city area.

Most shops were open and doing business as usual. Banks were temporarily closed and only military automobiles were allowed in the streets, where Italian white and native police temporarily remain on duty.

The natives, for the most part, seemed apathetic to the change in government and frequently greeted British officers with a Fascist salute—apparently the only one they know.

Many Italian officers and soldiers still were about the city in uniform, but without weapons, and the city was packed with refugees.

There was no apparent shortage of food in any part of the city and the finest of wines and delicacies were available at the best hotels.

The city's airfield was littered with the wreckage of burned-out Savoia bombers destroyed by the South African raiders last week, but business areas remained undamaged.

The bolt hit the tree located in the back yard of the McDonald property and then is believed to have travelled through the ground to the cellars and up into the houses. Mrs. Agnew and Mrs. McDonald both suffered severe cases of shock, but other members of the family were unharmed.

Water connections to several houses were broken. In both the McDonald and Agnew homes plaster was knocked off the walls, dishes were broken, all the windows were shattered, and splinters of wood flew through windows and were embedded in the wall. A shed located 150 feet from the tree had large holes in the three-quarter inch siding through which splinters were blown.

Alderman Blown Out of Bed.

The telephone bell box in the McDonald home had the wood cover shattered. Mrs. P. C. Ballantyne said a stove had tipped over in the McDonald home and that Mrs. McDonald had smothered the red hot coals which spilled on the floor.

Alderman J. H. Brewer, whose home is south of McDonald's, was blown out of bed on to the floor. He ran out and assisted the neighboring families for half an hour and then suffered a reaction and had to be treated by a physician.

The handle bars, seat and pedals were blown off a bicycle belonging to Mr. Agnew and the remaining frame was twisted. A new radio in the McDonald home was blown to pieces. Mr. Agnew said that in his room the bed was shoved from one wall to another.

At the home of Mr. and Mrs. Austen Sneath, on Henry street, all the windows on the south side were shattered. A large splinter from the tree flew through a window and lodged under a bed in which one of their children was sleeping. Glass splinters fell around a son of T. R. Crawford, on Albert street, when he was standing near a window and he narrowly missed being injured.

The major questions outstanding between the two countries are:—

1. A trade agreement which long has been in negotiation.

2. A permanent agreement concerning the rights and privileges of Japan to fishing grounds in the Far East, which also has long been in negotiation.

3. Demaraction of the frontiers of Manchoukuo and Mongolia over which Japan and Russia fought in sporadic encounters in the summers of 1938 and 1939.

A joint commission has been at work on this problem, too, for many months.

Pravda reviewed the Far Eastern developments since the Russian-Japanese war ended in 1905, including the repeated border incidents, and asserted: "Some statesmen in Japan tried to regard the Soviet Union as an object of their aggressive policy. This was a great mistake because the U.S.S.R., while carrying on a peaceful policy, never allowed and never will allow anybody to dictate to it a policy against its interests."

scale campaign of the gravest importance."

The Daily Mail editorial said it is not easy to face realities—"and it is not made easier by the paucity of official news from the British side—however justifiable silence may be on military grounds."

"It is common sense to realize that the British forces in North Africa and Greece face a colossal task and it is no service to them to pretend otherwise. A good deal of nonsense has been written and spoken about Germany's extended and vulnerable lines of communication. The same thing was heard when they thrust deeply into France.

"Once it (the truth) is firmly fixed in our minds we will be able to view the swaying fortunes of war with greater courage and equanimity than if we continue to be prey to comfortable illusions."

Under the sub-heading 'Ostriches' the Daily Herald in an editorial said the British people do not find it easy to take a realistic view of the campaign because "they are constantly distracted by writers and speakers who seek quite superfluously to cheer them up."

"In the last week," the Daily Herald added, "While the tide of war has been heavily against us, the British public has been as grievously misled as was Canute by his sycophantic self-deceiving courtiers.... Our ostriches try to persuade themselves—and us—that every allied triumph is a major triumph, every enemy triumph a sideshow."

Like the Daily Mail, the Herald said, "Admittedly there has been an exasperating shortage of British official news from either (the Balkan or Libyan) war front. But—as happened last Spring—the professional optimists have been only too eager to fill the vacuum."

"The Government has not desired to minimize the difficulties of the struggle. But it must make sure that its policy of realism is understood by those responsible for issuing official news to the nation."

The Herald said in its editorial that it agreed the most crucial struggle will be fought in the Atlantic and around Britain, but added: "Let us expel the childish notion—the imbecile notion—that the trend of war in the Balkans and Africa can have no weighty effect on the 'real war'."

The Evening Standard drew a warning from the German invasion of Libya and asked what would happen "if Hitler attempted the same assault against this island."

"Libya should make an end to all that nonsense that it could not happen here," the paper said, remarking that the English Channel, the Royal Navy, and "a hundred other special circumstances to protect us" might not prevent German tanks and troops from being thrown across from Nazi-held territory in sufficient numbers to surprise and penetrate the British defences.

16 Of Manitoba's Coalition Are Acclaimed

WINNIPEG, April 14 (CP)—Sixteen supporters of Manitoba's coalition government, all members of the last legislature, received acclamations and return of the non-partisan administration was ensured when offical nominations closed Saturday with only 15 opposiiton candidates in the field for the 39 seats to be contested April 22.

Hon. John Bracken, the Liberal-Progressive premier, and five of his cabinet ministers were re-elected without opposition. Those accorded acclamations were 10 Liberal-Progressives, five Conservatives, including Works Minister Errick Willis, Manitoba Conservative Leader, and S. E. Rogers, leaders of the Social Credit group in the last house.

Sixty-eight coalition supporters are in the field for the remaining 39 seats. In addition there are seven candidates who have declared themselves neither for nor against coalition.

The 19 opposition candidates could win only a possible 18 seats because in La Verandrye riding two opposition nominees are opposing Hon. Sauveur Marcoux, Liberal-Progressive minister without portfolio who faces a three-cornered fight with Antonio Lemoire, Opposition Social Credit, and J. H. Graham, Opposiiton Conservative.

Party leaders gave their constituency organizations complete autonomy in nominations and in many cases coalition supporters seeking re-election are opposed by candidates representing another party but also supporting the non-partisan government formed last November by Premier Bracken.

37 Out in Winnipeg

Twenty-seven candidates are contesting the 10-seat Winnipeg constituency. In the 29 single-seat constituencies still to be decided there are 22 straight fights, five three-cornered and two four-cornered contests.

In 10 of the two-man-fights, coalition Liberal-Progressive are opposed by other Coalition supporters. In five of these the opposition is presented by Independents, in three by Co-operative Commonwealth Federation candidates, and in one each by a Conservative and a Social Crediter. Coalition Conservatives are opposed in two ridings by coalition Independent Liberals and in one by a coalition C.C.F. man.

At dissolution of the 20th Legislature on March 12 Liberal-Progressives held 21 seats, Conservatives 15, C.C.F. six, Social Credit five, Independents four and there were four vacancies. Members opposed to Coalition were Miss Salome Halldorson, member for St. George and president of the Manitoba Social Credit League; Gen. H. D. B. Ketchen, Conservative, Winnipeg, and L. St. George Stubbs, Winnipeg Independent. These seek re-election as anti-coalitionists.

The War Today

By J. F. SANDERSON
(Canadian Press Staff Writer.)

Japan apprently has opened a new phase in the war of nerves by negotiating a five-year neutrality accord with Russia, but the full significance of the pact is far from clear.

The agreement, fruit of Foreign Minister Yosuke Matsuoka's European tour, ostensibly would protect Japan's "back door" in the event she instituted aggressive action against her Pacific neighbors or the United States, but some observers see other implications in it.

In the first place, it is argued Russia, like other nations, does not sign treaties of amity from any spirit of sheer altruism. At the moment she has not much to fear from Japan, being neutral herself while Japan is embroiled in the long war with China.

In the second place Russia probably is no more sure than anyone else that she has not something to fear from Hitler's drive toward the East. The golden wheat of Ukrainia might well prove an irresistible temptation to Germany should the day arrive when the Nazi belt has been tightened to the last notch.

Should such a situation arise—and it might occur within the five years this treaty is supposed to live—it would be in Russia's interest to have a non-belligerent Japan at her back door. It would also be to Russia's interest to have Japan committed to benevolence should the Soviet feel bound to go to the aid of Turkey or some other Balkan neighbor.

Russia's reaction to Hungary's participation in the Yugoslav campaign was angry and emphatic, it was noted.

This reaction in fact did as much as anything to counteract ballyhoo in Berlin, Rome and Tokyo which sought to advertise the agreement as heralding a virtual alliance of Russia to the Axis.

Japan officially hailed the pact as a contribution to world peace, a declaration which was rendered less credibe by the truculent tone of the Japanese press which said, among other things, that the treaty "definitely is a blow to the activities and policies of the United States in the Pacific."

PORT HOPE

Board Awaiting Report From Inspector

PORT HOPE, April 14 (ENS) — The solution of what repairs should be made to the West Primary School in Port Hope is a step nearer today as the Board awaits the district inspector's report on the building. The chief inspector is also expected to visit town shortly and inspect the school. Their reports will be considered by the Board in recommending repairs. In the meantime the public school estimates include the sum of $4,000 to improve the two room school.

The West Primary School has been the source of dissatisfaction this winter for the residents in the west end of the town, and reached a climax in a protest meeting at Mayor Sherman Clifford's garage. There the problems of the physical condition were reviewed and a committee appointed to inspect it and interview the Board relative to making repairs. It was contended that the heating plant was inadequate, which was proven when several half days were lost during cold weather, that there should be a fire escape from the second floor; drinking facilities were inadequate; blackboards should be renewed; new heating and new lighting installed and the roof repaired. A short time prior to the protest meeting a contract had been let to install a new lighting system.

The committee interviewed the School Board, stating they were prepared to back the board in its efforts to repair the building. At a later meeting Trustee E. K. Taylor introduced a motion asking the sum of $3,500 for a number of repairs which the west end ratepayers considered would place the school in first class condition. It was pointed out however that the inspectors' reports would have to be considered before tenders could be called for improvements, and so the motion was withdrawn for the time.

U. S. To Defend Greenland

TYPICAL COASTLINE OF GREENLAND

In a move that extends United States defence bases to the very edge of the war zone, President Roosevelt has announced signing of an agreement with the Danish government by which the U.S. will assume defence of Greenland, the Danish colony located approximately 1,000 miles northeast of Maine. Germany recently extended her blockade to Greenland's three-mile limit and Nazi war planes have been flying over the island for a year—as recently as last month. The map shows the location of the huge island in relation to the western hemisphere and to Europe. Shown in the photo, below, is a typical section of Greenland's coast—rugged, mountainous and barren.

Berlin Opera House In Flames

Taken during the blackout that darkened Berlin while waves of British bombers blasted the city, this dramatic picture of the Berlin State Opera House in flames was radioed from the German capital to the United States. The famous building was gutted by the flames set by British bombs, Berlin reported, after the R.A.F. planes had swept back and forth across the city in the heaviest raid of the war on the German capital. In addition to the opera house, which was Adolf Hitler's favorite place of relaxation, many other famous buildings were wrecked or damaged.

COBOURG

Patrol Officers Get New Cars

COBOURG, April 14 (ENS) — Motorists on Highway No. 2 were witnessing the passing of an epoch on Saturday. The long familiar sight of the motorcycle officer passed away on that day when the highway patrol cars came into being. Provincial officer Doug. Wilson, after a day of patrolling, pulled into Cobourg Saturday night in one of the nice news cars.

They are painted white with special trimmings, and carry a red spotlight over the top of the cab, as well as being equipped with the standard police siren.

The cars are a well-known make and are Coupe's, with roomy interiors. Built especially for patrol work they are fast.

The Easter week-end traffic was heavy and the officers' new cars received a full duty baptism. Constable Wilson who patrols this area lives in Port Colborne and is a young "veteran" of the highway force.

Air Battle Is Staged Over Cobourg

COBOURG, April 14.—(ENS)—Cobourg citizens were treated to an aerial spectacle Saturday when three R.C.A.F. planes put on a display.

The three machines were Fairey battle bombers and they staged a practise battle over the north end of town.

The planes were from the R.C.A.F. station at Trenton. They spared no efffort as they "fought" at a very high altitude with their silver-colored wings sparkling in the clear blue sky.

The show began when the squadron arrived overhead about 1:30 and they immediately began to manoeuvre in the intricate battle designs.

The ship roared around on the others tails and then plunging dives and breathless climbs in pursuit of each other were filled with deathless drama and beauty.

The aerial display lasted for well over a half-hour and commanded the attention of the townspeople.

For most of the onlookers it was a thrilling enactment of those daily air dramas put on over there where death comes to the loser.

Here it was just play with no losers but it was so breathtakingly real that it was not hard to imagine the realistic "props" that were missing.

The Real Battle Ground

The Civil Liberties League of Toronto sponsored a meeting which was attended by 300. The editor of the Ottawa Citizen was one of the speakers and his remarks were predicated upon the action brought against his paper recently. It was a matter about which he might well have hesitated to speak in public as the objected-to article seemed to require that the Ottawa paper should subsequently explain that it did not mean to say what many people had understood to be the meaning of its writing.

Running all through the addresses was the idea that the press of Canada was falling down in a rather flat way because it was not sufficiently critical of the Government. There are too many paid publicity men at Ottawa in various departments and they are all seeking to influence editors in favor of the Government, and the people are paying for this attempted influence.

We agree there are many publicity men at Ottawa. Too many of them, but we do not agree that they have any influence on the editors of the country nor yet on the policy of their newspapers. The average editor has been in the business for quite some time, and he has seen governments come and go, and we believe he has a fairly accurate idea of what it is all about.

We know of no easier way to fill up space and attract a degree of attention than to become critical. There is a section of the public which entirely approves of the business of taking the hide off some person or other. When this is done they come to the conclusion that the editor is a fearless individual.

The trouble with that is what your critical editor may not know exactly what he is writing about. We have seen a good deal of that since the war started. It is possibly easy enough for some folk to ignore the plain fact that the Government is the centre of all war effort; ignore too the known truth that the Prime Minister is the individual in Canada more closely in touch with the British Government than any other.

The cabinet at Ottawa has within it a War Ministry, and between these two bodies our plans and efforts are charted. In that way they become the plans and efforts of the Canadian people to fight a battle for their continued existence. The reasonable attitude is that one does not anticipate one hundred per cent. efficiency because we are aware of no place where such a figure is attained. But we do expect sincerity, honesty and determination, and if we are not getting these then the critics would be quite justified in starting into immediate action.

If we can find the proper channel into which to direct intelligent and helpful criticism, then no Government has the right to complain, but the trouble is that with the chronic critic most of his efforts go down neither of these channels. He then becomes nothing but an agency for the creation of the feeling that all is not well, that the people in places of authority are there for their own ends, and our belief is that if this pursued indefinitely a major amount of damage can be done to the best effort which was ever charted.

For our part we have a good deal of faith in the men who are directing our war effort. We do not think of them as Liberals or Conservatives, C.C.F., or anything else. To us they are merely good Canadians who are doing their best to take us through the most trying and the most dangerous period of our existence. For that reason we were not much impressed by the gathering together of 300 people in Toronto under the banner of the Civil Liberties Association. The battle for the liberties of free people is taking place elsewhere and it is sprawling its ugly course pretty much over the entire map of the world.

No Strikes In Germany

The Congress of Industrial Organizations (C.I.O.) steel workers' division settled a strike at Bethlehem a few days ago and now there is prospect of another. The demand is for an increase in wages amounting to 25 cents per hour. And based on an eight-hour day that is $2 per day, and when one begins to count men by the tens of thousands that soon runs into steep money.

A Washington correspondent of the Examiner says industry in U.S. would probably welcome supervision by the government, and one of the main reasons is that the demands for more pay are playing hob with the price at which war contracts have been taken. Evidently the war order business in United States is much the same as in Canada. There is not a great deal of profit being made out of it, and if a strike comes and shoves wages to a point much higher than when the orders were received, then there is going to be no profit at all, and probably a loss.

Without stopping to argue the point at all, there is one bad snag in the way and it seems to outweigh all other argument. United States is not exactly in the war, but it is close to it, and the war is being conducted against an enemy who tolerates no strikes and where hours and wages and conditions are all set forth and the workers have nothing to do with the arrangement.

Not Seeking Farm Work

Arrangements have been made so that students attending Collegiate Institutes may be released to assist on the farms during the next two months. It was reported to the Board of Education that virtually every boy and girl who had volunteered for farm work had come from the farm. The city pupils would prefer working in industrial establishments, but a good many of them may be disappointed if they are believing they can work there and then go back to school in early fall. It would hardly be worth while as training is necessary in most factory operations today.

The farming community need not feel slighted because young people from the Collegiate who reside in the city are not minded to go on the broad acres of the rural districts. A youth who knows nothing at all about farm work would be hard put to make himself handy on the farm right now. The season for seeding is on and that takes a practical hand. He couldn't milk a cow and the feeding of a dairy herd today is not a simple matter.

We have known boys from a city who went to the farm and stuck through the season, but they were exceptions.

Very Nicely Done

The Canadian General Electric have issued a nicely-illustrated booklet of 36 pages, and the purpose is to tell something about the C.G. and its factories at Peterborough, three in Toronto, one at Lachine. With the head office in Toronto, there are 25 branch offices and 15 warehouses in all.

We learned by looking through this book that the Canadian General Electric spends about $2,000,000 per year in electrical research.

Judging by the amount of space given over to pictorial reference to the Peterborough works, this city ranks high in the history and estimation of the C.G., and that of course is exactly as it ought to be. The published sketch of the local plant includes the new additions, and makes an impressive looking establishment. Five full pages are devoted to Peterborough works, and some idea of the size of operations is given in a picture where a forged steel shaft for a large waterwheel-driven generator is being turned on a lathe. That particular shaft is 22 feet long and three feet in diameter and weighs over 34 tons, and yet it is being machined to a tolerance of 1-1000 inch.

There is nothing boastful in the preparation of the material; in fact it is rather restrained in manner. It covers all the Canadian branches, and is being furnished to Canadian executives and all employees of the Canadian General Electric. It is also a nice piece of publicity work for Peterborough.

It's a Strange Old Habit

This time it happened in Kingston, but it is not confined to that city and there is nothing new about it. Just one of those cases where two men were drunk; they were wobbling about on the highway at the western approach to the city and police locked them up.

When they appeared before the magistrate they both stated they were anxious to be on the way, and they desired to head for Toronto, and if given the opportunity to do so they would start out for that place at once. They were through with Kingston, washed up on the town. Toronto seemed to be calling them for some reason or other. So on that plea they were sent on the way with the usual warning by the magistrate.

Every town and city in the country has been doing that same thing for years. These two men were not good enough for Kingston, so they were dumped off on Toronto or any place in between where they might land. That system survives because it follows the lines of least resistance. It's the easiest thing to do, but apart from that there is not a thing to commend it. It is no use putting a fine on them, because they couldn't pay it, and then they'd have to be kept in jail. We really have no place for them; we have no uniform system for dealing with them, so they just trundle about from one place to another, and when they fall into the hands of police they are fairly certain it will mean nothing more than being told eventually to get out of here. And always are they given what is supposed to be a stiff warning by the magistrate which has about as much effect as pouring water on a duck's back.

We Are Progressing

Of course we do things in a different way now, and admittedly we must be up to date. He who lags behind is lost, and he who adheres to the custom of his youth is hard to find. We have been reading figures about butter prepared by men who are saturated with statistics. They must count each pound as it comes in.

There was to have been a butter shortage several months ago, but it skidded, and the War Times Prices and Trade Board claim credit for the change. Hotels and such places were told to go easy on the butter, and the result was that we started the year 1940 with 33,600,000 pounds of butter on hand—or in storage.

There was a time when people never paid attention to such matters, and possibly no one could then have told how much butter was in the land. It used to be brought in from the country in crocks stowed away under the flap at the back of the buggy, and it was sold or traded at the store. The good butter was kept for home consumption, and that which was not so good was shipped from Montreal to the British market, and it probably gave us a reputation there which was hard enough to live down.

People came into the stores then and they always wanted to sample the butter, and they'd use a dime or the thumb nail to convey the sample to the mouth. It used to be dished out in what they called wooden boats, and if a person walked home in a hurry on a hot day the chances of getting there before much damage had been done were fairly good.

But no one ever thought to inquire about the supply for the Dominion. If there was some which was fairly good in the grocery store that was sufficient. Of course butter today is better. Very much better. One can go into any store and secure it without asking questions or biting off samples, and then too we are fenced about with figures and fortified with factual knowledge which in other times was unknown. Possibly we are progressing, but we always have the feeling also that we have to pay for the statistics.

NOTE AND COMMENT

Your contribution to the British War Victims' Fund will be gratefully received if left at the Examiner Office.

About a quarter of a century ago Lloyd George was declaring the war would be won with "a silver bullet." Does that regulation still hold good?

Thieves in Hamilton stole a truck and then used it to take away a safe stolen from the same company. And that, we think, is rubbing it in slightly too much.

It is stated that in spite of war services there are sufficient doctors in the country to look after civilian needs. Most doctors believe the number is actually too great.

THIS IS POETRY.

And at this season of the year,
We view each Easter bonnet.
And then we try to get it clear
How much they spent upon it.

CRITIC

(By A.R.K.)

¶ The arm chair critic has his day, there's none to check on what he'll say, his tongue can flop with ease; he seems to think that war's a game, and that it may be rather tame, like shooting things with peas.

¶ If he were bossing things a while, he wouldn't budge a foot or mile, he'd stick just where he was; he'd show the enemy some tricks, and in him he'd put cuts and nicks, a tiger and its claws.

¶ He's never been up in a plane, but knows about them just the same, he'd like to have a try; he'd pop them with his little gun, and bowl them over one by one, and chase them from the sky.

¶ He's never crossed the ocean yet, but knows the submarines he'd get, he has his plans well laid; he'd blow them from the depths below, or else he'd take their wrecks in tow, and sail on unafraid.

¶ He never wore a uniform, nor answered to a bugle horn, but he knows every move; he has his tactics in his lap, just how he'd lay a careful trap, his scheme he'd like to prove.

¶ And so the arm-chair critic blows, and bleats about the things he knows, he thinks he's doing his bit; but when he gets his tongue aswish, it's then that I profoundly wish — that he'd just up and quit.

Industry Might Welcome Control By Government

By CHARLES P. STEWART

WASHINGTON.—Quite a few of the big industrialists, with plants adapted to the production of supplies essential to the U.S. nationally defensive program and to aid-the-democracies, purposes aren't a bit averse to having their facilities taken over and managed by the government during the present emergency period.

Chas. P. Stewart

It's a suggestion which, coming from such authorities as Production Direction William S. Knudsen, sounds a good deal like a threat, but some of the industrialists interpret it as verging on a promise.

Of course, it's assumed that Uncle Sam will pay fair rentals for the facilities referred to, if he "commandeers" them, as the expression is. And advocates of the plan urge its adoption only on a rental basis! they don't propose outright confiscation. The industrialists aren't altogether indisposed to take Uncle Samuel up on it.

Washington's simply swarming with their representatives and a scattering of their principals that they'll welcome having their plants governmentally commandeered, but it's easy to overhear 'em whispering it to one another.

The idea's this:

'The government, in letting its contracts, is driving a succession of pretty hard bargains—according to the industrial spokesmen's account, at any rate.

They're afraid it may get tighter-fisted yet, too, with all the gossip there is about enormous emergency profits and with congress just starting an investigation of production bottlenecks, strikes and other stoppages. Labor's being popularly blamed for a considerable share in obstructiveness, but management's coming in for a sizable proportion of public criticism.

LITTLE PROFIT SEEN

NOW, the industrialists' version is that they're not due to make much money on the strength of the bargains they've concluded thus far, and some say their concerns will be lucky to break even.

That's as of this moment's writing.

What worries the industrial folk more especially, however, is the prospect, foreseen by them, that their costs of operation will increase very rapidly and formidably. Their workers already demand higher wages, as hinted at by the current strike epidemic. The tale of the strikers' employers is that they can't stand it on the basis of their existing contracts. Besides, they think (or profess to think) that a big bulge in the costs of their raw materials is imminent.

If their apprehensions are realized, which they're dismally gambling on, they predict that they shortly will be losing financially like fury.

The head of a big Atlantic shipbuilding company was in Washington recently, negotiating with Director Knudsen's Office of Production management. I can't quote him by name, but he told me:

"We can't agree to the government's shipbuilding terms except at desperate risks to our ownership. Yet we've got to agree to 'em, or be branded as unpatriotic. What we hope is that we'll get so much repair work that it'll keep us busy up to the limit of our capacity. We can charge only rock-bottom figures even for repair work, but there's a little more margin on that than there is on actual building. Our danger is that repairs won't fully occupy us; that we'll have to build, too, under government regulation. That'll ruin us."

HOW IT WOULD WORK

BUT if a plant's governmentally commandeered:

Then its ownership will get its rental from Uncle Samuel, anyway. At worst, it won't be running at a loss. And Uncle Sammy will have all the strike headaches. Or, if his workers do strike on him, he can conscript 'em, at whatever rate of pay he dictates. A private employer can't do it. He's between the upper and the nether millstones.

I've no intention of arguing the industrialists' case for 'em. I'm no authority on the subject of their economics. For whatever it may be worth, I'm merely repeating what I hear from 'em, as a reportorial listener at their keyhole.

Anyhow, Uncle Samuel doesn't seem to frighten 'em much by talking about commandeering their plants — at a reasonable rental rate.

RETORT COURTEOUS

House of Commons Hansard

Mr. Coldwell: May I use the term "unfair"?

The Chairman: No, because it would be an offence—

Mr. Coldwell: Will the chairman tell me where I can find the word described as unparliamentary?

The Chairman: Any term which is offensive to an honorable member is unparliamentary.

Some honorable Members: Oh, oh.

The Chairman: Order.

Mr. Martin: For instance, if you call me a "Tory," that would be very offensive.

Mr. Rowe: To both sides.

THAT WAR FEELING

"Being by the sea for more than a fortnight makes you think there's something wrong, don't it?"

—London Daily Herald.

• Recent Events In Libya

WHEN General Wavell's armies swept through Libya to Bengasi they destroyed utterly the Italian forces which had been massed for an invasion of Egypt. The immediate objective, removal of danger to the Suez Canal, was achieved in a brilliant campaign, and Graziani's army no longer was a going concern.

General Wavell then could have advanced to Tripoli without much trouble or, with his happy warriors who had beaten the Italians in the desert, he could have held his new line against any conceivable opposition. But events were moving swiftly, his men were needed urgently elsewhere, and deliberate chances had to be taken.

Some regiments which fought at Tobruk and Derna were in action a little later in Eritrea and Ethiopia. These stout fighters soon will be available for new tasks.

But it was Greece which claimed most of these seasoned fighters. An Associated Press correspondent at Athens has been permitted by the censorship to tell us that the British Army in Greece "is composed of the pick of the Army of the Nile....famous British regiments, hardy Australian troops who rolled back the Italians in Libya, fresh New Zealand forces and many special units drawn from all parts of the Empire."

These movements must have left British forces in Libya dangerously thin. The Germans realized this, of course, and while the British naval forces in the Mediterranean found their main duty in the escort of troops and supply ships the Germans succeeded in moving across troops and tanks—how many we do not know—to reinforce the terrified Italians in Tripolitania. Then, on the eve of the opening of the German offensive in the Balkans, this Italo-German force moved in the direction of Bengasi, no doubt in the hope that British troops would be withdrawn from Greece and Italian East Africa to meet the new threat.

That did not happen. General Wavell chose instead to evacuate Bengasi, to give up territory while he moved back to a point where battle safely can be joined. That moment has not yet arrived. This German success is unpleasant, but its importance should not be over-emphasized. —Ottawa Journal.

• How the Greeks View War

THE unbreakable spirit of valiant Greece is vividly revealed in a short letter received the other day in Regina. It was written Jan. 21 last by Grigorios Kikizas, 44-year-old merchant in Athens, and a brother-in-law of George and Nick Kangles, of Regina. Six of the seven Kikizas brothers are in the Greek army.

The letter reads, in part:

"I am writing to you from our small but very valiant motherland Hellas, where we are fighting for our honor, for our religion and for everything that we hold holy and sacred, and with the help of God the final victory will be ours.

"Our oldest brother Athanasios is staying home.

"All our other brothers are in the battle. I expect to be there myself in a few days.

"You do not know with what enthusiasm we go to the war, or with what fury we fight, with no regard if the enemy are many and we only a few. Neither do we think of danger or death.

"We have only one thought—one and only wish, and that is that Greece must live and she will live free.

"We pray and hope that God will help Great Britain and Greece, to get rid of their foul enemies."

There you have Greece in 1941. Six brothers from one family fighting side by side. Nothing matters except that they stand with Britain and hold back the invader. Death does not matter so long as Greece and liberty live.—Regina Leader-Post.

A Bit of Nonsense

Good Investment?

"Brown talks in riddles. What's this 'fifty per cent preferred' he's always talking about?"

"Oh, that's what he calls his better half, Mrs. Brown, since he started dabbling in investments."

House-Breaker

Customer: "Can I exchange this unbreakable doll."

Shop Assistant: "Is there something wrong with it?"

Running Back

"What are you turning around for, John?"

"I've just discovered we've come five hundred and ten miles since morning; we'll have to run back to the five-hundred-mile mark and change the oil."

Italy's Sneak Thief

The spread of cinema-acquired American slang among schoolboys is illustrated by this "howler." In the pre-Christmas examination a class of evacuated Cockney boys at a school in the West was asked what was understood by the expression "the heel of Italy."

One boy wrote: "Mussolini is the heel of Italy."

Cake Walk

"What have you been up to?" his mother demanded.

"I've been fighting Billy Briggs," Tommy confessed.

"Well, take him some cake and make friends."

Tommy did so, but in the afternoon he came home with another black eye.

"Good gracious!" his mother exclaimed. "What has happened now?"

"He did it again," Tommy said sadly. "And he wants more cake tomorrow."

THE SAME OLD TALE

WHEREVER else the Germans may be hiding their secret weapons of overwhelming power and novelty, they have certainly nothing new to show us in the sphere of falsehood.

As liars they are persistent rather than inspired; the poverty of their invention is revealed once more in the claim that they have gone into Bulgaria because the British were meditating a descent on that country. So with Norway, so with Denmark, so with Holland and Belgium. Nobody believed them then and nobody will believe them now; and there is, of course, not the slightest reason to suppose that they believe the tale themselves; the only reason why it is brought out again is because they cannot think of a better.

It seems a curious feat to have risked—and achieved—a world-wide reputation for hard lying on the strength of such a limited repertory. It is an odd reputation. Nobody believes a German and nobody—even after all this practice—expects them to produce a really new or effective falsehood.—Manchester Guardian.

QUESTION FOR UNIONS

WE sometimes envy the other fellow's pasture, but most of us are not in a position to do much about it. Not so with the unions. With their tremendous dues and accumulated funds, what is to prevent them from operating their own plants in all industries? They love to criticize management and its profits; but if the industrialists have it so soft, why don't they horn in on the racket? Could it be that the unions while willing to share in the profits don't want to risk the losses?—RALPH L. BAGGS, New York.—New York Times.

DUTCH COURAGE

WE LEARN from Holland that a man dressed in nothing but a top hat and loin cloth paraded in one of Amsterdam's main squares a few days ago. A snowstorm was raging, and a crowd gathered.

The man said: "I am very cold, but my ration card for textiles does not give me enough points to buy sufficient clothes."

He was arrested.—Glasgow Herald.

A Bible Message For Today . . . .

Ye have heard that it was said by them of old time, Thou shalt not kill, and whosoever shall kill shall be in danger of the judgment.

But I say unto you, Whosoever is angry with his brother without a cause shall be in danger of the judgment, and whosoever shall say to his brother, Raca, shall be in danger of the council; but whosoever shall say, Thou fool shall be in danger of hell fire.

Therefore if thou bring thy gift to the altar, and there rememberest that thy brother has aught against thee;

Leave there thy gift before the altar and go thy way, first be reconciled to thy brother and then come and offer thy gift.—Matthew 5.

AMERICAN ACCENT

NOT LONG AGO a highly-placed official lady in this country urged English schoolgirl evacuees here to keep their language clear and "not copy the United States."

On the recent visits to Canada of Senator Claude Pepper and Wendell L. Willkie it was not noted that the enthusiasm of the ovations given to them was lessened in any way because they spoke English with an American accent.—Financial Post.

Regina Takes Western Title

CALGARY, April 14.—(CP).— Regina Rangers won the Western Canada senior hockey title by scoring two quick goals late in the third period to edge out Lethbridge Maple Leafs, 3-2, here Saturday night.

With less than two minutes to go and most of the crowd confident the Alberta champions would hold their one-goal lead, the speedy Reginans counted twice in sixteen seconds to gain their third win in the best-of-five series. Lethbridge won only the second game.

Alf Kunkel fired the goals that brought Rangers from behind twice and Frank Mario, 19-year-old hero of the first game of the series when he scored the only goal, shot the winning counter for Rangers. Alex Kaleta and Marshall Darling scored for Lethbridge.

The Allan Cup finals will open in Calgary next Saturday with Regina meeting either Montreal Royals or Sydney Millionaires who are tied with two wins each in the Eastern finals. Venue of the remaining games of the best-of-five Canadian final series will be announced later.

LARRY DAVIS

Infielder Lawrence Columbus Davis, the talkative Duke university youngster with the Philadelphia Athletics late last season, may be the regular Mack second baseman this year.

Davis, nicknamed "Crash," drew attention last September with his spirited play, his whistling and yodeling as he pepped up his teammates during the game. He played a fair brand of ball in the field and wound up the season by hitting .269.

He was signed as a free agent by the Macks on graduating from Duke university.

SPORTS – DAY BY DAY

By FRED D. CRAIG

Throwing all the wise folk who have been maintaining that the "fix" is always in so far as professional playoffs are concerned for a total loss, the Boston Bruins finished a new page in hockey history Saturday night by trimming Detroit Red Wings 3 to 1 and thus becoming the first club ever to take the cup finals in four straight games. The Bruins once more came from behind to win their fourth victory for the Red Wings, battling with every ounce they had, scored first and led 1 to 0 at the end of the first period. Boston however were too powerful to be held in check for the whole sixty minutes and came on to win and thus get the hockey series out of the way before baseball moves in to take the centre of the stage. Once again Frankie Brimsek who has been an inspired goalie all through the playoffs rose to the top of his form and with nothing to worry about on the last line of defence the Bruins just had to stay in there and battle until they got a scoring break. And when it came they as usual were able to cash on the opening. It is an old custom of the Boston outfit and helps to explain why they win so many close games.

* * * * * *

The Bruins are worthy winners of the Stanley Cup and no one will begrudge them the laurels. After a shaky start which saw the Maple Leafs pull far out in front the Boston team pulled themselves together last December and from then on have been the outstanding club in hockey. Without checking back on the exact figures the Bruins have only been beaten four times in their last 44 starts, including 11 playoff games and that surely is a performance worthy of champions. Their hardest obstacle proved to be the Toronto club and when they lost Cowley and had Bauer on the injured list they came close to being wrecked. But they were strong enough to rally effectively on the brink of elimination and come through in the last two games of the Toronto series and then take Detroit in four straight, to wind up the playoffs with a six-game winning streak.

* * * * * *

The Red Wings have nothing to be ashamed of despite the loss of four battles in a row. They did not rate to beat Boston for they have been nothing better than a third-place club all season and came close to being ousted out of that slot in the last couple of weeks of the regular campaign. Their performance in the cup finals was, therefore, better, than the record of four defeats without a comeback indicates, for they had to play without Ebbie Goodfellow and Eddie Wares and in spite of that loss made every game a fight. Two of them were lost by the smallest possible margin and the others by only two goals and they succeeded in holding the powerful Bruins to an average of three counters a game which shows that the Detroiters were in no sense of the word pushovers.

Welcome, King Baseball

Old King Baseball slips out from the wings today and takes his initial bow with a single game scheduled this afternoon between the New York Yanks and Washington Senators with President Roosevelt slated to toss out the first ball. Tomorrow both the big leagues are scheduled to open with a full card. It is difficult to realize that since those hectic world series battles between the Cincinnati Reds and the Detroit Tigers last fall the National Hockey League has completed a regular 48-game schedule and a long series of playoffs and that another ball season is here but nevertheless its true and so the hot stove league will move out of winter quarters and begin piling up dope and impressions from the current drama to use in next winter's sessions. It looks like a good season in both loops with plenty of competition and neither title in the bag.

* * * * * *

Trying to pick the winners is the favorite sport right now and it is not an easy job, especially in the American league where there are more than the usual amount of "if's" to worry about. First there is Detroit with the possibility that the army may get Hank Greenberg. Then there's the Yanks, with a revamped infield and the big "if" in their case is to be found in the pitching department. Cleveland's hopes are built largely upon Bob Feller. If anything were to happen to that good right arm the Indians would go into a tailspin. And finally there's Boston with power galore, batting in flocks of runs all through the grape fruit league schedule but uncertain yet as to whether the club has been able to dig up one winning pitcher from the flock of youngsters who have been training with the Red Sox. The National League outlook is more certain. The Dodgers will be tough opposition but the Cincinnati Reds rate to repeat on their pitching with Derringer, Walters and Thompson sure fire and the veteran Monte Pearson likely to be the Reds' ace-in-the-hole.

* * * * * *

With no signs of baseball organization here Peterborough ball players are beginning to lament the outlook. Al and Grant Clark, home for Easter from Clarkson, where they have had a splendid hockey season, both expressed regret when they heard that the prospects for a Peterborough club were not bright. Both hoped to play ball here this summer. Bill Calladine arrived home from Philadelphia all primed up for a baseball comeback and it is understood that Eddie Starr would like to have another season or two. Of course enthusiasts like Chuck Kearns and Bun Kingdon are rarin' to go and the outlook in Peterborough has both of them down. Some of the players, in fact, said they would be willing to drop back into intermediate rank just so long as they could get into an occasional ball game.

* * * * * *

The Generals Do It Again

Once more the Oshawa Generals, when they were just getting ready to count them out, have snapped back into winning form and as a result the Eastern junior final series is tied up at two games each and everything hinging on the result of the fifth game to be played in Toronto tomorrow night. Saturday night Tracy Shaw's amazing kids staged a drive that the Royals managed to stave off for two periods but that finally cracked through in the final session to give Oshawa a 7 to 1 victory. It would have been even more decisive than that if Ritchie in the Royal nets had not put on an astounding show in the second period by holding Oshawa off practically single-handed in the face of repeated attacks. On the strength of Saturday night's performance the Generals should be overwhelming favorites to take the Eastern Canada honors, if it were not for the fact that they have bogged down twice in the series with Royals and might do it again in the final tussle.

There was a flurry at the C.A.H.A. annual meeting Saturday when Cecil Duncan of Ottawa charged that the central committee had exceeded its authority in calling off the Eastern Canada intermediate playoffs this season, after a motion had been passed at the previous annual meeting ordering the series to be arranged. President Dudley named three reasons for abandoning the playoffs but only the first mattered. That was the unsatisfactory financial showing last season when the Petes defeated Maxwell in a series for the championship. The two games were played at Ottawa and did not prove a money-maker, so naturally the hockey moguls immediately lost interest in Eastern Canada intermediate titles. If there's no gold in the hills the C.A.H.A. is not concerned.

Sporting Chili Con Carne: Milt Schmidt figured in two of Boston's three goals Saturday night. He and Frankie Brimsek have undoubtedly been the outstanding Bruin stars of the series....One of the best pre-season pitching performances was the feat of Milnar and Harder for the Indians in holding the New York Giants to 2 hits Saturday....Out West the Western junior final is all tied up again by reason by the Saskatcon Quakers defeating the Winnipeg Rangers 10 to 5....Each team has now won two games and they are playing a best of seven series. Looks like the Memorial Cup battle will not be decided until May by which time only the contending players will give a hang which outfit wins....These long playoffs are making a joke out of hockey and the public is beginning to yawn.

Cecil Duncan Is Most Critical About Abandoning Playoffs

CALGARY, April 14 — (CP). — Cecil Duncan, Ottawa, told the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association annual convention here on Saturday that the "central committee" had exceeded its authority in ordering the Eastern Canada intermediate playoffs abandoned this season.

Mr. Duncan, a former president, asserted the committee had no authority to rescind the motion of last year's annual convention providing for the playdowns.

The Eastern intermediate series created much interest last season, said Mr. Duncan, and although not a financial success, this year's playoffs would have been. He spoke during discussion of a report on the Western intermediate playoffs this spring.

Three Main Reasons.

George Dudley of Midland, Ont., C.A.H.A. president, replied that theer were three reasons for abandoning the Eastern series — the unsatisfactory financial showing last year; the serious war situation and its possible unpredictable effects, and the improbability of the Maritimes and Quebec entering teams.

Mr. Dudley added it might be "well worth" trying to stage the series agin next year, and promised there would be no alteration of any decisions of the annual meeting. Plans for 1941-42 will be discussed at later sessions of the convention.

The thirty-odd delegates in their brief opening session Saturday also pased revised regulations calculated to provide quicker decisions on transfers and clarify clauses covering transfers, and voted life memberships to Mr. Duncan and Prof. W. G. Hardy of Edmonton, another former president.

The chief new features of the transfer regulations are that applications for transfers must be considered and replied to within certain time limits, and players must have transfers before they participate in games for the new clubs.

Approval of life memberships for Mr. Duncan and Dr. Hardy gives the association six officials in that clasification. Already life members are C. C. Robinson, Winnipeg; W. Northey, Montreal; J. T. Sutherland, Kingston, and W. A. Fry Dunnville.

Business sesions will resume this morning, when it is expected remaining resolutions will be discussed before the delegates discuss submissions from the Rules Committee.

Dollars To Doughnuts

YESTERDAY: Anthony tells Bee more about himself, how his parents died when he was still in school, how his father's friend educated him. Bee almost admits her real identity, but doesn't, fearing the knowledge might kill Anthony's love for her. She does tell him about Grandfather Huntington, mentioning no names. A policeman finally ousts them from the park.

HE LOVES ME!
CHAPTER XVI

In the morning, Beatrice regarded her black store dress with dissatisfaction, before she put it on.

"I want to look beautiful for Anthony," she thought. "I want a dress like some of those at home . . . "

All those dresses, hanging in the closets in the apartment on Park Avenue, were as far away as if they were on some other continent. The jewelry in the antique silver box, the rows of slippers and hats, were useless now.

"All I've got is this. Yet Anthony fell in love with me. He didn't fall in love with my clothes, or my haircomb, or my car. I have nothing. Nothing at all. He fell in love with me."

"What time did you get in last night?" Toby demanded, from the kitchenet where she was pouring coffee. "Terry stayed until practically dawn and still you didn't come . . . " She yawned. "Another day. As they say in the army, another day, another dollar. A million days, a million dollars. Oh, Vera, what in thunder were you and Terry fighting about? You kept me awake."

"The same old thing," Vera shrugged. She looked more beautiful than ever, this morning. Her brown eyes had such thick, silky lashes, and her five-feet-nine inches of lovely curves under the navy blue crepe illustrated afresh why she was constantly phoned about modeling jobs which she never took. "If I married Terry, I'd live on 16-millimeter film, served up with burnt-out flash bulbs."

"You're such a far-seeing wench," said Toby. "Why do you pick up these wet smacks and then make them miserable because you can't carry them?"

Astonishingly, Vera's red lips

BRUINS WHIP WINGS 3-1 TO TAKE STANLEY CUP IN FOUR GAMES

Boston Outfit First Team To Win In Four

DETROIT, April 14 — (CP). — Boston Bruins today prepared to disband, having completed their business for the season. To home in widely-scattered parts of Canada and the United States went players to rest, while back to Boston, carrying all the booty available to a National Hockey League team, will go Bruins' Manager, Art Ross and the club president, Weston Adams.

Bruins wrote finis with a business-like flourish to the 1940-41 professional hockey season Saturday night when they scored three times in the second period to beat Detroit Red Wings, 3-1, and complete a four-game sweep in the Stanley Cup final. The best-of-seven series ended in straight games before one of the smallest crowds in N.H.L. play-off history —only 8,125 paid admission.

Milt Schmidt raised his point total to 11 with two assists, and made the plays for both tying and winning goals after Carl Liscombe had scored from Syd. Howe and Gus Giesebrecht for Detroit in a fast first period. While Jimmy Orlando was off for a minor penalty early in the second period, leaving Detroit short-handed, Schmidt made one play to Flash Hollett for the tying goal and another to Bobby Bauer for the winner. Later in the same period Eddie Wiseman wound up the scoring with a 40-foot drive after a play with Roy Conacher and Pat McReavy.

Major Penalties

Feeling ran high at times during the game. In the second period a four-man outbreak threatened but failed to materialize. Late in the third Carl Liscombe and Pat McReavy tangled near the Boston bench after a shoving affray around the Boston goal. Both received five-minute penalties.

It was the third Stanley Cup for Boston in the club's history, the others coming in the seasons of 1928-29 and 1938-39. The Boston club this season set an admirable record, finishing first in the standings over the 48-game schedule, which was featured at one time by Bruins' 23-game string of unbeaten games.

Boston's victory marked the first time a Stanley Cup champion ever has won that honor in four straight games. Six years ago Montreal Maroons took the cup in straight contests from Toronto Maple Leafs, but that series was best-of-five.

BOB HENRIKSEN

Perhaps he won't stick this year, but Bob Henriksen, 19-year-old schoolboy star being given a trial by the Chicago Cubs, is expected to be a real big leaguer some day.

Henriksen, who is a Swedish youth, pitched a seven-inning masterpiece for Hollywood high school, striking out 21 men. That's what attracted the eye of Cub scouts.

Henriksen is a right-handed hurler, stands two inches over six feet and weighs 172 pounds. He was born in Stockholm, Sweden.

Yankees Open 1941 Seaosn With Senators

By JUDSON BAILEY
(Associated Press Sports Writer.)

NEW YORK, April 14—(AP). — Baseball bows in today with the first skirmish of the 1941 major league season.

The opening game matches New York Yankees and Washington Senators in the Capital, with President Roosevelt giving the affair a formal flourish by throwing out the first ball. For the rest of the clubs the firing will start tomorrow.

And while they waited today the pilots looked into the crystal ball and reached the unanimous conclusion that all clubs are stronger than last year, the races in both the Nation and American leagues will be wide open, and the season generally should be successful.

Connie Mack, starting his 41st year at the helm of Philadelphia Athletics and his 48th as a manager, keynoted the comments collected by The Associated Press with an observation that the war tension, increased employment and freer circulation of money would be reflected to the advantage of all baseball leagues.

"People are keyed up more than they realize," said the 78-year-old sage of the diamond, "and I expect they will be wanting to go to the ball games and relax."

Mack gained considerable repute as a prophet last Spring by forecasting the downfall of the Yankees and correctly spotting them in third place. But this year he is inclined to think the New York bombers will hit the target in the American League.

Del Baker, manager of Detroit's surprise pennant winners of last year, forecast a five-team race. "I think it will be a wide-open race between Detroit, New York, Cleveland, Boston and Chicago," he said. "We appear stronger than last year, but it will all depend whether Greenberg, York, Gehringer and Newsom can come up with big years."

Joe McCarthy of the Yankees said: "I will say I'm not worrying about my team."

The virtually unanimous opinion of the National League pilots is that Cincinnati's world champions hold the key to the finish.

Junior Series Is Tied In West

SASKATOON, April 14— (CP).— Predictions the Western Canada junior hockey championship series would go the full seven games carried extra weight to-day as Saskatoon Quakers and Winnipeg Rangers prepared for the fifth game here to-night with the score in games standing at two apiece.

Rangers gained a 2-1 edge in games in the first three contests played on Winnipeg ice, but when the teams moved here for the fourth game on Saturday, Quakers showed the value of familiar surroundings and smothered the Manitoba champions 10-5.

A crowd of 2,500 saw Saturday's battle. Quakers set up a 2-0 lead in the first two minutes here on Saturday, and had the best of a 4-2 score when the first period ended. increased the lead to 5-2 in the second, and counted five times to Rangers' three in a wide-open closing session.

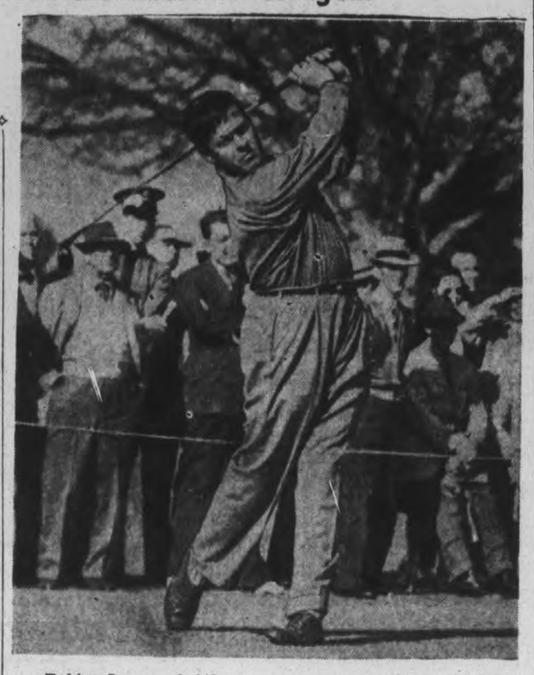
The Old Master Tries Again



Bobby Jones, of Atlanta, shows much of his old long-driving style in teeing off during the Masters' golf tournament at Augusta, Ga. A big gallery trailed the 'grand slam' champion of golf a decade ago. He finished down the list with 307. Craig Wood won the tournay with 280.

Generals Win Fourth Game To Tie Series

By ROBERT CLARKE
(Canadian Press Staff Writer.)

TORONTO, April 14.—(CP)—A single game held the answer today to the question of whether Oshawa Generals will represent the East in the Memorial Cup hockey finals, as they have done for the past three years, or whether the honor will go to Montreal Royals.

The Generals tied the Eastern junior final at two game apiece here Saturday night, by defeating Royals 7-1 before about 6,500 fans. The deciding game will be played here Tuesday night.

Generals, winners of the Memorial Cup the last two seasons, held command throughout the fourth contest and only the brilliant work of Goalie Ross Ritchie and the steady defence play of Bruce Ward and Bill Southwick kept the score from mounting higher.

Needing victory to escape elimination, the Generals swept to the offensive from the start. They scored twice in the first period and five times in the third as Royals were held to a single tally in the first period by Bobby Carragher. The Generals now are favorites to take the final contest.

Oshawa's two first period goals went to Norm McAtee. High goal-getter of the night, however, was Roy Sawyer, who scored three of the third period tallies. The other two Oshawa scores went to Ron Wilson and Jim Conacher.

Carragher boosted his total to six with his tally, which was sandwiched between the two scored by McAtee, and became his team's high scorer.

The goal that clinched the game for the Generals was Sawyer's first in the last period, which made the score 3-1. It came while Royals were short two men through penalties.

Newly-Crowned Stanley Cup Champion's Dressing Room Becomes A Howling Cave

DETROIT, April 14. — (CP).— Boston Bruins, newly crowned Stanley Cup champions, turned their dressing-room into a howling cave on Saturday night as they gathered around the shiny piece of hardware for which they had battled since they won the National Hockey League championship nearly a month ago.

Manager Art Ross, who has called the 1940-41 edition of the Bruins "the best ever," moved from player to player, giving each a handshake and a word of congratulation.

After he had posed with his sweating athletes, grouped around the training table, he stepped to the end of the room, where he and Frankie Brimsek, goalie, held the Stanley Cup for photographers.

One of the first Detroit players to enter with congratulations for the victorious Bruins was big Ebbie Goodfellow, who was unable to play in the final series because of a leg injury.

Later, as the Stanley Cup winers filed out of their dressing-room door, they were mobbed by autograph hunters.

The Wings, not humbled by four straight defeats by the champions, appeared in high spirit. For the most part, they acted as if they were glad it was all over.

Defenceman Jimmy Orlando, who has a reputation as a fighter on and off the ice, joked with his fellow-players that he was 'ready for eight rounds," in spite of the bruising Cup final. Only player who appeared to have suffered in the battle was Pat McReavy, Boston right winger, who was found later holding an ice-pack to his head. He also had a slight cut across the nose, possibly from his fight with Carl Liscombe.

Sydney Evens Up Series With Montreal

MONTREAL, April 14.—(CP)—The Allan Cup stock of Sydney Millionaires, selling off before their 8-5 victory over Montreal Royals on Saturday night, hovered at a new peak today as the clubs girded for a "sudden-death" clash to decide their Eastern senior hockey final.

The rousing Millionaire raly, gained on a daring display of wide-open tactics, left them an even-money bets with the Quebec champions for the deciding game here tonight. It will be a "play to the finish" match, with the winner meeting Regina Rangers, Western champions, in the Allan Cup final.

Set back on their heels by two early Sydney goals, Royals never stopped trying on Saturday night. Facing Millionaire machine at its best, they finally managed to tie the score at 5-5 with less than 10 minutes to play, but Sydney spurted ahead again.

Wide Open Hockey

In contrast to the other games in the series, it was a sweeping exhibition of wide-open hockey before a crowd of about 7,000.

The perfect balance of the Millionaires was demonstrated in the distribution of scoring. Grant Hall and Steve Latoski both bagged a pair of tallies and the others were divided by four players—Johnny McCreedy, Snell, Jack Atchison and Dick Kowcinak, who was hitting full stride for the first time since his long injury-siege.

policy in the Orient and the other speculating that it might bring developments in line with British-American interests.

Back Door Protection

(Some sources felt that since Japan had acquired what Domei, Japanese news agency, called "back-door" protection, she would feel free to go ahead with her heralded southern expansion.

(Others said Russia had gained the same kind of "back door" protection and therefore was relieved of any fear she might have of taking a stiffer stand against Hitler in the Balkans.

(It also was seen as assuring Russia of peace in the east should Germany, as predicted by Prime Minister Winston Churchill, launch a drive at Russia's Ukrainian wheat and oil fields.

(Authorized sources in Berlin, viewing the pact with calmness and "satisfaction," said the agreement took Russia out of the picture as a diplomatic questionmark, and said it would have a sobering influence on the United States.

(Other observers said the treaty might deter the United States from pulling its fleet out of the Pacific for convoy duty in the Atlantic.

(Informed circles in Manila said an intensification of the Pacific war of nerves was to be expected but saw no immediate threat to the Philippines.)

(They expressed belief Japan would consolidate her military positions in Thailand and French Indo-China but would make no stab at the East Indies unless Singapore were neutralized.

Trouble for Pacific?

(Shanghai informants said the likelihood of the war spilling over into the Pacific had been increased considerably. Should the United States draw part of its fleet for convoy duty in the Atlantic, they said, Japan might feel justified in withdrawing part of her 1,000,000 troops in China for a southward push.

(They saw it as a blow to Chinese morale, too, since it seemed to place the fate of the aid China has been receiving from Russia in the balance.)

The new pact, following closely upon similar treaties with Turkey and embattled Yugoslavia, was signed for Russia by Premier Vyacheslaff Molotoff and for Japan by Japanese Ambassador Yoshitsugu Tatekawa and Matsucka, whose departure for Tokyo was delayed an hour and forty minutes for the ceremony.

He had been in Moscow a week negotiating the treaty. Shortly after he left on the Trans-Siberian express, German Ambassador Von der Schulenburg and Slovak Minister Franz Tiso left for consultations with their governments.

Even as Russia was completing the agreement, the press published prominently a foreign office communique rebuking Hungary for invading Yugoslavia. It was a reprcof similar to that sent Bulgaria several weeks ago for permitting German troops to enter.

tients, and McGale, a trusty, shot Hartye without warning.

They then seized Guard Matteo De Simone, carried him to a subbasement and locked him in a room.

Equipped with prison keys, the convicts next unlocked two steel doors and a wooden door of a service tunnel leading to a railroad siding outside the walls.

Half an hour later, when Sergeant Maynard Darrow did not get his regular telephone report from the keepers, he investigated and found Hartye dying.

Charles Rohr, Jr., a shad fisherman, reported that two men had commandeered his boat and forced him to row them across the river, saying "We just killed a cop."

Just before 7 a.m. Ossining police arrested two men on a street corner and found an unoccupied automobile which contained a machine gun. Both men, Police Chief Spencer Purdy said, had police records, and he was questioning them for any connection with the break.

The dead convict had been serving a 15-to-30-year term for assault and robbery in connection with the $10,227 stickup of the Consolidated Edison Company's Marlem salesroom in New York May 15, 1939.

HOW TO RELIEVE PILE TORTURE
QUICKLY AND EASILY

If you are troubled with itching piles or rectal soreness, do not delay treatment and run the risk of letting this condition become chronic. Any itching or soreness or painful passage of stool is nature's warning and proper treatment should be secured at once.

For this purpose get a package of Hem-Roid from McDermid & Jury and Bond's Drug Store or any druggist and use as directed. This formula which is used internally is a small, easy to take tablet, will quickly relieve the itching and soreness and aid in healing the sore tender spots. Hem-Roid is pleasant to use, is highly recommended, and it seems the height of folly for any one to risk a painful and chronic pile condition when such a fine remedy may be had at such a small cost.

If you try Hem-Roid and are not entirely pleased with the results, your druggist will gladly return your money.

NEWS is what keeps a newspaper going. And it's primarily what keeps people going through a newspaper...page after page, front to back.

Anything which does that is good news for advertisers...for the more intense the interest of people in a medium, the greater the advertiser's opportunity to attract attention through that medium to the things he has to sell.

Because the newspaper is so full of important, timely news...news about happenings in other parts of the world, in various sections of the country and in our own home town...it has won for itself an intensity of reader interest that no other medium can match.

And because advertising itself is news...news about products and services...the most natural, the most productive, place for it is the newspaper.

Like all other parts of the paper, newspaper advertising is seen and read by people actively interested in new happenings, new ideas, new products. Today, when news-interest is at such a high pitch, the newspaper is naturally a more vital and profitable advertising medium than ever.

The number of tickets almost half-filled a De Laval churn. The final mixing process was done by Miss Margaret Rodney, accountant of the Examiner, and Mayor Hamilton drew the one ticket which disposed of this canoe prize.

Mr. Bateman has been living in Peterborough four or five years, and lives at the Y.M.C.A.

Big Opportunity To Serve Is Held By City

"As I leave Peterborough I wish to say that there is no other city with a finer location, more beautiful surroundings and greater opportunity to serve Central Ontario by leadership in the best things," said Rev. Dr. A. T. Barr, in replying to the good wishes of Rotary Club at its luncheon today.

Referring to the influence of Rotary, Rev. Dr. Barr recalled a little personal incident at Halifax last August. "As a visitor I was speaking to the Halifax Rotarians and among those attending was an Anglican from St. John's, Newfoundland. My subject dealt with trends of education. Afterwards, this St. John's man came up and said he wanted to take back with him some of the things I had said. He got a number of excerpts, and apparently when my name was mentioned in connection with the vacancy of St. Andrew's Church in St. John's, he made his influence felt and his sentiments known, and probably contributed to the unanimity of the call I received to that church. Thus membership in Rotary has many values which is realized only in isolated incidents such as that one.

I wish to pay tribute to this great fraternity which to my mind enrolls in its membership so many of the thinking men of the community.

Moss or Polish?

In this farewell, I wish to say something of proverbial perversity, which may gather up something of the contribution Peterborough has made to my life in these last ten years. The phrase is intriguing and needs elucidation. There has crept into our speech saying which under strict examination do not prove to be entirely true, yet are idly, carelessly uttered as if possessing all the finality of divine truth. One of these is "a rolling stone gathers no moss."

What rolling stone wants to gather moss, A rolling stone, as I interpret it, is out for adventure, sees the attraction of new scenes and environment. I would amend it to read, "a rolling stone gathers polish." Contacts are made which contribute to man's intelligence and development, and thus create in him the feeling of being a citizen of the world, not tied down to any particular place.

Millet, the painter, would never have amounted to much if he had been contented to stay permanently in Gruchu, France, and we would never have had the great painting of his "The Angelus." Robert Louis Stevenson would never have written his great works of fiction if he had not obtained color by travelling all over the world.

But, the unfortunate perversity of human nature reveals itself in the idea that the main business of life to gathering moss—in the bank, and this brings me to a second fallacious saying that nothing succeeds like success, success being measure in dollars and cents. True, money talks, but it talks too loudly, and today is the source of all the injustices between man and man."

Invests In Men

Dr. Barr related a story about a Buffalo millionaire who has been spending his yearly dividends in the education of young men for various professions. To the present time more than one hundred men have graduated by his assistance, and his investment in humanity brings in letters week after week from leaders in public life all over the Republic. He is not gathering moss, but he is reaping that affection which is an abiding value.

In truth, this adage should be amended to read "nothing succeeds like character." It is around character that a man builds the eternal values. There is one saying, however, that has been part of the psychology of the social structure of this city, which I must mention, because not only is it involved in Rotary purpose, but it has become a part of social life. This adage is "service above self." This is a great ideal, but by a strange perversity of human nature it tends to create a pampered community life. The man who lives according to this ideal is a Christian gentleman, but how many selfish, self-seeking hangers-on does he devolop in his serving?

In a certain sense this adage has contributed to much of the confusion in social life today, if not indeed to actual corruption of politics and the moral degeneracy of human nature. Possibly this ideal of service, politically used in France, contributed to French downfall in this war."

Dr. Barr concluded by saying that in pursuing the ends for which he regarded Peterborough as being so effectually located, "we must be willing to appreciate rolling stones that make contacts with our social and religious life. We must substitute the building of character for the mere building of a bank account, and we must serve so that fellows as a consequence will be ennobled by our service."

Dr. Barr was introduced by Roy Goring, and Dr. Bannister expressed for the Rotarians their regret in the loss of a valued member, and also their best wishes for Dr. Barr's successful ministry in St. John's.

Allied Armies Pick Ground On Both Fronts

(By KIRKE L. SIMPSON.)

WASHINGTON, April 14 (AP)—The first "contact" between British Empire armies and Axis legions has come and whether in Greece and Yugoslavia or in North Africa, the odds in manpower, in mechanized battle equipment, even in the advantage of initiative are with the Germans.

It was theirs to attack, the task of the British forces to defend.

But the odds of terrain are with the Britons in North Africa and with the British-Greek Allies on the main Balkan war front. That could prove all important.

Just where the Greek-British defence line runs west of the Vardar is not certain. Obviously, it is keyed to mountain peaks, narrow valleys and precipitous gorges from its sea flank on the east coast to the Gulf of Salonika to the great mountain lake system through which run the frontiers of Albania and Yugoslavia. Just as obviously, the actual Greek-British front line of defence must be geared also to the road and rail communications at the rear, over which come supplies.

Attacks Canalized

It is 100 miles or so, crow flight, from end to end of the sea, mountain and lake-bastioned front. There is no certain estimate of the British-Greek forces or possible Yugoslav aid available to hold it. Its topography necessarily canalizes any attack upon it to relatively few roads and passes. Indications are that the vital Balkan front was picked and to some extent prepared well in advance by the Allies.

The test of their wisdom in selecting the front has come. The Germans, crashing through Bitol (Monastir) Pass locked in a mighty battle with the Allies in the Florina area and, said the Axis, Italian and German troops joined forces on the shore of Lake Ohrid, near the centre bastion of the Allied line.

Down in North Africa the British command announced "contact" with Italo-German units which have been marching eastward across Italian Libya and have taken Bardia. Reports of British troops pouring through Egypt from recent successful battlefields in East Africa suggest that the British command may have chosen the Tobruk area on the North African front, although another excellent defense line guarding approaches to the vital Suez Canal lies many miles east of Tobruk.

Whatever the actual strength of the Nazi-Fascist armored force in Libya, it is already under heavy strain, testing the endurance of men and machines. Its only supply line stretches hundreds of miles behind it to Tripoli. And still far ahead of it lies the British main western defense system for the Suez Canal region, the Matruh railhead 150 miles east of Alexandria.

An Italian army of much greater numerical strength never got within sight of Matruh. It is still far from certain that the Nazi-Fascist thrust even hopes to get that far. It may still be merely a Nazi diversion operation keyed to the Balkan war.

Man Is Remanded On Theft Charges

This being Easter Monday there was no magistrate available and no regular session of the police court but Sergt. Gordon T. Puffer in his capacity as justice of the peace occuied the bench.

John Foster Thompon faced two charges of theft. He was charged with stealing a ladies' purse, candies, oranges, and other articles belonging to Elinor Brown from an automobile and also with the theft of a club bag, the property of Ernest Lovell of Oshawa.

Mrs. E. M. Leeson's Resignation Is Accepted By Hospital Board

Mrs. E. M. Leeson, superintendent of Nicholls Hospital, announced to the Board of Trustees at their meeting last week her intention of retiring from the position and responsibility which she has fulfilled for the last twenty years.

The resignation of Mrs. Leeson was accepted with expressions of regret that the hospital was losing from its management the directing hand which had faithfully and efficently guided the institution for so many years.

Mrs. Leeson came to Peterborough from Brandon as assistant superintendent, and after two years' service in that position she was appointed head of the hospital. Her home orignally was in Nova Scotia.

Reviews Progress Made

In her announcement to the Board of Trustees, Mrs. Leeson reviewed the progress of the hospital during those twenty years.

"Soon after my arrival in 1921, scarlet fever raged through the city and surrounding country. The first to go down was the day orderly, and for months after that it was a frequent occurrence to find a patient or nurse with a rash. At one time the men's surgical ward was closed for disinfection—ten nurses were in isolation, and at another time the Isolation was so crowded that we were obliged to isolate and nurse a patient for six weeks in a room at the back of the hospital."

The X-ray machine was installed before Mrs. Leeson took charge. In 1922 the laboratory was equipped and Dr. McNair appointed to spend 1½ hours each day in the hospital as bacteriologist. In 1925 Miss Marion Howson resigned and Miss A. Davidson, was appointed bookeeper. The new residence was opened in 1926.

"In 1927 my housekeeper resigned and we felt since patients on special diets had increased so tremendously we should have a dietitian who took charge of all dietary. A housekeeper was not appointed again until after Dr. Agnew's survey in 1936."

In 1928 Miss Young, present assistant superintendent, was appointed Instructress of nurses.

"In 1929 we treated more than 2,000 patients, and the house even at that time was overcrowded and patients refused through lack of room."

A Financial Asset

A note of humor sounds above the record of events in an allusion to supervision of part of the Hospital's milk supply in years when the superintendent wished to dispose of the heard of five cows which one of the trustees regarded as almost essential. But, Mrs. Leeson recalled that no matter how she juggled expenses for feed and straw she could not produce anything but a financial asset for the cows.

"The housekeeper had many a headache making sure the milker's hands were clean, and he had on a clean gown, etc. I can't recall a mask, but I feel sure it would be a mask now. When we sent samples to Dr. McNair to be tested I always felt his chief joy in life was to find a few more germs than the law allowed, but we forgave him as the cows soon became a thing of the past, and nothing but pasteurized milk used."

"It is hard to find words to express my appreciation to the members of the Board. I fully realize that no progress could have been made without their most loyal and interested support. I have never called on them without a generous response. Mr. Crane was a wise and sane counsellor and we missed him keenly, but Mr. Fowler has broad shoulders and endless patience. He listens to all our trials and tribulations (which I hope to take lightly) and pays the bills without much demur. Through the years we have had an occasional misfit, but on the whole a most co-operative, loyal staff, interested in the welfare of the hospital. Without this, nothing could have been accomplished... It is not easy to leave. I have always loved my work and there is scarcely any room or department in the hospital that does not recall some change made. When so many around us have had additions, it is a great disappointment not to have had a new hospital, but I hope before many years to be able to come back and to see the laying of a corner stone for a new building.

The welfare of Peterborough, where I have lived longer than any other place, as well as Nicholls Hospital, will always be very near my heart."

New Footbridge Is Busy Spot

The new footbridge across the river above the Quaker Oats dam at London street received the approval of hundreds of citizens who crossed it Sunday.

Probably more than 2,000 persons found a new and attractive river route. Over the new bridge and up the east bank to Park Hill Road and south again on Water street.

To pedestrians it was a short cut to the east side of the river, a section of the proposed Stuart Drive which the late Roland Denne used to advocate with hopes that it might win popular support. This is one of the few reaches of the river which the ordinary citizen is still permitted to use. Most of it up to the Park Hill Road bridge is probably owned by the Quaker Oats Company.

Hundeds of motorists drove down London street to see the new bridge. It was an Easter afternoon for ambling and idling and burning gasoline in an atmosphere of peace and tranquility and perhaps some glory.

Rain Dampened Easter Sunday

As Easter Sunday came to Peterborough with showers typical of the month, citizens jammed the churches of all denominations to sing "Christ is Risen, Alleluia." In spite of the weather, most of the city's church announced large crowds as messages were delivered from every pulpit in the assention vein.

Almost every sermon heard concerned both the Easter over 1,900 years ago and the one of today, the titles themselves are indicative of their content, and Peterborough worshippers heard "Lilies and Dynamite" at Trinity United Church, where Rev. Dr. George Easton told of the Easter in the time of Christ and showed changes in the world since. Rev. J. H. Sutcliffe, on Sunday evening preached "The Easter 'If'," in Murray Street Baptist Church.

Children's services were conducted in many of the churches on Sunday afternoon; a religious drama, "The Challenge of the Cross," was presented by the church school of George Street United Church, and St. John's Anglican Church sponsored a children's service which was conducted by Rev. F. Tseng of Honan, China.

"The Resurrection of the Nations" was the topic of the sermon by Rev. Dr. A. T. Barr in St. Paul's Presbyterian Church in the evening, and in the afternoon special Easter services were conducted for the children. A special sunrise service was well attended at George Street United Church.

Easter music predominated in the churches in the city, as it did on radio receiving sets throughout the country, and Peterborough's soloists were heard with each choir.

Communion was held in all of the Anglican churches, three times, early service, morning and evening.

Mrs. John Low Drowned In Otonabee

Mrs. John Low, 623 Lock street, North Monaghan, was drowned in the Otonabee River at the rear of Rye's Pavilion shortly before noon today.

Just how Mrs. Low, who was the wife of Pte. John Low, member of the Veterans' Guard at Ottawa, got into the water is a mystery.

Two young boys, Bob Titterington, King George street and Bob Rooke, Toronto, who were playing near the wharf at the foot of Lock street, heard the woman call for help and gave the alarm. One of them ran to the nearby residence of Chief Constable Sam Newhall and the other notified other residents including Mrs. C. Wilson, King George street who called the fire department. Meanwhile Constable C. J. McGillen who was on traffic duty in the south end received the message over the police radio and hurried to the scene.

Rescuer Took Cramp

When Mrs. Wilson and Mrs. Earl McIlwaine reached the river they saw Mrs. Low in the water between the wharf and Rye's boathouse and about 15 feet from shore. Mrs. McIlwaine took off some of her clothing and waded into the river ready to go to the assistance of the woman in the water but took a cramp and was unable to proceed.

Constable McGillen arrived a moment or so after and he and Ed Rye, Lock street, went out in a boat and pulled Mrs. Low out of the water. Firemen and doctors worked on the unfortunate woman for an hour at the street railway wharf before it was decided that further efforts would be useless. Drs. J. M. O'Brien, H. V. Dobson and L. A. Clark were on hand.

Mrs. Low had been in ill health for some time, it was stated.

Surviving relatives are her husband, Pte. John Low, Veterans' Guard, Ottawa, four sons, Harry, Charles, John and Terence and two daughters, Patricia and Jean, all of Peterborough. Mrs. Low had lived here for a long time and had many friends in the community.

George Street C.G.I.T. Aids Fund With $22

Two substantial contributions today help the cause of the British War Victims. One is the sum of $21 from the dance at Bralley's Hall in North Monaghan on April 10, and the other is the amount of $22.37 from the C.G.I.T. of George Street United Church through Miss Pearl Trethewey.

The joint leaders of this group of girls, Mrs. Leo Copp and Miss G. Hardill, arranged a concert by the girls themselves, together with motion pictures on March 21 and sale of candy. The proceeds of their effort was $22,37.

The public is reminded of a concert at the Collegiate Institute on Thursday and Friday evenings this week under the auspices of the Social and Athletic Club of the Canadian General Electric Works. The members are assuming all expenses. They are "paying the shot" for the variety entertainers who are coming from Toronto. The gross receipts will be turned into the British War Victims Fund.

The program includes Rex Slocombe, 'The Chatterbox Magician"; Patricia Bailey, described as a charming songstress; Clare Rouse, the man who plays 100 different musical instruments; the May Sisters, tap and acrobatic dancers; Percy David, comic singer; the Whirlwind Skaters.

The report from the "Big Works" says a truck load of prizes will be given away during intermission. Adult tickets are 50 cents, and the C.G.E. committee are promising an evening of entertainment for a cause that is dear to everybody's heart.

Good Friday Service Concluded Series

The series of Holy Week services, organized under the Peterborough Ministerial Association were concluded on Good Friday morning in St. Andrew's Church. Dr. E. W. Young conducted the service. Dr. George Easton read the responsive Psalm and Rev. J. H. Sutcliffe offered prayer. J. H. Harle presided at the organ and Mrs. Ross Williamson contributed a solo. The church was well filled by representatives of the different churches of the city.

Rev. Robert Moynan of Toronto, the preacher for the week, spoke on 'The Unique Atonement."

"It was brought about," he said, "by human sin, our sins nailed Jesus to the cross. Until we see our transgressions as they look in God's sight we do not see them aright. It was jealousy and hatred that struck down the spotless Son of God. We should turn from our sin in these dreadful times. It is a comfort to us to know that Jesus paid the price, and set us free."

Observance of St. George's Day

AS A

"SALUTE TO BRITAIN"

I am appealing to all organizations and citizens to give their full support to the observance of St. George's Day, Wednesday, April 23rd, as a "Salute to Britain."

Let us during the week commencing April 21st demonstrate our pride in being British and by so doing salute those who are so courageously carrying the brunt of the conflict against the aggressors overseas.

I hope citizens will display flags, and that in our churches a great testimony will be made to our faith in God and communion with our brave British folk.

Every organization in our city should observe this great occasion in common with our kinfolk throughout the Empire.

GOING OUT TONIGHT?

By PRUNELLA WOOD

EVENING fashions for Spring continue in the grande dame manner, with sensational styling and striking color a keynote of the mode.

This season you can't get by with a simple little dinner dress for all occasions. It's smart to dress up and go places, to be gallantly gay as a gesture of courage in troubled times.

When you go dancing your gown should be definitely a creation, instead of just "some little thing" you slipped into on the spur of the moment. Your hairdo, your jewels, your long gloves, all should be in keeping with the formal brilliance of the times.

A dress equal to any occasion after dark is the striking evening gown sketched at Left, made of a bold printed silk in blue, black and white. The low decolletage, the graceful draping of the bodice and the lowered waistline are all earmarks of 1941 fashion.

But it is the skirt that makes headlines in this gown, with its wide, graceful train and its rows and rows of black tulle ruching at the bottom. The same tulle is used to create a panel effect in its drape from the waistline.

Choir Presents Easter Cantata

CAMPBELLFORD, April 14 — (ENS).—The story of the resurrection was told in the cantata, "Darkness and Dawn," presented for the second time by the choir of St. John's United Church on Sunday evening. First presented on Good Friday as the climax to the services held in the various Protestant churches during the week, St. John's Church was well filled for a second time when the cantata was repeated.

Written by Fred W. Peace, the thirty-five well-trained members of the choir gave a splendid rendition of this familiar Lenten cantata. Mr. Charles Howey, organist and choirmaster, provided musical accompaniment. The regular Sunday evening service was cancelled for the presentation of the cantata. Soloists were Miss Jean Tubbs, Mrs. H. Twigg, Mr. G. Lucy, Mr. R. Richardson, Mrs. S. Twigg, Mr. H. Donald.

Eric Pulfer Weds Helen N. Hoard

HASTINGS, April 14 (ENS) — Ferns, snapdragons and Easter lilies formed the background for a lovely Easter wedding at Trinity United church, Hastings, at noon on Saturday, when Helen Nellie Claudine, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Claude Hoard of Hastings, became the bride of Eric Cyril Pulfer of Toronto, younger son of Mr. and Mrs. William Pulfer of Percy township.

The Rev. J. E. Glover officiated at the ceremony, and Mrs. Stanley Fife of Toronto presided at the organ for the wedding march, and immediately before the ceremony as Mrs. J. E. Glover sang "Oh Perfect Love" and as she sang "Until" during the signing of the register.

The bride entered the church on the arm of her father, who gave her in marriage, and looked charming in a gown of turquoise blue triple sheer. The blouse and skirt which fell in folds from a deep girdle, were inset with teal. She wore a Sweetheart hat of silk faille, dainty, with its flowing veil, white shoes and a corsage of Sweetheart roses in pale pink, and sweet peas.

Miss Frances Hoard was her sister's bridesmaid, and was gowned in a dusty rose crepe frock, with shirring at the shoulders, a tucked girdle, flared skirt and three-quarter length sleeves. Her fancy straw braid hat was of the same shade as her dress and she wore a corsage of red Sweetheart roses and sweet peas.

Mr. Rae Pulfer, brother of the groom, was best man, and Mr. Stanley Fife of Toronto and Mr. Arnold Lobb of Norwood, were ushers.

The groom's gift to his bride was a white gold bracelet, set with diamonds; to the bridesmaid, a compact with mother-of-pearl cover; to the groomsman and ushers, gold initialled tie clips; to the soloist a gold brooch, and to the pianist, Nilon hose.

Following the ceremony, the happy couple motored to the home of the bride's parents where a reception was held, attended by forty-seven guests, the bride's mother, Mrs. Hoard, receiving in a black crepe dress with a corsage of carnations, and the groom's mother, Mrs. Pulfer, wearing navy crepe trimmed with white and a corsage of gardenias.

Immediately after congratulations were offered, the bride and groom with the guests assembled in the dining room, prettily decorated in a color scheme of pink and white, where a sumptuous wedding dinner was served by Miss Bernice Garside of Peterborough, Miss Betty Spooner, Miss Marguerite Faux and Mrs. Robert Stewart of Peterborough. Tea was poured by Mrs. Sandford Hoard of Belleville and Miss Katharine German.

The bride's table was lovely with its lace cloth and centred with a four-layer bride's cake, and on either side were pink lighted tapers in silver holders and baskets of orange blossoms and roses. Rev. J. E. Glover proposed the toast to the bride, which was responded to by the groom, and to the bridesmaid, responded to by the groomsman. Rev. A. C. McCullum proposed a toast to the parents of the bride and groom and the fathers of the contrasting parties made replies.

Later Mr. and Mrs. Pulfer left by motor for a short honeymoon before taking up residence in Toronto. For travelling the bride wore a smart navy blue wool suit, a white triple sheer blouse, navy and white tricorn-shaped hat and accessories to match.

Guests from a distance who attended the Pulfer-Hoard wedding held on Saturday in Trinity United church, Hastings, were Mr. and Mrs. Ira Ivey of Oshawa, Mrs. James Cook of Trent Bridge, Mr. and Mrs. Salem Hoard of Campbellford, Mrs. William Dukelow of Woodville, Mr. and Mrs. John Collins of Otonabee, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Stewart of Peterborough, Miss Bernice Garside of Peterborough, Mrs. Sandford Hoard of Belleville, Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Fife of Toronto, Mrs. George Cook of Seymour.

THE STARS SAY . . . .

By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

For Thursday, April 17.

THIS day may be notable for the breaking up of long thwarted ambitions, the crumbling away of stagnations. Things should begin to stir in a dynamic and constructive manner which should place the fortunes and the objectives on a defintely stable basis. But such efforts should be based on well matured plans and sound judgment, and with an eye ti loopholes of fraud, deception or misrepresentation, with particular wariness as to writings and documents. Some peculiar or sinister matter may be dragged into the open.

Those whose birthday it is may anticipate a state of affairs which may be defintely and decisively developed in the direction of putting the fortunes and ambitions on an enduring and stable basis. With well laid plans and sagacity there should be much progress and productive work, with many obstacles and old frustrations and impediments swept away for good and all. Some subtle or singular situations may be brought to the surface, but in all affairs be alert to treachery and fraud and sign and read all papers with great precaution.

A child born on this day should be enterprising, energetic, industrious and of sturdy character although with some inclinations toward accomplishing things by expediency rather than principle.

FALSE PRIDE DOES NOT GET GIRL FAR IN THESE DAYS

She Has More Chances for Marrying Worthwhile Man if She Is in the Business World.

A girl says: "My mother has what I consider false pride. I have what I think is honest pride. Is there any way in which I can adjust these two ideals without sacrificing myself or hurting her? The set-up is this: She and my father were both members of rich and prominent families, and they moved in fashionable society in the small city in which we live when they were young. My father is a darling and possesses every charm and virtue except the ability to make money, and about the first thing he did after he and my mother were married was to lose all the property they had inherited. So far back as I can remember we have always been poor. Life has been a perpetual scuffle to pay the rent and the grocery bill and live on the small salary that has been all that Father has been able to earn. That hasn't bothered me personally. I have rather liked the rough-and-tumble fight and pitting my wits against Old Man Hard Times. I grew up quickly, as poor children generally do, and as soon as I got through high school I got a job in a swanky dress shop that some of these days I am going to own, for I have the turn for business that my father lacks. Now, inasmuch as I have been able to lift the shadow of the poorhouse from my parents' heads and we live in modest comfort, all would be well except for my mother's false pride and her mania to force me into the circle in which she moved as a girl, and her desire to have me marry a rich man. It simply burns her up for me to be a working girl instead of a society girl, to model fine clothes instead of wearing them, and I am sure she wearies Heaven with her importunities to God to send me a millionaire for a husband.

"It nearly break my heart to see the poor dear making herself so unhappy over something that doesn't worry me at all, but what drives me frantic is for her to write notes to her old friends of better days and ask them to invite me to their parties.

"And, if they do, she will starve us to buy me some slimpsy little cheap dress, or she will sit up for nights making over some rag, and literally force me into going to places where I know I am not wanted; where I look like something the cat brought in, and where no man ever notices me unless the hostess drives him to asking me to dance with him.

No False Pride

"Purgatory itself hasn't any torture greater than the humiliation I undergo on such occasions, yet when I refuse—as I often do—to go to these parties where I am an enforced guest my mother weeps and accuses me of being ungrateful to her when she tries so hard to get me into society.

"She tells me that I have no pride and no ambition, and how do I ever expect to get a husband who can give me a fine home and cars and mink coats if I don't go where rich men are?

"When I tell her that I don't intend to marry for money, and that I don't envy the girls who have nothing to do but to kill time; that I am sorry for them, and that it crushes me to ask favors, but I am proud of being able to stand on my own feet and look the world in the eye, why, she just cries some more, and tells me that I don't know anything about life and that the time will come when I will wish I had listened to her.

"Now I love my mother devotedly and I am so sorry for her I just ache with sympathy. I know she has always hated cooking dinners and washing dishes and trundling her own baby carriage, and that she is just trying to save me from the hardships of life that have been so

P. C. Silvester Is Honored By City Police

Provincial Constable David Silvester, who leaves tomorrow for Bowmanville to take over his duties in Durham County, made his appearance before the bench in police court Saturday night and heard himself sentenced to accept a brief case as a parting gift from local police, court officials and reporters.

The presentation was featured by speeches in which Chief Constable Sam. Newhall, Inspector J. F. Reid, Detective Sergt. W. E. Meagher, Sergt. Gordon T. Puffer, Constables Leo Murphy, C. J. McGillen, Traffic Officer L. A. McClure and other speakers expressed appreciation of the co-operation received from Constable Silvester during his more than ten years' service as provincial officer here. General regret at the departure of Constable Silvester from Peterborough was expressed.

The brief case, suitably engraved, was handed over by Inspector Reid, and Constable Silvester made an appropriate reply.

Provincial Constable Price Morris formerly of Bowmanville, who takes over the duties here arrives today to assume charge of this district.

At a U.S. army camp in Georgia, the bantam "blitz buggy" uses a narrow ditch to crawl completely under a four-ton, six-wheel drive truck without touching. twisted, and her eyes filled with tears. "You know why!" she cried harshly. "Lend me a dime for carfare and shut up!"

After she was gone, Beatrice looked at Toby bewildered.

"Vera," Toby explained slowly, "is in love with Jake Simon. He's half her size, and has a shrewish little wife."

"Jake Simon—" Beatrice said. "I've heard that name somewhere before, haven't I?"

"He's her boss. Every season his firm almost goes under, and every season Vera sticks it out, getting paid now and then. That's why she won't work anywhere else, don't you see? She could make thousands if she'd only take the fashion and posing jobs that come her way! But . . . "

Toby washed the coffee cups viciously. "Dear old Huntington's keeps Jake Simon so broke he can't buy his wife off with alimony. They keep cutting prices, threatening to buy somewhere else, and that would ruin him. A lot of the better dresses upstairs are his.

"Oh, it's a mess! Vera's loyal, and Jake's really a swell guy, if weird looking. Anyway, that's just one of the things that makes me hate Huntington's! What that store does to people's lives!"

Beatrice averted her face, carefully. "I didn't know Huntington's was such an ogre. What else does the store do?"

"It would take me a week. Getz, for instance. No pension. And all those hardworking saps in the office, who do Bruce Sheldrake's job for him at about one-twelfth the salary. And manufacturers like Jake pushed to the wall because Huntington's pares prices to the bone."

"Maybe that's the management," Beatrice suggested slowly. "Perhaps the people who own Huntington's don't know about—"

"You mean the Duchess?" Toby inquired shortly. "Huh! That dame's so busy keeping an Italian prince, or whatever he is, she hasn't time to find out about all the girls her own age and just as good as she is, too, who live on nothing and work like slaves so she can run around to Palm Springs and Hawaii and South America. Did you see that in the paper? She went to South America."

Beatrice's throat closed up. "We'll be late."

As she hung up her things in her locker, she longed for and dreaded the moment when she would see Anthony. Her face burned, remembering their kiss. Would it be the same, when she saw him again?

She thought, too, of what Toby had said. Soon now she'd have to end this masquerade. She'd have to do something about improving the management of the store.

But then she wondered what it would do to Anthony, finding out who she was. Would he hate her for deceiving him? Once he had asked her, "Are you trying to make a fool of me?" Please, please, God, don't let Anthony take the attitude that I've been amusing myself at his expense!

She knew, too, that Anthony wasn't the kind of man who would enjoy marrying a girl with millions. "If he had met me somewhere as Beatrice Davenport, he'd never have given me a second thought. He's so independent. He's not like Clarence . . . "

Miss Dane lined the salesgirls up beside the wrapping desk, first thing that morning.

"I want an improvement around here in the care of the stock!" she announced. "We've kept two stock girls busy, just because the salesgirls haven't made it their business to pick up dresses, to bring them back out of the fitting rooms, to pin back belts and make sure about clips and buttons. This can't go on! The office has withdrawn one stock girl this morning, and we'll have to manage by ourselves. I've seen girls standing in front of cases talking when they might have been taking care of their stock."

Her eyes singled out Beatrice. "Any girl who can't do the routine work as well as make sales is not worth her salary. Remember! That will be all."

The girls scattered to the cases, grimly. Beatrice saw Miss Getz fingering the chain on her glasses nervously. "You've always taken beautiful care of the stock, Miss Getz," she whispered defiantly. "I think she has her nerve! And how can we wait on customers properly if we've got to do stock girls' work?"

"Sh-sh!" pleaded Miss Getz. "She's looking."

Budget Fashions was very busy, that morning. Beatrice ran in and out of the fitting rooms, placating a customer in the first booth and another in the sixth. She peered through the curtains as one customer turned for inspection in a sport dress, murmured, "That's good on you," and fled to see how the woman in velvet was coming on. Instead of taking only two or three possible dresses into the fitting rooms with each customer, she took six or seven, so the woman could splurge in trying on and be so busy she wouldn't notice the salesgirl's absence.

Other girls got the same idea. The result was that by afternoon the fitting rooms were crowded with discarded dresses, and the work of arranging the stock was even heavier than before.

"The nerve, firing a stock girl!" Toby muttered, as she passed Beatrice in the narrow aisle behind the curtains.

Miss Ryan, a stack of dresses over her arm, bumped into them. "Oh, sorry." She leaned for a moment against the partition, her hands over her eyes. "I'm so tired. I just can't keep on stooping and hanging without getting dizzy." She swayed, and Toby cried, "Hey!"

A moment later, the dresses slipped from Miss Ryan's arm into a heap on the floor, and the girl pitched forward.

"Bee! She's fainted!"

DINNERS OF THE WEEK

By MARY MOORE

SUNDAY

Chilled Apple Juice
Veal Milan
New Potatoes in Parsley Cream Sauce
Salad Bowl Salad — Watercress, Shredded Leaf Lettuce, Shredded Radishes, Carrot Slivers
Tomato Soup French Dressing
Lemon Custard Pudding

MONDAY

Note.—This little dinner is at once both very economical and perfect for flavor and combination. Maybe I was very hungry but when I ate it it seemed food for gods.

Corn Fritters (see notes)
Side Bacon
Scalloped Tomatoes
Pineapple Tapioca Pudding. Coffee

Notes.—To make Corn Fritters: Sift together 1¾ cups flour 2 teaspoons baking powder, ¾ teaspoon salt. Combine 1 cup corn, 1 egg beaten and ½ cup milk, and 1 tablespoon melted fat or cooking oil, and mix these four with the dry ingredients. Fry in hot deep fat at 360 deg. Fahr. from 2 to 5 minutes (depending on their size), turning over once, when bottom is golden. Drain on unglazed paper. Serve very hot. Corn fritters may be made a little thinner and may be baked the same as you would cook a pan-cake.

Scalloped Tomatoes for Monday's Dinner.—One No. 2 can of tomatoes, 1 teaspoon grated onion, 1 tablespoon butter, 1 teaspoon salt, ¼ teaspoon pepper, 1 tablespoon sugar, 1 cup buttered crumbs. Mix all ingredients except 1/3 cup of the crumbs. Place in either 1 large casserole or 6 small ones, and sprinkle tops with remaining crumbs. Bake at 350 until golden. We turned out the individual casseroles on the dinner plates to serve them—the bacon was in the centre dividing the scalloped tomatoes from the fritters—a pretty picture.

I still have to give you the details of the tapioca pudding: Soak one-half cup pearl tapioca overnight; in morning cook in top of double boiler with 3 cups water until perfectly transparent—at least 3 hours. Mix with Fruit Dressing: 3 tablespoons sugar, 2 tablespoons flour, 2 eggs, 2 tablespoons lemon juice and grated rind from 1 lemon, juice and pulp from canned pineapple—1 cup. Mix sugar and flour in upper part of double boiler. Add beaten eggs, fruit juices and rind and pulp. Cook over gently boiling water, stirring constantly, until thick. When tapioca is ready drain off any surplus water and stir it into the fruit dressing, return all to top of double boiler to heat and blend through. Serve chilled.

Likes Independence

"But she has it all wrong from my point of view. In the first place, independence is the breath of life to me. I cannot endure patronage. I couldn't flunkey to Mrs. Gotrocks, not even to be at the head of her most exclusive invitation list. No bird in a gilded cage for me.

"In the second place, I do not consider it a degradation to work. I think it is a privilege. I am not ashamed of being a business girl. I am proud that I have enough brains and strength and initiative and tact and reliability to hold down a good job and be able to support myself and help my family. And, in the third place, my life isn't dull slavery. It is full of thrills and excitement. It's a career instead of just an existence.

"And, perhaps, Mother might cheer up a little if I could only convince her that the business girl has a better chance of marrying well than the society girl has. For a lot of the chaps who are poor young clerks and struggling lawyers and doctors now are going to be the big men of the country 20 years from now.

"But in the meantime what am I going to do about Mother's false pride?"

LAKEFIELD

Easter Services Are Impressive

LAKEFIELD, April 14—(ENS).—Easter was observed in Lakefield churches with appropriate services of music and the Easter messages.

A very impressive service of prayer and devotion was held at St. John's Church on Good Friday afternoon, when a large congregation observed the Last Hour of the Cross. The rector, Rev. H. R. Howden, conducted the service, delivering devotional addresses based on the various words from the cross.

On Easter Sunday two services of the Holy Communion at 8 a.m. and 11 a.m. were very largely attended. The beautifully decorated old church, the glorious Easter music well sung by the choir, all combined to strike the note of triumph and joy that shine, even out of the darkness of these days.

At the 11 o'clock service the rector preached on the text from Philippians, "That I may know Him and the power of His resurrection." In part he said: "What happened on that first Easter morning was undoubtedly the supreme event in all history. For through the resurrection the happiness and joy, the strength and power that Christ had given in such generous measure to His followers in Palestine were made available to the whole world of men for all time. It was the knowledge of the presence of the Risen Christ that transformed the character of Peter and turned weakness and cowardice into glorious strength and courage. The triumphant message, 'Christ is Risen,' burned its way into the hearts of the apostles and gave them an incentive that sent them into the very heart of heathen countries. The fact of the resurrection filled St. Paul's life. Every sermon he preached had for its beginning an account of the death on the cross and the resurrection on the third day. It was his central theme."

Mr. Churchill in an address the other day had this to say about 't is people: "I go about the country whenever I can escape for a few hours or days from my duty, and I see damage done by the enemy's attacks, but I also see glad, confident, bright and smiling eyes, gleaming with consciousness of being associated with a movement firm, higher and wider than any human or personal issues. I see the spirit of an unconquerable people." Unconquerable? Why? Because they have experienced the presence of the "Christ of the English road," because they hear that Figure, saying, "Lo I am with you always, even unto the end of the world," because they know Him and the power of His resurrection.

At 3 p.m. the children's Easter service was held for the Sunday School. At this service they presented their mite boxes. This collection represents the annual contribution of the Sunday School to the missionary work of the church.

Lakefield United Church.

Special Easter music by the choir, a reception service for new members, and Communion service featured the morning service.

In the evening the Easter thankoffering service of the Women's Missionary Society was held in the form of a pageant.

Members of the W.M.S. took up the offering and Rev. G. F. Kelly conducted the opening worship service.

In place of the sermon an Easter pageant was presented by members of the W.M.S., assisted by others.

The characters of the pageant, entitled "Faith Victorious," were: Faith, Miss Pauline Butcher; The Angel, Miss Marion Payne; The Watchman, Maryalyce Renwick; Humanity, Joan Kelly; Women at the Tomb: Miss Margaret Sanderson, Mrs. G. E. Renwick, Mrs. D. H. Charlton; Easter Spirits: Miss Jean Tanner, Miss Jean Garbutt and Miss Winnifred Murphy; Greece, Miss Mucreta Hull; her attendants: (Arts) Miss Constance Orr, (Music) Miss Doreen Kelly, (Knowledge) Miss Lillian Calberry; Rome, Miss Helen Kelly; her attendants (Wealth) Miss Jean Miller, (Power) Miss Joan Pue; Captives, Miss Barbara Brown, Miss Jean Spence.

The pageant was interspersed with solos by Miss Cora Charlton and Rev. G. F. Kelly; quartette, Mrs. Dora MacMillan, Mrs. M. Hamblin and Ed Hill and Rev. G. F. Kelly.

Mrs. G. F. Kelly was accompanist, and the pageant was directed by Mrs. W. J. Charlton and Mrs. J. McKercher.

The Baptist Church.

Service was held Good Friday afternoon, with Rev. J. H. Sutcliffe as guest speaker, choosing as his topic, "Who Crucified Christ?" Rev. C. C. Boyter assisted by reading the Scripture lesson, and Rev. G. F. Kelly led in prayer.

Mr. Sutcliffe contributed a much appreciated solo, "In the Hour of Trial."

Rev. W. B. Walker conducted the Easter morning service, choosing as his topic, "Opening the Gate of the Lord."

In the evening he spoke on the "Six Things which made the Resurrection of Christ Necessary." These were given as follows: (1) Fulfilling Old Testament prophecies; (2) keeping his own word; (3) in order that sinners might be saved; (4) in order that believers might be kept; (5) that believers might live a fruitful life; (6) that believers also should rise from the dead.

In each instance Mr. Walker proved his point from portions of Scripture.

St. Andrew's Presbyterian.

Rev. J. M. Young presented the Easter message to the congregation, speaking from first Corinthians, chapter 15.

Hospital Ship's Survivors Machine Gunned

ATHENS, April 14 (AP)—Survivors of the Greek hospital ship Attiki which the Greeks reported was sunk by German bombers, reached Athens today with stories that German planes machine-gunned the nurses and wounded as they attempted to leave the sinking vessel.

(Sinking of the 2,561-ton ship was reported Saturday but the location was not given.)

Twenty-eight persons, including the captain, were lost.

Survivors, said one doctor, voluntarily jumped out of a lifeboat overcrowded with wounded to lighten the craft and was not seen again.

Mrs. Ephi Demopoulos, a Red Cross nurse who was in the water in a lifebelt for eight hours before being picked up by a destroyer, said:

"Our ship was plainly lighted by two searchlights on its Red Cross markings when it was attacked by German Stukas.

"In the first attack two bombs struck the prow of the ship. We rushed on deck. Overhead we could hear the roar of planes. The ship was already listing.

"We immediately started transferring the wounded to boats. The ship had stopped.

"As we started to lower the boats a German plane, sweeping just over the mast, dropped more bombs. One struck the stern and the Attiki began settling very fast.

"Another German plane swept over the ship, machine-gunning the decks and swimmers in the water. Some bullets cut the rope on one lifeboat being lowered, dumping the wounded and nurses into the sea.

"There were not enough boats for everyone, and we jumped into the sea and clung to rafts, while the planes continued to machine-gun us."

DO YOU KNOW . . .

Remove the burners and wicks of your coal oil stove once a week and boil them in strong soda water, dry in the sun if possible. Boiling ensures good light and heat without smell.

A little minced, raw potato and vinegar inside a dirty bottle or decanter will remove the stains.

Make vegetable soup from the water in which vegetables are boiled and it will preserve the most valuable minerals, also the vitamins.

How Do You Meet Today's "WAR ON NERVES"

Today, as never before, you must stay steady, calm. A tense, let-down feeling may show that you are not getting enough Vitamin B_1 from your food.

One of the richest storehouses of Vitamin B_1, and all the B Complex Vitamins, is Fleischmann's fresh Yeast. To help restore and keep your pep and vitality try eating one cake first thing in the morning, and one cake ½ hour before supper.

A SAFEGUARD because it is so dependable. If you bake bread at home use Fleischman's fresh Yeast. You can be sure of fine-textured, delicious-tasting loaves every time with Fleischmann's—the favorite fresh yeast of Canadian housewives. At your grocer's.

"NERVES" SHE CALLED IT

Losing interest—losing friends—she never went out any more—always too tired. "Nerves," she thought — but it was her kidneys, the filters of her blood, that needed attention. Delay meant danger. She took Dodd's Kidney Pills at once. The improved action of her kidneys helped to clear away blood impurities and excess acids. Fatigue, headache, backache, lack of energy, disappeared. 117

Norwegians Escape To Fight For Their Country's Liberation

Germany will be beaten, say these nameless Norwegians, who came to Toronto recently with a price on their heads and an automatic sentence of death hanging over them. Several were rescued by the British raiders of Lofoten; others escaped from their native country now overrun by the Nazis.

Life seemed nothing but endless GREASY dishwashing

THEN I TRIED RINSO—in a minute all grease vanished

THE grease floated on the dishwater, clung to the plates and made a horrid ring round the dishpan. Then I tried Rinso . . . I was amazed! The grease just vanished! Rinso's thick suds, you see, absorb all the grease in no time. Dishes come out sparkling, and drying is much easier. I'm finished in half the time now. Try Rinso for your dishwashing. IN MEMORIAM

MAHOOD. — In fond and loving remembrance of our darling baby Helen, who went to be with Jesus just four years ago today, age 7 months.

Deep in our hearts lies a picture
Of Helen, gone to rest.
In memory's frame we will keep it
Because she was one of the best.
Our lips cannot speak how we miss her,
Our hearts do not know what to say,
God alone knows how we miss her
In our hearts that are lonesome today.
Safe in the arms of Jesus.

—Sadly missed and always remembered by Mamma, Daddy, June and Wilma.

SHURETY.—In loving memory of a dear wife and loving mother, who departed this life, April 12, 1939.

If she could only be with us to-day,
Talk to us in the same old way;
To hear her voice, to see her smile,
The life would really be worth while.
Not just to-day, but every day,
In silence we remember.

—Sadly missed by Husband and Family.

You Miss Out at Dances When You Don't Conga

Simple Diagram Shows You How

Everybody's doin' it! The Conga Line catches on like wildfire, but as usual the two duds of the crowd can only look on enviously.

It's a pity, too, because after a little home practise with a Conga diagram, you can do the step beautifully—with your partner or in line.

The main thing is to remember the three smooth walking steps, then the kick on the fourth beat with hips swaying in the opposite direction. Try it!

Count 1, step to side on left foot, hips sway left. On 2, cross right over left foot, hips sway right. On 3, step to side on left foot, hips sway left. On 4, a sideward thrust of hips, a kick of your right foot.

In the amusing Conga Line, put your hands on the shoulders of the person ahead of you and do the same step all around the room.

Of course you can Conga, dance other popular steps too! Our 32-page booklet gives diagrams and instructions for all the smartest ones—including the Samba, Lindy, tango, Peabody, rumba and shag. Also includes basic steps, new variations of the ever-popular waltz, fox-trot and Westchester.

Send 15c in coins or stamps for your copy of HOW TO DO THE NEWEST DANCE STEPS AND VARIATIONS to the Examiner, Home Service, Peterborough. Be sure to write plainly your NAME, ADDRESS, and the NAME of booklet.

"The Authority on Authorities"

THE DEFENSIVE SQUEEZE

MOST PLAYERS understand the general principles of a squeeze play—ending with the lead of a card on which one or both of the opponents cannot possibly discard without killing one or more trick winners for his side. But it is usually thought of as being executed by the declarer, whereas it also can be used, upon unusual occasions, by the defense. Some of the prettiest and most intricate combinations possible can arise from its execution by the defenders.

Two of the world's greatest players—Morrie Ellis and Lee Hazen, who finished respectively one-two in the latest national individual masters' championship—paired together in the recent Eastern pairs and came within a single bid of winning the title. This deal gave an example of their duplicate artistry. Deciding to pass and play for a vulnerable set against West's 1-No Trump instead of playing for a part score, Mr. Ellis in the North led the heart 3 to the K.

Working all-out for every possible trick, Mr. Hazen returned the heart 5 to the Q, and the next heart forced West's A. He allowed West to hold the next trick with the club J, after which came the diamond K and A and then the J to the Q. Mr. Hazen having put the club 8 on the club J, Mr. Ellis now returned his club 6 to the A, and Mr. Hazen laid down the heart 10. That squeezed the life out of West. At this stage he had his two spades, two set-up diamonds and club K. East had four spades and the club Q, North four spades and the club 4.

West seemed to be sure to take a trick in spades, two in diamonds and one in clubs, but the squeeze ruined him. If he threw the club K, East would be put in with the Q and would have to lead back a spade, so South could cash the setting club. If he tossed a diamond, he could be put in with the club K, could then cash one diamond, but would have to lose two spades from returning them. So he tossed the spade 10. This, of course, was equally bad. South then dropped his K with the spade A and led to North's Q for the setting trick. This play was sure a beauty.

If West, after doubling, leads the K of his partner's hearts, how should South play this deal to make 5-Diamonds?

Bill Rejected

AUGUSTA, Mt., April 14—(CP)—The main legislature rejected a bill requiring public school pupils to salute and pledge allegiance to the United States flag. In urging defeat of the measure, Representative H. Hinckley said it was his "firm opinion that you can't legislature patriotism."

Price Of Syrup Holds Firm At $2.50 Gallon

The Easter market was just another Saturday without much variation from recent prices. Maple syrup was a light offering for only the second week end of the flow of sap, and quotations were firm at 60 cents a quart and $2.50 a gallon. Warm weather has cut down the cash returns of the maple bushes this Spring.

And elderly man remarked that he had seen many years with the seasons following in their accustomed order, winter merging into Spring and Spring broadening out into Summer, but this year summer has so far crowded closely upon the heels of winter.

Another patriarch whose memories span nearly seventy-five years recalled that Easter Saturday in the old ground floor market building, with a theatre above it, was always featured by a great display of meats, especially beef.

"It was almost on par with the Christmas market," he said, "and the townspeople used to attend in large numbers just to see the array of beef The butchers had stalls on the ground floor, and I suppose every home had a big roast for Easter. Some of those men were George Webber, Harry Winch, N. T. de Laplante, J. J. Howden's father, a man named Cole another named Heather."

The only fresh meat dealers noticed on Saturday were E. A. Hunter, Ken Denoon and Alen Gill.

Mr. Hunter quoted pork at 12 and 14 cents, and Mr. Gill's prices were: pork, 13 and 15 cents; lamb, 20 and 30 cents, and veal, 15 and 20 cents a pound.

Eggs 18 and 20 Cents

Eggs were plentiful at 22 cents for large sizes, and other selling at 20 and 18 cents. Butter was mostly quoted at 37 cents, but one or two prices were mentioned at 38 cents, and others were down to 35 cents towardss noon. Chickens were 20 to 25 cents and broilers 33 cents and the supply was slightly larger than on recent Saturdays.

More potatoes were shown, including the first general offering of seed quality, and prices were slightly lower than last week.

R. Kinsman of Campbellcroft quoted Katahdins at $1.60 for certified seed. Erie Tully said there had recently been quite a big demand for Katahdins. His prices for qualified seed Cobblers was $1.50 and $1.75 for Warbas. Clifford Johnston had White Stars at $1.10, and table stocks was generally $1 a bag.

A few bags of seed grain were noticed. Harry Harker of Fraserville tagged registered Vanguard oats at 85 and 90 cents.

The 1940 vegetables are still coming to market, but are gradually being pushed into the background. Arthur Stenson sold onions at 35 cents a peck or $1.25 a bushel; carrots and parsnips 25 cents the six-quart basket, and turnips were three for ten cents. He also had red clover seed at $9 a bushel.

Herb Doig had certified Cobbler potatoes at $1.25 a bag, and maple syrup at $2.50 a gallon.

Norman Moncrief's apple prices were: Northern Spies at 40 and 50 cents a peck or $1.40 and $1.90 a bushel, Starks 35 cents a peck and $1 a bushel; and Rusets at 40 cents a peck or $1.40 a bushel.

R A F Clips 5 Dive Bombers Out of 5 Nazi Assaults on Piraeus

BERLIN CLAIMS IGNORANCE OF ROME REPORTS YUGOSLAVIA HAS ASKED FOR AN ARMISTICE—HITLER, DUCE RECOGNIZE NEW INDEPENDENT CROTIA

ATHENS, April 15—(AP)—The German Air Force made five assaults this morning on the harbor of Piraeus, the port for Athens the Royal Air Force announced, and five dive bombers were shot down and "many others" severely damaged.

The communique said the attackers caused "slight damage to R.A.F. property."

British fighter planes were credited with shooting down the five planes, Junkers-88S. The R.A.F. lost no planes

One section of the harbor at Piraeus, port of Athens, was attacked by five Nazi planes while nine others flew in from the sea with the sun at their backs, scattered over the Greek capital and vanished.

Dense yellow clouds enveloped the Piraeus target area and guns aboard offshort destroyers flamed into action.

It was Athens' fourth alarm since the German invasion and the first daylight attack. Despite scores of anti-aircraft shells bursting in the cloudless sky high above the Acropolis, the Germans held to their course.

ATHENS, April 15 — (AP). — Repeated German attacks on the British-held right flank of the newly reformed Allied line in Northern Greece have been repulsed, but the Nazis are advancing on the left after occupying Phlorina which had been northernmost hinge of the old defence line, the British and Greek commands disclosed to-day.

The British command said that elsewhere in their sector of the line, in the vicinity of Mount Olympus, "there was no contact with the enemy."

Near Ptolemais the Greeks were battling a slow German advance toward the newly-established Allied positions. This Nazi column was the one which took Phlorina, forcing the Greeks to fall back both in that area and in the Corizza (Koritza) region of Albania, to the west. The Germans were said to be driving toward Kozane and Siatista, Greek towns 30 miles south of Phlorina.

(Reuters News Agency reported in an Athens despatch to London that the Germans also were advancing toward Klissoura, Greek town 18 miles south of Phlorina and about same distance north of Siatista. Presumably the Germans now have passed this town.)

With the German and Italian lines joined inYugoslavia, north of Lake Ohrid, several other arteries were opened for Axis-attacks in the Corizza area.

A battle between German and Greek armored units was fought on plains in the vicinity of Ptolemais, 25 miles south of the Yugoslav border.

A Greek general headquarters communique said German mechanized columns were pushing south from Ptolemais toward Kozane, an important road junction nearly 40 miles south of the frontier and Siatista, to the south-west.

(The German high command claimed capture of both Ptolemais and Kozane.)

The renewed assaults on the British lines came apparently from the Vardar Plain—a push southward toward Mount Olympus.

Hitler's Pet Division

Some sources said the attacks were delivered by the same Hitler Schutzstaffel division on which the British forces inflicted severe losses Good Friday.

The centre of the British-Greek line which jutted northwest from Mount Olympus to Phlorina and then slanted southwest to the Adriatic Coast has now been withdrawn.

Meanwhile fresh British and Greek forces poured into the new fighting arena, strengthening defences.

Greek troops who have been fighting in the mountains north of Corizza for nearly six months were ready to meet the Nazi assault.

German tank columns, it was said, now are reaching terrain where the roads rise steeply into the mountains along narrow "death trap" gorges. Infantry must be used to storm the mountains and open the road for tanks.

Thus far, German infantry trying to attack the Greeks in their native mountain strongholds have suffered considerable losses and been driven back into the valleys, informed quarters said.

RAF Blasts Brindisi, Valona As Greeks Move Back From Pincher At Corriza

Key Albanian Town Deserted 24 Hours Before Italians Discover Shift; While Hellenes Shorten Lines On Wedge

ROME, April 15—(AP).—British planes bombed Brindisi, on the Italian side of the Adriatic, and Valona, on the Albanian side, last night, the Italian High Command reported today.

The daily communique claimed that Fascist columns in Yugoslavia advancing from the north and from Zara had occupied the railway centre of Knin, about midway off the Adriatic coastline.

The Italians also reported their troops had occupied the Yugoslav port of Sibenik, southwest of Knin, and confirmed a previous report they had reoccupied Corizza, which the Greeks had held since November 22.

(The Greek High Command announced its troops had been ordered to withdraw from Corriza and said it was not until 24 hours later that the Italians discovered the move. The Greek command added the Italians tried to hinder the withdrawal with motorcycle troops of whom many were captured.

(Recapture of Corizza would indicate that the Greeks had withdrawn from or been driven from the wedge they drove into Eastern Albania during the winter campaign.

(At the high tide of their counter invasion of Albania, the Greeks reported advances of more than 30 miles north, past Pogradetz and along the shores of Lake Ohrid, in a thrust for the Skumbi Valley back-door route for an attack on Tirana, capital of Albania.

CAIRO, Egypt, April 15—(AP).—British planes raided Sofia, capital of German-occupied Bulgaria, the night of April 13-14 and started many fires in storage yards where munitions trucks were blown up, the Royal Air Force command announced today.

The announcement told of other successful attacks by R.A.F. bombers on German convoys in the Balkans with much damage to personnel and material.

RAF Fighters Stop Hun Over Channel

Battles Along Coast Biggest In Weeks; French Bases Hit

A SOUTH COAST TOWN, England, April 15.—(CP).— Formations of German Messerschmitt 109's were driven back toward France several times by Royal Air Force fighter patrols to-day as air activity over the English channel reached a bigger scale than had been seen in this area for some time.

Observers said they believed that R.A.F. fighters also made an offensive swoop over Northern France. A formation of fighters was seen leaving the English coast and later returning from the direction of Boulogne.

Using a high cloud cover, Nazi fighters attempted to cross the south-east coast at several points, only to be challenged promptly by R.A.F. patrols.

The drone of aircraft engines frequently was in the ears of inhabitants along coast. One R.A.F. pilot landed unhurt by parachute in a coast village and declared he had shot a Messerschmitt 109 down in the sea. Then he said, he was set upon by three Nazi fighters and had to bail out of his machine which crashed farther inland.

Police said the youth admitted having spent $43 of $65 he had stolen from a dairy here Sunday afternoon. Chief Dunham said the boy took the money out of the cash register.

Of the $43, $10 was spent for an airplane ride and another $13 went for membership in the Canadian Seamen's Union. The youth said he wanted to become a lake sailor but was told he would have to join the union first. He loaned $10 to a friend and spent the rest on downtown Toronto theatres and other amusements.

Bloody Battle See-Saws About Salum

Germans Lose 15 Tanks 22 Planes In Vain Tobruk Raid

CAIRO, Egypt, April 15—(AP). — The British Middle East command announced to-day that 200 Germans were taken prisoner, more than 100 Axis soldiers killed and 15 of their tanks destroyed in a repulsed attack Monday on Tobruk, Libyan port 80 miles from the Egyptian border. Twenty-two Axis planes were downed.

The British force lost eight tanks.

In the Salum area, just across the border in Egypt, the British command said, "we inflicted losses on the enemy by patrol and artillery action.

The village of Salum is believed to have changed hands several times in open fighting which British advices say stitll is in progress there.

(It was not disclosed who holds the village at the moment, although the Italians have claimed its capture).

The British forces were described as holding the lower half of the escarpment and the bottom of the cliffs at Salum.

On the East African front, resumption of the British advance toward Dessie, Ethiopia, was announced, with pursuit of Italians in the south continuing.

Heavy damage and many casualties were inflicted on Axis forces, the communique added, in raids on airdromes and troop concentrations in Cirenaica (Eastern Libya).

Dangerous Emergency Faced By Nation War Secretary Warns

WASHINGTON, April 15—(AP).—War Secretary Henry Stimson said that United States armed forces "must be prepared for the possibilities of war in many and varied terrains."

Testifying as the first witness before a new Senate Defence Investigating Committee, he analyzed the problem confronting the army in creating large forces "fully trained to operate in a war of movement," and added:—

"Furthermore, our forces must be prepared for the possibilities of war in many and varied terrains, it being quite uncertain in what part of North or South or Central America, or even possibly other regions it ultimately may be necessary to use in the defence of this country and its possessions."

He solemnly warned that the United States is facing "a dangerous emergency" which "may be very prolonged."

Stimson indicated that in future preparations to met this emergency the nation's civilian needs may be further subordinated to the military program to expedite production of war supplies.

He did not say just how long he thought the danger period might last, but he declared that to meet whatever situations may arise the army is planning a program of training which will cover "many

Britain To Equip Canadian Tank Brigade

LONDON, April 15 (C PCable)—Lt.-Gen. Sir Wilfrid Lindsell, in charge of administration, home forces, indicated today that the war office is ready to equip the Canadian Tank Brigade when it comes to England to join the Canadian Corps.

The brigade is expected in this country this year. When asked by The Canadian Press if it could get tanks quickly over here if it came without them, Gen. Lindsell said:—

"Naturally we wouldn't supply the brigade with all its tanks the day after it arrives, but we certainly could equip the brigade...The Canadians would get tanks if they needed them."

He said priority is one of the questions which has to be taken into consideration when equipment is being distributed, since forces on the war fronts get the first call.

Sir Wilfrid, speaking to war correspondents, said the volume of army supplies is "quite satisfactory" and the scale of reserves complete.

The officer, who left Dunkirk last June in a collapsible boat, said the British expeditionary force lost more than a month's reserves when it was

Accomplices Drink As Sing Sing Fugitives Hunt Escape Car

WHITE PLAINS, N.Y., April 15—(AP).—Two outside aides of the convict trio that crashed out of Sing Sing yesterday with a loss of four lives admitted early today their part in the dramatic prison break, and were charged with first-degree murder.

District Attorney Elbert T. Gallagher said that William Wade, 32, and Edward Kiernan, 33, confessed smuggling three revolvers into the big gray prison nearly a month ago under the chassis of a milk delivery truck.

With these weapons, Joseph Riordan, Charles McGale and John Waters forced their way to temporary freedom early yesterday after killing a prison guard. Waters paid for this with his life in a gun duel in Ossining, where a policeman also was slain.

Riordan and McGale escaped across the Hudson River, but were captured a few hours later. Fourth life lost was that of a prisoner who died from shock.

All three would have made their getaway safely, Ossining police said, had not Wade and Kiernan by their own admission bungled further plans to assist in the escape by stepping into a beer tavern at a crucial moment.

For nine months, Gallagher said the pair explained, the plot had been in the making, and all went well except for one point.

Wade and Kiernan, with two other outside accomplices who got away in another car, were to have picked up the fleeing trio as it raced past the railroad station. When the threesome arrived, however, Wade and Kiernan were enjoying "a couple of drinks."

The other two aides, whose identity police withheld, were being hunted today.

Latest Swoop On Norwegian Town Plotted Long In Advance

NEW YORK, April 15—(AP). — Norwegian naval forces using one of the destroyers Britain obtained from the United States have made an "extremely successful" raid in northern Norway, the Norwegian Telegram Bureau said to-day, quoting a message from the Norwegian Legation in London.

The Bureau said the raid was carried out in agreement with the British Admiralty, which turned the former American warship over to the Norwegian Navy.

"The raid had been carefully planned by Norwegian naval authorities a long time in advance," the announcement said.

The statement described this as the "last raid" made on Norway, and apparently referred to the one reported authoritatively in London yesterday to have been carried out on Sunday.

This was the second—perhaps the third—Allied landing in Norway in recent weeks.

The first was made on March 4 when the British landed at Lofoten Island, destroyed oil tanks, sank 11 ships under German command, captured 225 prisoners, and returned to Britain with 300 Norwegian recruits to the Allied cause.

Reuters News Agency, yesterday quoted a Stockholm despatch to the effect that a Norwegian ship, similarly acting under agreement with the British, made a raid on Saturday night.

The German news agency said in Berlin yesterday that the crew of a British destroyer landed on Saturday night at a little Norwegian fishing village north of Tromsoe, burned a building, and departed at dawn.

Allied Front Draws Deeper In Greek Mountainland With Hun Nearing Kozane

Klisura, Albanian Town Near Tepeleni Threatened On Western Front; Tank Units Reported in Heavy Clash

ATHENS, April 15 — (AP) — British Army Headquarters announced to-day that British and Imperial troops had repulsed several thrusts by German mechanized units on the right flank of the Allied defence line in Greece.

The centre of the British-Greek defence line which jutted north-west from Mount Olympus to Phlorina and then slanted south-west to the Adriatic coast has been withdrawn, forming a new front deeper in Greece.

The shift was disclosed late last night in a Greek High Command communique which did not indicate where the new stand was being made.

It declared Greek forces had been ordered back from the Corizza (Koritza) region of Albania and said the Germans were advancing toward Kozane and Siatista.

These Greek towns are 40 miles south of the Albanian and Yugoslav borders and 30 miles south of Phlorina, which was the northernmost hinge of the old Hellenic defence front.

(Reuters News Agency reported in a despatch from Athens that the Greeks also said German forces were moving toward Klisura,, Albanian town near Teleleni on the Greek western front.

Corizza, Albanian stronghold which had been part of the western half of that front, was captured by the Greeks last November 22, is than a month after the Italian invasion of Greece had been turned into a counter invasion of Albania.

Protection For Flanks.

The communique said the Corizza evacuation was decided upon because of German occupation of Southern Yugoslavia and opening of passes to the flanks and rear of the Greek forces.

"As a result of occupation of Southern Yugoslavia by German forces and consequent opening of passes which lead from Yugoslav territory to the flanks and rear," it said, "our army on the Northern Albanian front was ordered, for operational reasons, to withdraw and evacuate the Corizza region.

"The enemy discovered the withdrawal 24 hours after it had begun and sought in vain to hinder it by pushing forward motorcyclists. We captured several dozen of them."

Elsewhere in Albania, the war bulletin said, "enemy" offensive actions were repulsed, and the Greeks took nearly 100 prisoners.

Caught In Ambush

The bloodshed came with a blast of bullets on a road leading to the Fork Ridge Coal Company mine which is about one mile inside the Tennessee line.

Harrell said motorcades of miners assembled here last night and proceeded toward the mine, which has worked throughout the stoppage of operations in adjoining Harlan county subsequent to the expiration of the union-operator Appalachian contract April 1.

Five men were killed in two gunshot affrays in Harlan county on April 1 and 2 as union minerpickets sought to enforce a stoppage of mining there. All Harlan mines since have suspended operations under a truce arrangement sponsored by Gov. Keen Johnson.

The manner of the slaying remained undetermined but the R. C.-M.P. investigators sent to Belcher Island reported the possibility that other Eskimos—both adults and children—might be established as victims of the mysterious outbreak of savagery among the usually peaceful people.

Because of weather conditions it will be necessary for the R.C.M.P. plane sent to Belcher Islands to head southwards in the immediate future, Ottawa officers said.

It was possible that the five persons in custody might be flown out to face such charges as may be laid against them, while investigators continued their work on the islands.

So far, only brief radio flashes have been received from the expedition sent into the North following a message relayed from a fur trading post that three Eskimos were murdered "last February."

THE WAR TO-DAY

By GUY RHOADES
Canadian Press Staff Writer

British reinforcements are reported being rushed to the North African and Greek-Albanian fronts to stem combined drives of German and Italian troops, apparently seeking to thrust a way to the Suez Canal.

The British Middle East command was reported rushing reinforcements to the neighborhood of Mersa Matruh, strong point 160 miles west of Alexandria, from which the driving counter-offensive was launched against the Italians.

The clean-up of the East African campaign made a large force available for use elsewhere. It was not clear where the British command was getting its men to bolster the Greek defence but presumably they also were part of the African forces.

As usual in the heat of a campaign the German propaganda agencies threw out wild reports of sensational advances, British and Greek disasters and the like.

These stories apparently were designed both to confuse those not in possession of the facts and to raise confidence at home. The most extravagant said British forces were being withdrawn not only from Greek harbors but from open beaches and that the British command was facing a "double Dunkirk" in Greece and at Tobruk, Libya, where a British force is partly encircled.

A British communique, however, said the situation at Tobruk was satisfactory and the War Office declined to comment on the German claim concerning Greece.

In unofficial circles it was considered possible the British command might be moving some troops by sea when other forms of transport are bad or that the Germans had confused the arrival of fresh troops with the beginning of a withdrawal.

The chance that the story was nothing but a sheer lie was not ruled out.

The Arctic route between the old and new worlds is not the shortest for purposes of supplying Britain. It may prove to be the safest. Moreover, Labrador, Greenland and Iceland can well become stepping-stones for the air-delivery of not only American-made bombers but of smaller planes, with shorter ranges of operation, as well.

The longest jump would be 800-odd miles as against the 2,400 miles which the planes must fly on their present non-stop route.

since it has already been announced from Athens that fresh troops are being sent up to reinforce those already there," these quarters added.

"Undoubtedly the Germans would be very glad to hear that the British and Imperial forces were about to leave Greece."

While the general situation in the Mediterranean is regarded here as serious, it is not considered grave.

"There are several satisfactory aspects," military quarters said.

These sources added that there is no cause for gloom over the position at Tobruk, Libya, "where our forces could fight their way out if wanted to or could be evacuated by sea."

"Where they are, they represent a serious menace to the German lines of communication," it was added.

Few Fears For Suez.

Another informed British source said some observers were "unduly pessimistic" in fearing for the safety of the Suez Canal, and noted that British troops and equipment were being freed daily in East Africa to reinforce the troops in North Africa.

Advices were circulated to London newspapers that Lt.-Gen. Erwin Rommel had been ordered by the Nazi high command to attempt to push his Libyan campaign to Port Said.

The story, sent by the Exchange Agency from Zurich, Switzerland, quoted Berlin military circles as saying the general was convinced he could reach the Suez Canal before the beginning of May "and is throwing his entire forces into battle to that end."

This report said that reinforcements were arriving steadily from Sicily and that troops were being ferried by plane to Libya.

"Political circles in Berlin claim that the success of the army of Gen. Rommel is of the greatest importance as its chief aim is not only the Suez Canal," the account said, "but the oil pipelines of Palestine and the adjoining countries, thus solving the difficulties of German and Italian oil supplies."

Parsons had kicked Sheriff's Officer Anthony Ryan out of an automobile in the City Hall courtyard, dived out the opposite door of the car and fled north through a covered driveway. Detective James Priest saw Parsons running and took after him. Cook, seeing the two, recognized Priest and blocked Parsons' path.

Cook dived at him and both crashed into the doorway. The glass came down all over them. Detective Priest then jumped on Parsons.

Parsons was arrested last January after police seized a mobile radio transmitter which allegedly had been broadcasting Communist propaganda. He was sentenced to six months for assaulting a constable, and his trial on the other charge was to begin today.

BUS SERVICE COMPLAINTS

Bus patrons in Shanghai, China, are protesting that the busses are filthy, the service irregular and attendants rude when squeezing passengers into the crowded vehicles.

Deafness in Many Cases Not a Disease

Medical authorities say yes—in many cases. Aurine Ear Balsam, a prescription, has proved a blessing to many deafened people. Used since 1895 by those who are deafened and bothered by ringing, buzzing head noises due to hardened, or coagulated wax (cerumen). Over a million packages sold. Make a no-risk test. Must satisfy or money refunded. Ask to-day for Aurine Ear Balsam at McDermid & Jury, or other leading druggists. (Advt.)

British Rush Imperials Into Egypt

Veterans Of Eritrea To Plug Lines On Road To Suez

LONDON, April 15—(CP).—Between 200 and 300 Germans were captured yesterday at Tobruk, besieged British-held port in Libya, and 12 German planes were brought down over the town, it was announced today.

A Ministry of Information said: "It is learned in London that between 200 and 300 German prisoners were captured in our counter-attack at Tobruk. An enemy air raid on Tobruk resulted in twelve enemy planes being brought down."

Thousands of British Imperial troops released from the East African front were reported hastening to the defence of Egypt today in a race with mechanized Axis forces pushing from the west in a drive apparently aimed at the Suez Canal.

With the British garrison at Tobruk, Libya, hemmed in by German and Italian units which already have reached the Egyptian outpost of Salum, there was no attempt here to minimize the seriousness of the situation.

Although public confidence in Gen. Sir Archibald P. Wavell, British Middle East Commander, was strong, most observers agreed that he is facing a more difficult task than the one he accomplished only a few months ago when he drove the Italians out of Egypt.

This time, they pointed out, the British fleet—which played a big part in blasting the Italians from positions along the North African coast—will be facing the threat of hampering attacks from Nazi dive

The nature of the agreement was not disclosed, but after hearing "a statement on the situation" by Premier Hussein Sirary Pasha, the chamber passed a resolution saying it was "pleased to state there is absolutely no cause for alarm."

successive military units and many successive instalments of men, and which in the aggregate may last for five years." Presumably he referred to the training program under the Selective Service Act which will be operative until 1945.

Paying tribute to spade work done by the Army General Staff and the War Department in getting the defence program into full swing, Stimson said it had made possible the delivery of weapons and other equipment from eight to 12 months ahead of the First Great War schedule.

"From this point forward," he added, "the chief responsibility for the speedy completion of the equipment will rest upon American industry."

Need 5 Years To Prepare

In an exhaustive comparison of the army's problems resulting from the current emergency with those which confronted it in 1917, Stimson said that the character of modern warfare was such that a nation should start preparation for it at least three to five years in advance. Germany began its preparation about seven years ago, he said, and also evolved "a new technique of diplomacy, a new form of propaganda and finally new tactical methods based on new weapons."

"The thought and energies of the entire country were devoted to preparation for war," he went on. "In spite of repeated warnings, the democracies preferred not to compete with that preparation. As a result, in 1938 Germany was ready to move toward its objectives, first without force and, then, at the first show of opposition to her plans, with terrific violence.

"Germany disclosed to the world a quantity and variety of modern weapons and, second, a method of employing them which have thus far achieved far-reaching results.

"Last year the War Department was faced with the necessity of acquiring in a short time munitions adequate to meet the munitions which Germany had spent seven years in producing."

Above Aggression

Moscow, April 15 (AP)

THE government newspaper Izvestia, in an editorial circulated today by Tass, Soviet news agency, said Japanese initiative in seeking the neutrality pact signed here Saturday was stimulated by Tokyo's realization that "the U.S.S.R. is not a suitable object for any aggression."

The editorial said the present government of Japanese Premier Fumimaro Konoye, from the outset, had shown an understanding of the need of a good neighbor agreement between the two countries. It added, however:—

"Certainly the treaty concluded does not yet solve all the various problems of Soviet-Japanese relations, but it opens a direct road toward their settlement."

COMPANY O.C.'s OF MIDLAND REGIMENT ARE SCHOOL TEACHERS

Two Ministers Among Unit's Officers

OTTAWA, April 15 (Special) — The religious, educational and political institutions which Hitler seeks to destroy are represented in the peacetime occupations of the executive officers of the Midland Regiment now stationed at Lansdowne Park.

All four company commanders are school teachers, two of the combat officers are church ministers in their private capacity, and the assistant adjutant, a lawyer, was at one time known as Canada's youngest mayor. There are also other professions represented. Commanding the regiment is Lieut.-Col. J. C. Gamey, whose rank service goes back to 1912. In civil life he is a farmer and an accountant.

The four teachers who are company commanders are Majors R. S. Gamey, K. Hall, P. J. Bigelow and F. E. Lysett. Major Gamey, a brother of the Officer Commanding, is commanding the headquarters company. His home town is Toronto where he has been teaching more than sixteen years. He enlisted as a private in 1915 and saw service in England and France with the 23rd Battery, R.C.A. After the war, he was continuously connected with the Canadian militia, and was a member of the 48th Highlanders before being transferred. A married man, and the father of three children, Major Gamey is a graduate of the Toronto Normal School and of the University of Toronto.

Studied in Peterborough

Major Hall, commanding "A" Company, has been teaching for seventeen years and is a manual art instructor in public schools. He is a past president of the Public Schools Athletic Association. He enlisted in the Durham Regiment in 1927 and came up through the ranks, being commissioned in 1929. A married man, he studied at the Peterborough Normal School and Ontario Training College in Hamilton.

Major Bigelow, commanding "C" Company, has been teaching for thirteen years. He studied at Western High School and Lindsay Collegiate Institute and is a graduate of Queen's University, where he took a C.O.T.C. course, after which he was a lieutenant in the Huron Regiment (1932). He was transferred to the Durham Regiment in 1934 when teaching at the Port Hope High School. He was appointed commandant of "C" Company in the Midland Regiment when this unit was formed in 1936. A married man and a father, he is a teacher of science and the director of physical training in the Port Hope High School.

Major Lysett is commanding "D" Company. He has been teaching for thirteen years, mostly in Oshawa, where he was the principal of a public school. He joined the Durham Regiment in 1927 and was commissioned in 1929 as a second lieutenant.

The assistant adjutant is Lieut. H. R. S. Ryan, who was for some time the youngest Mayor in Canada. He was elected at Port Hope in 1939 when still in his twenties. A native of Newcurgh, Ont., he was educated in public schools in Newburgh, Kingston and Port Hope. He attended the Port Hope High School before going to the University of Toronto, where he got honors in classics. He took law at Osgoode Hall and practiced as a barrister in Port Hope. He was a signaller in the Durham Regiment and joined the Midland Regiment for active service in February, 1940.

The two ministers who are combat officers are Lieut. J. W. MacIntosh, who was formerly Baptist minister at Norwood. Lieut. MacIntosh first joined the Peterborough Prince of Wales Rangers as a private and on mobilization of the Midland Regiment he transferred to that unit.

Lieut. A. M. Wootton of London, a minister of the United church, is the other clergyman among the combatant officers.

Enlisted At Cobourg

E. F. Styles, son of Mr. and Mrs. E. C. Styles, 111 Mary street, Peterborough, is now serving with the Canadian artillery unit somewhere in England. He enlisted at Cobourg several months ago, and at one time was employed in Brooks Grill.

COBOURG

Norwegian Fliers Crack Up Their Car

COBOURG, April 15.—(ENS). — Two members of the Norwegian Air Force detachment stationed in Canada have occasion to thank Cobourg police as a result of a minor week-end misfortune.

The two aviators were coming into Cobourg at the east end of the town when their car collided with another automobile which was stopped at the Kingston crossing where the two railroad lines cross Highway No. 2. The impact was not serious but it did render the airmen's car unfit for further driving until repairs had been made.

Meanwhile their week-end passes were like time running swiftly out. They were seventy miles from their Toronto station and the future looked gloomy to say the least.

The flyer's situation was explained to the local garageman who had brought in their car. He told Constable Ted Houghton of the Cobourg force and that officer solved their difficulty. He secured the help of a passing motorist who quickly made room in his car and the flyers proceeded west with every hope of making the week-end leave deadline.

COBOURG

Mrs. Mary Reid Suffers Fractured Hip

COBOURG, April 15.—(ENS). — Mrs. Mary Reid of Peterborough, lies in the General Hospital here with serious injuries as the result of a car accident that happened early yesterday. She has a fractured pelvis and a broken hip as the most serious injuries.

She was a passenger in a car driven by her son Clifford Reid. The car went into the ditch just west of Brighton.

The Reid car was travelling east, police say, when the driver thought a car driven by W. Murphy, of Wooler, seemed on the point of making a left hand turn. Reid took to the ditch to avoid an accident.

The car driven by Murphy was going in a westerly directon. Provincial Police Officer Douglas Wilson investigated.

Another Pact Signed

Signing a pact of non-aggression is becoming a habit, and one is inclined to doubt much whether it means a thing. The Foreign Minister from Japan is away on the long trip across Siberia, but before leaving Moscow he signed a pact between his country and Russia, and diplomats the world over have been trying to figure out what it means—if anything.

And after reading opinions expressed at Stockholm, London, Moscow and elsewhere one comes to the conclusion it means a great deal or perhaps nothing at all.

Russia, it is announced, fee.s the need of having Japan attended to. These countries have been enemies for years, and Japan some years ago gave Russia a trouncing which has never been forgotten. So if there is to be trouble Russia wants her back clear. Hence the signing was a good thing for Russia.

Again we read the pact is an anti-Axis move. This way: Churchill gave open warning that Germany would soon attack the Ukraine, which is the garden spot of Russia's agricultural wealth. It is plain enough that Moscow's attitude toward the German invasion of the Balkans has not been friendly. Nor could it be because Russia has looked upon that district as her own sphere of influence.

If such an attack were made, then according to the new pact Japan would do nothing to carry out her obligations as a member of the Axis group. Japan would not jump on Russia's back while Russia was defending her front lines against Germany.

So you might just as well put it away in one of the pigeon holes of your memory for future reference. What it means and what it's actually worth we don't know.

He Knows So Much

One gentleman who probably means well enough was telling us this morning that he did not like to see the British forces backing up for new positions when facing the Germans. He wouldn't back up an inch before the Huns. No sir, not an inch. Regardless of how many of them were present or what equipment they had he'd stand right there and give them more than they could take. That's the way wars are won.

It does seem too bad that this gentleman had not gone into the army. We have a feeling he would long since have forced his way up through the ranks to the post of general or field marshal because he knows so much about war and battles. He says so himself.

Admittedly we are somewhat overawed when coming in contact with such an individual. He seems to know so much that it makes us feel we do not understand the situation at all. We recall having gone one time out from the city of Brussels in Belgium to have a look at the battlefield of Waterloo, and also having gone over the ground at Vimy Ridge where the opposing trenches were so close at spots that it would be quite possible to heave a brick from one to the other. Then there was that extensive piece of excavation known as Grange Tunnel where there was safety from shell fire and bombs. It all looked impressive, but now we wonder if it was not all an error. Our critic would have never dug a hole in the ground. He would never have backed up an inch; he would have just marched out regardless of strength or position or reserves or anything else and toppled the foe where he stood.

Or it may be the man was talking through his hat. It is probably just as well to consider that for a moment. There is the possibility that a new line in better position is preferable to trying to hold an old one of dangerous location. And it is well to consider that a British officer has rather keen regard for the lives of his men. So it may be the critic is one who has never sniffed battle even afar off, to whom tactics are unknown things and hard facts just a plain nuisance.

Of Discussion There Is Much

Ontario Educational Association, more familiarly known as the O.E.A., meets in Toronto during the Eastern vacation period to take the system of education to pieces and put it together a new way. This has been going on for years and it has become a forum for good ideas and for poor ones, for those who have a well-shaped idea of what they are saying and those who patently do not know what they are talking about.

Eventually there are resolutions passed and they are in time forwarded to the Department of Education, and we have a feeling that for the most part they remain right there.

It is quite an organization, is the O.E.A., so framed that it takes in trustees from rural sections and from urban centres, allows them to meet according to classification; takes in inspectors and teachers and even the ratepayers can go and have a crack at it.

But how far the results of the meetings have ever penetrated the sanctuary of academic regulation is quite another matter.

The War Will Not Wait

Canada is asking for 116,000 recruits this year—72,000 for the army, 35,000 for the air force and 9,000 for the navy. We have noticed in several papers where advertising stated the need for men, and in some cases for regiments which have been mobilized for a good many months.

We are not satisfied that the present plan is the best because it does not evenly distribute the responsibility on the young manhood of the country. It leaves the decision entirely up to the individual, and he can do as he sees fit. One man feels that there is a war on and feels also that he should do something about it. The result is the arrangement of his home affairs and enlistment for the duration of the war in the active forces, and that means he will go where he is directed to go.

Another has the feeling that when he has taken his term of compulsory training he has met the requirements as they are laid down and measured out for him; he will probably join a reserve battalion but in the meantime he goes about his business as usual. So in that way we actually have two armies. And we have them because the Government does not like the policy of conscripting man power.

Now that it is known 116,000 recruits are needed it is going to take some well-organized effort to get them because industry and commerce in general is in such a state of unusual effort that men are in demand to an etxent we have not experienced in years.

There can be no side-stepping the issue. When the Government says 2,500 young men are needed now to train for radio technicians, it means that 2,500 should come forward. Canadians who have been in England may be sent elsewhere, and others from Canada will have to step in there, meaning, of course, that the ranks in Canada will have to close up quickly. Other things can wait. This war cannot.

The British Method

There was one item of news which occupied such little space it might possibly have been overlooked.

The Duke of Aosta, Italian viceroy of Ethiopia, left Addis Ababa in haste, and reports indicated the place had not been defended by the Italians.

But there was a note left for the British commander, and it read:

"His Royal Highness, the Duke of Aosta, wishes to express his appreciation of the initiative taken by Gen. Wavell and Gen. Cunningham regarding the protection of the women and children of Addis Ababa, thereby demonstrating that strong bonds of humanity and race still exist between our nations."

There was nothing unusual about the British move judged by the standards which Britain follows. It was just customary routine, and was taken in this case to prevent bands of natives from entering the city uncontrolled. And yet in a war such as the world is now experiencing it is well that the note should have been written.

Fewer Branch Banks

A report coming from Elora, a village of some 1,200 population in Wellington county, tells of a shift in the banking service for the community. Both the Royal Bank and the Bank of Montreal have had branches there, and the Royal Bank is now closing up shop, and business will be handled through the Bank of Montreal. By the same arrangement the Bank of Montreal is withdrawing from another community where the Royal Bank also has an office.

If one were to trace this same movement for some years back it would be found the closing down of branch banks had been a rather considerable movement. It may be banks are not supposed to make business mistakes as other people do, but they make them just the same and the desire to extend and expand and have more branches was one of them. There are villages where banks opened branches and leased a building for a long term and at a rental which could not possibly be secured from another tenant. After the branch was closed the premises were leased for what they would bring in the ordinary way and it means a loss as long as the lease lasts.

The business of closing out the lesser and unprofitable branches has probably run most of its course, and it was the part of wisdom for the banks to go through with the program. For a time it caused a degree of inconvenience in staff arrangements as senior men were being taken back into the larger branches and that slowed down the anticipated advancements for junior men. The shifting of trade in villages and the falling off of the importance of farm business are the principal reasons for the change.

Not Likely To Find Him

The London, Ont., Chamber of Commerce received a letter from a tourist from Detroit. He had parked his car on a London street and when he returned found his license plate had been badly twisted and the fenders were crumpled. During his absence some other driver had done some nasty work and had then driven off.

The Chamber of Commerce notified the Detroit man to get his car fixed and to forward the bill. The belief is that the investment will be well worth while in showing that the city is much alive to the treatment accorded visitors.

It is also placed on record that the London police are keeping a look-out for the hoodlum who did the damage, and they intend to make an example of him.

Fine, but our belief is they will never find him. He may be one of their excellent or leading citizens. There are few car owners who have not had fenders bumped in, but we have failed to hear of many of the guilty parties who come to the front and offer to pay the damages. The drivers may take a look and see if any one has been watching, and if they figure they can get away with it they do so. They know very well they have damaged the car of another person, but they have the hit-and-run idea, and it is something which is being done every day in the week. We do not expect the police in London will get in touch with the driver for whom they are looking. He would be merely one of a great number of the same stripe.

NOTE AND COMMENT

Montreal man serving overseas was issued a pair of socks and found they had been knit by his wife. Possibly he was surprised as he may never have been aware she could do such a thing.

Chicago woman lost three rings worth $1,650, and before they were found she lost seven pounds Still lots of people do that when they are training for the ring.

One man in court at London, Ont., had been released from prison last May after serving 19 months for car theft. Now he goes back to serve another two years for the same thing. Education is free in this country, but some people never learn.

Manufacturers reduced the use of aluminum from 1,000 tons per month to 25 tons, so more of it could go for war work. When the government tells the people exactly what needs to be done then the people will do it.

A farmer who was in this office recently said he had started his first furrow with a plow shortly after he was four years of age, and we just read in the Stratford Beacon-Herald of the man who was doing the first plowing of spring, and he was 75 years old. So it does look as though they start young and stay late.

MUSIC

(By A.R.K.)

¶ John Henry's little girl can play, he told me so the other day, he says she's rather smart; she likes piano pieces too, on them she starts and goes clean through, and takes them all apart.

¶ John Henry says her ear is good, it registers like how it should, as keen as it can be; the way she studies too is great, she thumps quite early and quite late, as keen as one can be.

¶ And so he asked me if I'd come, and see just how the thing was done, and hear his daughter play; I told him sure that I would go, 'twould be a free and pleasant show, there was no other way.

¶ She really is a pleasant child, with manner simple like and mild, she said she'd play for me; 'twas then I dusted out my ears, and shifted my artistic gears, I'd hear as well as see.

¶ Well she had sheafs of music there, to name them's more than I would dare, and some were very long; I feared the men who wrote the stuff, had hardly taken time enough, for much of it was wrong.

¶ Perhaps John Henry in his zeal, had tilted somewhat at the keel, his words had taken flight; it may be that this clever child, in aiming was a trifle wild —and didn't hit them right.

CAP and BELLS . .

By SAMUEL MARCHBANKS

THIS column has frequently spoken of the very high standard of performance shown in Canadian music. Although on the whole the artistic growth of our country is slow we build on a good foundation; but in the field of music we have gone far beyond foundation work and may claim consideration with the foremost musical countries in the world. We have not a large number of native composers, but that is in no way extraordinary, considering the meagreness of our population and the struggle which that factor imposes upon any creative artist. What we have got is a number of excellent musical organizations. Radio listeners are familiar with the work of the Toronto Symphony Orchestra and the Concerts Symphoniques of Montreal; there also exist in Ontario a number of choirs with a very high standard of performance. Some of these are connected with churches; the two principal ones, the Mendelssohn Choir and the Toronto Conservatory Choir, are secular organizations.

C & B

For the past nineteen years it has been customary for the city of Toronto to have a performance of Bach's "Passion of Our Lord According to St. Matthew" on the Tuesday of Holy Week. In the early performances the choir for this performance was supplied from a number of Toronto churches, but of late years the Conservatory Choir has taken over the work. From the beginning the conductor has been Sir Ernest Macmillan, and much of the work of organization has been done by Dr. Healey Willan, the Vice-Principal of the Toronto Conservatory.

C & B

An unbroken record of nineteen years of performances of one of the greatest of all choral works is something which we may regard with awe and pride. Although the choir changes its personnel slightly from year to year there is always a majority of singers who have had five, six or even ten or twelve years of experience in singing this particular work, and this experience shows itself in the certainty and poise of the singing. I have had the good fortune to hear the "St. Matthew Passion" many times and in different lands, and personally I consider the Toronto performance, as a whole, to be superior to any other that I have heard.

C & B

This mighty choral work is interesting in form. It is about as complex as a musical work can well be. In performance it requires two choirs, two orchestras, an organ, a choir of children's voices, and a number of soloists. Using these elements the composer presents the story of Christ's Passion in dramatic form, with interludes of 'reflective' music. Thus, the work begins with a chorus in which the first choir sings "Come ye daughters, share my mourning; see Him—" and here the second choir cries "Whom?" and the first replies, "The Bridegroom Christ." The chorus continues in this exchange of question and answer, as though believers and unbelievers were engaged in discussion, and at last they are joined by the children's choir which sings the old hymn, "O Lamb of God," high above all the rest. This introduction over, the dramatic part of the work begins. A tenor soloist sings the words of the Narrator, St. Matthew, and a bass the words of Christ. All the utterances of Christ are accompanied by music from the stringed instruments only, which gives them a quality of gentleness and beauty which cannot be described, but must be heard. The parts of Pontius Pilate, Judas, Peter, the two false witnesses and other necessary characters, are sung by other soloists.

C & B

AS WELL AS these strictly dramatic parts of the music there are frequent solos, given to soprano, alto, tenor and bass singers, which express the grief of the Christian world at the wrongs and woes of Christ. There are also a number of hymns, or chorales, sung by the choirs, which express the simpler piety of humble people. It is impossible to give here any impression of the immensity of this work, nor of its simplicity, for although its music is complex and difficult the effect which it gives is of magnificent simplicity. Unlike much of the music which we call great, this work is not meant to appeal primarily to musical people, but to Christian believers, and it was first written for Good Friday performance in St. Thomas Church in Leipsig, where Bach was choirmaster for many years.

C & B

The Toronto performance of this great work is invariably sold out, and it seems to me time that it was given a wider public than it can now enjoy. Would it not be possible to arrange that in future the Passion should be performed not only on the Tuesday of Holy Week, but also on the afternoon of Good Friday, and that this latter performance be broadcast? Thus what is probably the best choral performance given in Canada would be given to radio listeners here and in the U.S. Every year a certain number of visitors come to Toronto to hear it, but they are necessarily few, and there are thousands music-lovers in Canada who want to hear the Passion but cannot make the journey. Critics from the States and from Europe have frequently spoken of this performance in the highest terms; it is one of the few artistic efforts in Canada which can be honestly described as great. Would it not be in everyone's interest to have it broadcast over a national network?

• United States Quick Moves

THE extension of United States protection to Greenland, coupled with President Roosevelt's request to Congress that he be authorized to acquire foreign ships in American waters, is an event of more far-reaching significance than appears on the surface. Out of these two moves may develop an American plan to protect its own and British ships carrying American-made supplies to Great Britain.

Greenland is thus brought within the operation of the Monroe Doctrine and the principle of hemisphere integrity accepted by the Havana Conference. The application of these principles is not surprising, but the establishment of American air bases in Greenland carries the American defence system far out into the North Atlantic. Stephen Early, the President's secretary, speaking for him, said the Administration had acted after being informed that German planes had been flying over Greenland. There is no doubt, then, against whom the American action is directed.

In his request to Congress for authority to take over foreign-owned vessels the President uttered several significant statements. After declaring that "the growing shortage of available tonnage suited to our national needs" made it imperative to have statutory authority to acquire more ships, the President directed attention to the difficulty of moving materials piling up in ports. "It is essential," he added, "that we shall not permit the continuance of the immobilization in our harbors of shipping facilities....It is obvious that our ultimate defence will be rendered futile if the growing shortage of shipping facilities is not arrested."

A great deal can legitimately be read into these statements. If the President is concerned about the difficulty of securing adequate tonnage to carry American-made material, he must be doubly concerned about the difficulties of getting that material to its destination. In Washington, informed persons predicted that Congress would grant the requested authority and that soon thereafter the President would use the acquired ships in some form helpful to Britain. They can be helpful to Britain only if the material they carry gets there, and the President must be moving toward some plan for ensuring their safe arrival. Whether that means the use of American naval units or of long-range bombers operating from Greenland bases as protection for convoys is conjectural, but there can be little doubt that, moving in line with American public opinion, the President has some plan in contemplation.—Montreal Star.

A Bible Message For Today . . . .

I will lift up mine eyes unto the hills, from whence cometh my help.

My help cometh from the Lord, which made heaven and earth.

He will not suffer thy foot to be moved; he that keepeth thee will not slumber.

Behold, he that keepeth Israel shall neither slumber nor sleep.

The sun shall not smite thee by day, nor the moon by night.

The Lord shall preserve thee from all evil; he shall preserve thy soul.

The Lord shall preserve thy going out and thy coming in from this time forth, and even for evermore.—Psalm 121.

Monthly Report For Sea Losses

LONDON, April 15.—(CP)—The Admiralty announced today it would issue totals of merchant shipping losses monthly in the future instead of each week.

(Heretofore, the Admiralty has issued a statement of shipping losses each Tuesday.)

An authoritative source said the April losses would be announced about mid-May.

British, Allied and neutral shipping losses in March, already announced in weekly totals, were approximately 400,000 tons.

This source said the losses in monthly totals "will make it more difficult for the enemy to deduce the proportion of these losses due to submarines, airplanes, raiders and mines."

It also would give the public more proportionate appreciation of the situation and obviate big amendments which have been necessary to weekly totals, because of the wide areas over which British ships sail, it was said.

It was explained further that a week's losses of 20,000 or 30,000 tons tended to cause undue optimism and make people imagine that the battle of the Atlantic already has been won, while a week's loss of 150,000 or 200,000 tons tended to cause undue pessimism.

Fairmount Honors Mr. and Mrs. Walsh

FAIRMOUNT, April 15—(ENS).—A very enjoyable evening was held on Thursday when upwards of one hundred friends and relatives assembled in the hall and presented Mr. and Mrs. C. H. Walsh with a silver tea service.

A mixed program was given consisting of a song by the school; piano solo, Eleanor Bowles; musical selection, Percy and Elmer Johnston; recitation, Margaret McNeill; violin duet, Happy Staples; Duncan Seymour, accompanied by Velma Staples; Bible quiz conducted by F. Mr. and Mrs. Walsh were called to the front and R. K. Earle read an address. The presentation of the tea service was made by Robt. Armstrong. Mr. Walsh made a very suitable reply.

Nancy was also presented with a hymn book and Tommie a book from their Sunday school classes.

The pleasant evening was brought to a close after lunch was served.

Good Friday In Coventry

On Good Friday evening, in a drizzling rain, a small group of men and women, including policemen and firemen who had not slept for three days, gathered in the ruins of Coventry cathedral for prayer. It was after a visitation by German bombers. A cross of charred wood stood over the improvised altar in the roofless building. The archdeacon told the bare-headed congregation: "It matters not when we die, only how we die." Coventry, a few months ago, was the object of one of the most merciless air raids of the war.

Kawartha Film To Have Public Showing

Over two million people in the United States have watched with wonder and delight while a motion picture in technicolor unrolled a glorious panorama of holiday country unusually rich in its variety of scenery, its fish-stocked rivers and beautiful lakes. The film is called "The Call of the Kawarthas," and is considered by Douglas Oliver, Director of the Travel and Publicity Bureau of Ontario, to be the finest of its type ever produced in this province. The pictures were taken by F. L. Roy, and, like his Royal Visit films, are presented with sound accompaniments. They have been shown during motor-boat shows in Chicago, Detroit and New York, and, sponsored by the Peterborough Tourist Bureau, are displayed with the thought of promoting tourist trade in this district.

The first public showing of "The Call of the Kawarthas," with vocal comment by Mr. Roy, is to be held at the Collegiate Auditorium on Monday evening, April 21st, under the auspices of the Women's Auxiliary to the Civic War Service Council. Chief Gimblett, head of the War Service Council, is to be chairman; members of the Peterborough Women's Service Corps have offered their services as ushers; music prior to the film will be presented by a ten-piece orchestra arranged by Mrs. E. Foster, and during a fifteen-minute intermission the audience is to be entertained by Jack Smith and Robert Hendry.

Half the proceeds are in aid of the Auxiliary's war work, and half will go to the British War Victims' Fund.

"But no one could tell him. Whether they had arrived by a British submarine or warship, or whether they had been smuggled into Norway by a Norwegian fishing boat, was never revealed."

Balkan Shifts All Part Of Allied Plan

(By KIRKE L. SIMPSON.)

WASHINGTON, April 15 (AP)—Word of a British retirement on the main fighting front in the Balkans shattered hopes in Britain that the battle line had been stabilized.

The extent and purpose of the withdrawal to new positions was not clear as this was written. There was strong indication, however, that it was made in accordance with previous plans. Apparently it was not forced by German or Italian successes in cracking important hinges of the defensive arch the Allies are endeavoring to establish for the safeguarding of the Greek Peninsula from the Aegean to the Adriatic.

That the withdrawal would bring claims from the Nazis that their foes were giving up the struggle in Greece was to be expected. German press dispatches went even further, stating that the B.E.F. already had started to leave the country. Since confirmation of this was not forthcoming, it remained to be seen whether the Allies were doing anything more than to contract their defensive front to conserve manpower and shorten communication lines in preparation for more furious German blows.

Churchill's Edict

The British retirement in Greece, however, came at a time when Prime Minister Churchill's war management was under fire at home because of an increasingly critical situation in North Africa. Just how grave the peril to British control of the Suez Canal may be, due to the Nazi-Fascist sweep clear across Libya into Egypt, is not fully discernible. It seems clear, however, that British moves from day to day, or hour to hour, on both the Balkan and the North African fronts come under the stern rule announced to Parliament by Mr. Churchill last week.

He said then, speaking of the Libyan retreat, that neither British prestige nor home morale reasons would govern; that military necessity alone would determine. Despite a surprise Nazi-Fascist sweep around a British force at Tobruk, in Libya, and its advance beyond the Libyan border into Egypt, there is nothing to prove that a movement to shift British forces back from Greece to the African storm centre is in prospect.

The British High Command appears still to be convinced that the Libyan-Egyptian campaign is a Nazi-Fascist diversion operation. That it is being sustained under extreme difficulties is indicated by British reports that gasoline and oil for its armored spearhead are being brought up by air.

Difficult Road Ahead

There is still 150 miles of more difficult terrain ahead of the German-Italian advance guard at the Egyptian border before it makes contact with the old main British defense system at Matruh. It is a question whether the presumably light forces which sidestepped the British forces at Tobruk to reach the Egyptian border, or beyond, can risk a further eastward dash while any formidable British units remain in its rear, as at Tobruk.

Both in Greece and North Africa progressive withdrawals behind ever-shortening defense and communication lines may be visualized in Allied strategy. That has been attempted in North Africa, with ill success as yet, although wear and tear on the attackers is yet to be revealed. Nor is Central and Southern Greece undefensible territory, provided Greek resistance to the Axis does not collapse. The completely water-girt Peleponnesus Peninsula, extreme Southern Greece except for Crete, is almost as formidably protected from blitzkrieg methods as Great Britain still is by the Channel.

Nine Directors Elected At Annual Dinner

A most enjoyable climax to one of the most successful seasons in the history of the Peterborough Ski Club was staged last night when the annual banquet of the organization was held in the dining room of the Y.M.C.A. A large attendance of members, with the junior element strongly in evidence, enjoyed the program and showed great enthusiasms in regard to the future of skiing in general and of the Peterborough Ski Club in particular.

A feature of the gathering was the election by ballot of new directors for next season as follows: Otto Laderach, Jack Holland, Eric Westbye, Cliff Boate, Bob White, J. L. Richardson, Leona Mages, Don Shiner and Robert McKimmie.

A most appetizing dinner, served by a number of girl members of the Ski Club under the direction of Lillian McClelland was done ample justice to by the 80 members present. The decorations were in charge of Vi Davidson.

Allan Cup Games Start On Saturday

CALGARY, April 15.—(CP)—Locale and dates for all games in the Allan Cup senior hockey finals were announced here last night by Frank Sargent of Port Arthur, first vice-president of the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association.

Regina Rangers, western senior champions, will meet Sydney Millionaires, eastern titlists, in Calgary Saturday in the first game. The second will be played in Regina Monday, April 21, and the third in Saskatoon, April 23.

The fourth, if necessary, is scheduled for Regina, April 26 and the fifth, if necessary, for Saskatoon, April 28. Officials will be announced later.

Barlund's Fold With Conn Costs $2,955.50

CHICAGO, April 15—(AP).—Burdened with the heaviest fine ever imposed in Illinois boxing annals, Gunnar Barlund, Finnish heavyweight, and his manager, Paul Damski, today were under a year's suspension as punishment for the Finn's unsatisfactory showing April 4 against Billy Conn, Pittsburg heavyweight.

Sheldon Clark, chairman of the Illinois Athletic Commission, and his two associates voted yesterday to impound Barlund's purse of $3,899.50 less $944 advanced the fighter before the bout. This amounted to a fine of $2,955.50 which will be turned over to the State Treasury.

Damski assumed blame for refusing to permit Barlund to continue because of a cut in his right eyelid, but in doing so ignored a verdict given by Dr. Frank Lagorio, commission physician, that the cut was not of sufficient importance to warrant stopping the fight.

Damski appealed to Referee Barney Ross to stop the fight regardless of this difference of opinion. Damski would not let Barlund get off his stool at the start of the eighth round, thus giving Conn a technical knockout to the disappointment of 14,000 spectators.

The fine was the stiffest ever imposed since boxing was legalized in Illinois 15 years ago. Chairman Clark served warning that boxing fans of the State would be protected and that Chicago "would not become a dumping ground for matches of his character."

Jockey Admits He Took Money

LOS ANGELES, April 15 (AP)—A former jockey, Elmer (Whitey) Phillips, testified Monday he accepted $500 from Bernard Einstoss to fix a race at Hollywood Park so that a horse named Waralli, second choice in the betting, would win.

When the horse ran sixth in a seven-horse race, Phillips said Einstoss threatened to shoot him. He "thought it would be a good time to go to San Diego," so he went.

Phillips' testimony was given in the trial of Einstoss and four others on charges of contributing to the delinquency of minor jockeys, conspiracy and bookmaking.

"It was just a shakedown," Phillips testified. "I took $250 of the $500 and gave it to Murphy."

Irving Sangbusch, also known as Murphy, one of the original defendants, turned State's evidence after charges against him were dismissed.

Jockey Gus Dye said he was paid $200 to keep the horse Rodney Pan out of the money in a race at Hollywood Park in 1936.

"I'd ridden the horse several times before," said the jockey. "He is the kind that will run like a flash if you keep a tight hold on him. If you want him to win, you have to pull him all the way.

"The only way to run him out of the money is to let him run loose so that he'll stumble and flop around."

Dye also described a double-cross by "riding honest."

"I ran second with Cerro in the eighth race at Hollywood Park on June 20, 1936," he declared. "But I didn't get paid that time because I tried to win with the horse, and Murphy told me Mooney (Einstoss) was mad about it."

Vancouver Team Defeats Winnipeg

Varsity will meet the Eastern champions, still to be decided, in a best-of-five series for the Dominion title, scheduled to start in Vancouver April 26. Vancouver Maple Leafs won the National title last year.

SPORTS - DAY BY DAY

By FRED D. CRAIG

President Roosevelt yesterday crowded the lease-lend bill, the convoy problem and the criticism of isolationists into the back of his mind while he went out to the Washington Senators' ball park and got the 1941 season off to an auspicious start by tossing out the first ball. It was a great occasion and the only thing that interfered with the enjoyment of the affair from a Washington standpoint was that the New York Yanks got in some very effective fifth column work with a young southpaw Marius Russo as the leading Quisling and sank the Senators 3 to 0. The folk who picked the Yanks to stage a comeback and grab off the American League pennant again this season have been right for one day anyway for the Yanks by winning the only game scheduled in either of the major loops are leaders in the American circuit for twenty-four hours. Mister McCarthy has been worrying about his pitching but he'll have to admit that no one could have done better for him yesterday than the youthful Russo.

* * * * * *

Today both leagues are scheduled to get away with a bang. In the American loop the Yanks who pried off the lid at Washington yesterday will be back home today to clash with the Philadelphia Athletics and they will undoubtedly face their jinx of last season, Johnny Babich. Other American League battles on the list for today see yesterday's losers the Washington Senators meeting the Red Sox at Boston, the Chicago White Sox playing the Indians in Cleveland and the champion Detroit Tigers starting out on the long trail toward another championship with a game in St. Louis. The National League schedule has the world champion Cincinnati Reds opening before the home fans with the Cards as their guests, the metropolitan rivals, Giants and Dodgers, clashing at Brooklyn, Pittsburg visiting Chicago and the Boston Bees and the Phillies tangling in a battle at Philadelphia.

Our old friend Harvey Barnes who played a lot of hockey as a member of the Peterborough intermediate squad two seasons ago and was popular with both players and fans alike came close to being the goat of the Western Canada senior final game at Calgary Saturday night. Regina Rangers won the argument 3 goals to 2, eliminating the Lethbridge Maple Leafs, with whom Barnes was playing and the former Peterborough defence man figured in the play that tied up the game with only two minutes to go after Lethbridge had a one-goal lead late in the second period. They were still leading 2 to 1 with only two minutes to go when according to the press stories from Calgary Barnes was slow in clearing a puck from near his own goal and the Regina crew took advantage of the break to slap in the tieing counter and before the Maple Leafs had rallied from that disaster the Rangers sagged the netting with another goal that gave them the game and the round.

Peterborough Ski Club, one of the most successful of winter sport organizations in Peterborough wound up a fine season last night with an enjoyable banquet and the election of directors for the coming year. Incidentally big things are in the air for next season, — with a skiing plant close to the city contemplated. The club's official organ the Telemarker says "The Bethany development has put everything else in the shade the past couple of years but there is a great and crying need for something much closer to Peterborough, if not in the city. The club was definitely handicapped by lack of funds but such is no longer the case. Just watch the dust fly now." In other words there promises to be considerable activity along the skiing front in Peterborough, come another winter and with the enthusiastic board of directors elected last night the local club should go places and do things.

Incidentally the Ski Club is building on sound lines. More than any other sporting organization in Peterborough the ski body is paying attention to interesting youngsters in the sport and is looking after the kids in a manner that is bound to bring results. At the annual banquet last night the junior and intermediate members out-numbered the seniors and that is the payoff on the success of the policy that has been adopted by the organization. The Ski Club is bringing on scores of youngsters who have shown aptitude at the sport and who are enthusiastic skiers in their early 'teens. It does not require much imagination to realize that a sport founded on that kind of thing is bound to flourish and expand. While unfortunately in other sports in Peterborough we have stopped encouraging the kids, the Peterborough Ski Club has taken the other attitude and there is no doubt in the world that it will cash in handsomely on its foresight in realizing that all such pastimes require a nursery for future devotees.

The Quebec Hockey Association has failed in an attempt to have the fifth and final game in the Eastern junior finals played in Montreal, the C.A.H.A. having refused the request. There was certainly nothing unreasonable in what the Royals asked. They have played the first four games in Toronto and were surely entitled to one of the fixtures being played in Montreal. On top of that four of their players are McGill students who have to write examinations in Montreal today which means that the Royals will have to fly to Toronto this afternoon to be there on time for the battle with Oshawa tonight. The Royals are about the best junior outfit to come out of Quebec and with an even break on the series might have given that province its first Eastern junior title but it looks as if gates for the Maple Leaf Gardens loom up larger in the consideration of the hockey magnates than does the sporting side of the game. This whole unfair playoff arrangement which ignores the rights of the Montrealers altogether was drawn up with an eye on gate receipts. That is the yardstick with which the amateur hockey officers measure everything nowadays and a knowledge of that helps to explain a lot of mysteries.

Ralph Allen discusses the point in his Globe and Mail column as follows: "Ever since the series opened the Royals have been lodging sporadic objections against these ice arrangements. For one think, they felt that they were entitled to something resembling an even break on home games. For another and much more important thing, four of the Royals players are about to write examinations at McGill. They have had to dash back and forth between Toronto and Montreal between games, usually by plane, in order to keep up with their studies. They felt that if even one of the five games could have been played in Montreal, it would have been much easier for them to do themselves justice both as hockey players and as students who have a considerable long-term stake in these examinations. The Oshawa players wanted to play at least one game in Montreal, too, mainly because they thought they would enjoy the trip. In view of these circumstances, the decision of the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association might have seemed absurdly simple, particularly to a reader of the sports pages or a habitue of banquet rooms. It wasn't simple at all. The one factor the young hockey players forgot about was that the series would make more money in Toronto. The hockey players can be forgiven for overlooking this point, because the money doesn't go to them anyway. The young athletes were told in so many candid monosyllables: 'The series stays in Toronto. That's where the dough is.' It is not probable, though it is distinctly possible, that for the sake of a few hundred dollars they'll never see one or more of these Montreal players could blow a whole year of university."

Sporting Chili Con Carne: Gladys Mortimer will represent Peterborough at the annual meeting of the Ontario Ladies' Softball Association this week-end....O.K. "Amateur," we will try and get that tennis information for you....Joe DiMaggio got off to a nice start yesterday with two for four....Dutch Leonard held the Yanks to six hits but they got three runs while his teammates only collected three blows and nary a counter off the delivery of Russo....C.A.H.A. has changed that screwy military replacement rule but it still does not look so hot....They might better have scrapped it altogether....The decision to make Montreal Royals play the whole junior series in Toronto regardless of examinations or anything else has a distinctly bad smell.

Montreal Wins

MONTREAL, April 15 (CP) — Montreal Rocklands scored a 46-32 victory over Halifax Navy here last night in the first game of their best-of-three Eastern senior basketball semi-final series. Second game of the series is scheduled for Wednesday night here.

Rocklands, sporting almost the same team that advanced to the Dominion finals last year, overcame a slim Halifax lead early in the game, and were never headed after the first eight minutes of play. They had worked up a comfortable 24-14 margin at half-time, and added to it in the second half.

$3,000 To Be Split By Amateurs In CAHA Ruling

CALGARY, April 15 — (CP). — Nearly $3,000 will be divided among amateur clubs as their share of the preliminary payment from the National Hockey League under the new arrangement for compensation for developing players, it was decided here last night at the annual meeting of the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association.

The N.H.L. gave the money to the C.A.H.A. for disbursement as a special payment in the interim before the new agreement under which set payments are made whenever a player signs a professional contract comes into effect.

Delegates also adopted the reports of the rules committee, the committee which had been drawing up a constitution for the recently-formed International Ice Hockey Association and of the branch presidents.

Payments will be made to amateur clubs in the near future for 15 players who turned professional in the last year and the cases of five others will be held over until full information is received so the committee handling the disbursements will know how they should be divided.

Prof. W. G. Hardy of Edmonton, chairman of the committee which handled the payments, reported there was no "hard and fast" rule about dividing the sum for each player among the various clubs which developed him but there would be a major portion paid to the junior or senior clubs with the remainder divided among bantam.

SYDNEY OUSTS MONTREAL TO GO INTO SENIOR HOCKEY FINAL

Royals Whipped By 8 to 3 In Deciding Tilt

MONTREAL, April 15 — (CP). — For the first time since 1935 the banner of the Maritimes rode to-day into the final for the Dominion's senior hockey crown—borne proudly by a fighting band of Sydney Millionaires who grew better as the going got tougher.

The Millionaires won their way into the Allan Cup final against Regina Rangers, Western champions, by overpowering Montreal Royals 8-3 here last night in the deciding game of their Eastern playoff. The victory was scored before a crowd of about 9,000.

Jubilant over their victory, Sydney planned to leave to-day for the West in their title quest that has kept them weeks away from home. The first game of their best-of-five final with Regina, who eliminated Lethbridge Maple Leafs to win the Western title, is scheduled for Saturday in Calgary.

Four Main Cogs.

Key figures in their concluding triumph over the Royals were four players trying for their second Cup victory in two years. They were Defencemen Mel Snowdon, back in action after a long injury-siege, and the slim forward trio of Bobby Walton, Dick Kowcinak, and Johnny McCreedy, all members of the champion Kirkland Lake Blue Devils of last season.

McCreedy bagged two goals and two assists, Walton two goals and one assist, and Kowcinak helped on two tallies.

Jud Sneil also bagged a brace of goals and Jack Fritz and Jack Atchison one each as the Millionaires opened up a quick three-goal lead and spurted ahead again after the fighting Royals had almost drawn even. The three Montreal counters went to Johnny Mahaffey, Ronnie Perowne, and Jimmy Haggarty.

Goalie Bill Durnan of the Royals who had shut out Sydney for one of his team's two victories, was hit in the face in the final frame and forced to give way to substitute Goalie Lloyd Daniels.

One Of The Favorites

Thirty-eight thoroughbreds have been nominated for the King's 50 Guineas and the Ontario Jockey Club's $5,500 to be run at the Woodbine on May 17. There are already three favorites and one is Undisturbed (ABOVE), a black gelding owned by Harry Giddings of Oakville.

Royals' Goalie Is Badly Hurt

MONTREAL, April 15—(CP). — Bill Durnan, goalie for Montreal Royals, was "resting comfortably" in hospital after suffering a head injury midway through the third period of Royals' final game with Sydney Millionaires.

Durnan was struck over the eye by a blazing penalty shot by Bud McEachern, and fell to the ice unconscious. Early yesterday morning Dr. A. A. MacKay said the goalie was much improved in hospital.

Dr. MacKay said the extent of Duran's injuries would not be known until X-ray plates had been developed, but he doubted if the injury would be as serious as a fractured skull or the brain concussion that was at first feared.

Durnan was replaced in the nets by Royals' sub-goalie, Lloyd Daniels who let in the eighth goal in Sydney's 8-3 triumph.

BC Thunderbirds Cage Champs

VANCOUVER, April 15—(CP). — University of British Columbia Thunderbirds captured the Western Canadian Men's Senior basketball championship with two straight victories by defeating Winnipeg St. Andrew's 47-39 here last night. They won the first of the best-of-three series, 43-21 here Saturday night.

Brantford Lions Outscore Oshawa B's 10-4

ST. CATHARINES, April 15. — Displaying a fast-breaking and close-checking brand of puck-chasing, Brantford Lions captured the first game of the O.H.A. Junior "B" finals here last night when they defeated Oshawa Bees, 10-4.

Lions packed too much early foot for Frank Black's charges, who left their rally until too late. Only in the final did Bees outscore Brants at 2-1, as both teams tossed in a deal of heavy bodying, a wealth of holding and various trips. The spice of the night was inserted late in the second when Butcher and Furey tangled and Referee McKay had to plunge into the fray to hold off the rivals, who were keen to get involved. Both starters drew majors.

Castilloux Adds New Victory Whipping Troise

TORONTO, April 15 — (CP). — Dave Castilloux of Montreal left for home today with another victory added to the list in his campaign for a shot at the lightweight boxing title. The Canadian champion last night earned a technical knockout over Victor Troise of New York, the fight being stopped after two minutes and 35 seconds of the eighth when Troise was taking a beating about the head and body.

The other of the two main bouts on the Card was also a Montreal victory, Maxie Berger getting an unanimous verdict over Manuel Villa II of Mexico City in their 10-rounder, a crowd-pleaser throughout.

Berger was forced to hustle all the way to outpoint the rushing Mexican, who built up points on his forcing tactics but lost several by landing low blows. The Mexican was on the aggressive from the outset and for a time in the second round he had the Montrealer in difficulties. Berger came back, however, to get the better of the frequent toe-to-toe exchanges.

Castilloux didn't show any devastating punch, but he had Troise in trouble several times and in the seventh opened a cut over the New Yorker's eye. He went to work on this again in the eighth when the bout was stopped.

(By The Canadian Press).

New York Rangers, sparked by the two-goal performance of Frank Boucher, defeated Montreal Maroons 2-1 at Montreal 13 years ago tonight to win the Stanley Cup. It was a hard and bitterly-fought game, 21 penalties being handed out, including three majors. It was the first time the world's hockey championship had been won by a United States team since Seattle took it in 1917.

FDR Sees Yanks Shellac Senators By 3-0

By JUDSON BAILEY
(Associated Press Sports Writer.)

Sixteen major league baseball machines were lined up today to go whirring into action before more than 200,000 fans—but even on opening day it was the old familiar story of chasing New York Yankees.

The fearsome bombers from the Bronx got a jump on the rest of the teams by swooping down on Washington yesterday and shellacking the Senators 3-0 in front of President Roosevelt and 32,000 other Capital fans.

The way the Yanks took the lead in the American League before their rivals even had a chance to get started was something like the way they used to scare their foes into submission by blasting countless "home runs' 'into the stands and over the fences in batting practice before their games began.

They didn't even give Washington a chance during the contest. The ceremonies of Vice-president Henry Wallace raising the flag and President Roosevelt throwing out the first ball were hardly over before the Yanks had rolled out in front.

Red Rolfe, second man up in the ball game, singled. He was forced by Tommy Henrich, but the latter went all the way to second on a wild throw in the play and scored quickly on a triple by Joe DiMaggio.

Senators Stunned.

The Senators, as well as the spectators, were practically stunned by the ease of the thrust, and Marius Russo, slender sophomore southpaw, never let them recover. He held the aNtionals to three scattered singles and started two of the Yankees' three double plays. In addition the Yanks punched out another run in the fifth on two doubles, one by Russo himself, and scored again in the sixth on two singles and a long fly.

The Senators were up against marvellous pitching, but they didn't show any signs they would be a hitting team any time this year. And the very fact that the opposition was so wilted may keep other American League clubs from getting discouraged immediately.

The Yanks were due to open their home season to-day against the Philadelphia Athletics.

The Detroit Tigers, on the other hand, had to face the St. Louis Browns, "spoilers" of better teams all ast season, and the Cleveland Indians ran into the always-dangerous Chicago White Sox in their openers to-day.

St. Louis Cardinals and the Cincinnati Reds, Western division kingpins of the National League, clash to-day at Cincinnati, while the Brooklyn Dodgers, their arch rivals in the East, take on the lustre-lacking New York Giants.

The other openers included Pittsburg at Chicago and Boston at Philadelphia in the National, and Washington at Boston in the American.

Edmonton Comets Beat Vancouver

EDMONTON, April 15—(CP). — Edmonton Comets opened their bid for the Western Canada Women's Senior basketball championship by downing Vancouver I.X.L. 38-26 in the first game of a best-of-three series here last night. Second match will be played tonight.

Playing before a handful of fans, the teams were deadlocked 7-7 at the end of the first quarter. Comets went out in front 17-15 in the second, widened the lead to 25-22 in the third and staved off a last-minute rally by the visitors in the last quarter.

Little Laura Strachan led Edmonton Sharp-shooters, scoring seven field goals on 16 tries for 14 points. Rita Panasis was top scorer for Vancouver with 10.

From there the immigration authorities took them in hand and transported them to Ellis Island. This photograph was made on their arrival at the island. Though closely guarded, officially they are "not under arrest."

Captured Early In War.

(The Greek capture of Corizza less than a month after the outbreak of the Greek-Italian war touched off a nation-wide celebration by the Greeks, who raised the cry of "On to Tirana" and "On to Rome.")

Fascist Press dispatches from the front claimed these advances:

1. To the western shores of Lake Presba, at the juncture of the Greek-Albanian-Yugoslav frontiers, threatening to cut off Greek troops caught between Presba and Lake Ohrid.

2. Southeast from Corizza toward Bilishti (Biklishta) just across the Albanian frontier from Greece on the road from Corizza to Phlorina, hinge of the Greek-British defence line.

(There was no confirmation of either claim).

Italian press dispatches from the front claimed the Yugoslav drive into Albania north of Scutari ended yesterday with the capture of more than 600 Yugoslavs and quantities of war material.

Il Messaggero said Bersaglieri supported by armored units chased "Yugoslav regulars and irregulars who attempted an offensive back across the frontier."

130 Miles From Salum

The line approximately 130 miles east of Salum, is the western terminus of a railroad leading to Alexandria, some 160 miles further east.

The German-Italian threat to Alexandria and the Suez raised the possibility that Egypt, thus far a non-belligerent, might find herself at war any day.

The latest developments in the Middle East held great import for the Moslem world. Of the 250,000,000 followers of Islam spread over Europe, Africa and Asia, approximately 100,000,000 live under the British flag, and their destinies are bound up in Britain's struggle with the Axis.

Germany has been courting Moslem favor, especially in French-mandated Syria and oil-rich Iran.

A pro-Axis government controlling Iraq, the independent state which was a mandate of Britain from 1918 to 1932, would menace Britain's oil supplies which have an outlet at the port of Haifa, Palestine.

Such a development also would create a backdoor danger to Turkish security, British authorites said.

Russia's postal department handled 7,000,000,000 newspapers and magazines in the last year.

Religious Training In Schools Is Failing To Measure Up

CAMPBELLFORD, April 15. — (ENS)—Teaching religion in the schools came in for serious discussion by members of Rylstone Womn's Institute who met this month at the home of Mrs. F. M. Rutherford. This subject was introduced by Mrs. S. G. Meiklejohn, who gave the topic of the afternoon. She spoke on "How to Make Religion a Vital Factor in the Lives of the Growing Generation" emphasizing what she terms was a serious lack of religious training in public schools. Mrs. Meiklejohn expressed the opinion that lack of religious teaching in the schools was having dire social results. She pointed out that most children of this generation were neither attending church with their parents nor attending Sunday School classes at their direction. "If we could have religion taught in our schools, I feel sure it would create a greatly improved social outlook for the men and women of the future."

The speaker felt that there should be some uniform program of religious instruction in all public schools. A conference of various Protestant church leaders with educators should be held to study the problem and to consider a program of instruction in the fundamental teachings of God. Future generations would have far better lives if they were built on a sound foundation of religion. "A good many children of Protestant denominations are getting absolutely no religious teaching at all under the present educational system," declared Mrs. Meiklejohn.

Roll call for the afternoon was "Do's and Dont's for the Flower Grower" which was well responded to by the members. Others items on the program which was arranged by Mrs. Wilfred Spencer, were a piano solo by Mrs. F. M. Rutherford; a reading by Mrs. Lily Anderson; vocal solo by Margaret Spencer; a reading by Mrs. Carl Reid.

It was announced that the annual meeting and election of officers would take place next month at the home of Mrs. Chester Meiklejohn.

7th Raid, 2 Weeks Rocks Berths

LONDON, April 15.—(CP).— The Royal Air Force dropped heavy bombs "either on or near" the 26,000-ton German battleships Gneisenau and Scharnhorst in another attack last night on the German naval base at Brest, the Air Ministry announced to-day.

Hundreds of bombs were unloaded over the dock area of the port, a communique declared, in a four-hour assault.

Hits also were reported on power stations at Haarlem and Zelden, in the Nazi-occupied Netherlands, and German supply ships were bombed and machine-gunned off the coast.

The raid on Brest was the seventh in the last two weeks.

The Air Ministry said that poor visibility made it impossible to determine whether any direct hits were scored on the Gneisenau and Scharnhorst.

Loss of one plane in the day and night attacks on German objectives was announced.

Take Your Choice

HON. W. A. BUCHANAN
Chairman,
Newspaper Publishers Committee

AT FIRST look we have less "freedom" than our grandfathers had. Because everything we do affects our neighbours more . . .

There are many laws to protect public health and safety. Our meat is inspected. Our milk must come up to standard. Our sidewalks must be shovelled when it snows. Our medicines must be correctly labelled. Our trucks must carry flares.

In war-time there are other necessary rules: We may not exhaust certain essential raw materials. We must not squander foreign exchange. We cannot reveal information of use to the enemy . . .

There are hundreds of laws, rules, ordinances which say in effect, "do not"!

But remember this vital fact: every one of these restrictions is a restriction you have imposed on yourself! They are the rules of a government you elected, a government which works in-a-gold-fish-bowl of publicity, a government you can freely criticize, a government which you can even depose if you choose! There lies your true freedom . . . a freedom of which your one best guarantee is a free press!

And remember another thing: with this political liberty which we are all girding ourselves to save for our children, you have another freedom . . . economic freedom of choice! This is your right, within the limits of the needs of war which we all respect, to choose when, where and how you will spend your money . . . to patronize one store, or to buy one brand and pass all others by.

Every merchant, every manufacturer, every business with a service for sale recognizes this right. He knows that if he fails to please you, his punishment is swifter than any court could mete out.

If he does a bad job, if he misleads you or even merely annoys you, someone else gets the business and red ink inevitably liquidates the offender.

This is as it should be, with one limitation. We must give every man with something to sell the right to offer it, to claim for it what it can do, to believe in his own product or service. Otherwise we lose our own right of choice!

In a totalitarian state the government decides what is best for you. It curbs advertising . . . not because it fears you will be harmed (we curb that kind ourselves) . . . but because it fears you will find something you like better than the thing it wants you to have!

Give any man the right to withhold the honest news of another man's product, and you give away your right to choose which product you prefer. . . . What's more, in the same instant we would begin to destroy the very prosperity we must have to pay for the fight to assure this same freedom to our children!

Your newspaper is the first guardian of both these freedoms. Don't take it for granted. Complacency is the greatest danger of all. Read your newspaper carefully. Talk with your neighbour; rouse him, too. And, most important, if you yourself ever see a piece of news which seems to be reported wrong, or worse, if you know of a real story that doesn't get printed at all, write your Editor — quickly, loudly! FACTS are our bulwark!

NOTE: The Newspaper Publishers Committee, speaking through its chairman, will bring you one of these institutional advertisements in this space each week. Clubs, patriotic societies, business firms or individuals who would like reprints may have them by writing to the business office of this newspaper.

PROPAGANDA IN WAR.

"If the war news sometimes makes you feel blue, that is just the way Hitler wants you to feel about it," Louis Yeotes said this morning. He was telling about a Greek soldier's impressions of the Germans. "May be this man was from the country. He was wounded and in hospital. He said: 'We were surprised when we saw them. They were no bigger than we were.' The Germans must have succeeded in making a simple country people believe that their men are giants the same way they make others think that Hitler's men can't be beaten. Looks to me as if they got great propaganda everywhere you turn." And in the last war the Allies were masters of propaganda.

HE LIKES PETERBOROUGH.

An appreciative visitor to Peterborough over Easter Sunday was the Rev. Charles R. Ashdown, B.A., Ph.D., retired Presbyterian minister from the lumber and fishing town of Gooderham, 60 miles north in the south of Haliburton county. Dr. Ashdown came to consult Dr. D. N. Buchanan, who operated very successfully on his throat last September. Drs. Clarke and Gordon were also pleased to see the elderly clergyman's condition. Dr. Ashdown called on Mr. Hugh Murray and Col. F. J. Fee, who were fellow patients in Nicholls Hospital last September. Altogether, not forgetting St. Paul's and some other of the churches, his memories of Peterborough are of a fine city.

Road Surfaces Badly Heaved Many Bog Holes

Abnormally warm weather for the first week of April has loosed frost from the ground with something like explosive force, heaving road surfaces that have been kept plowed bare of snow.

No. 7 Highway from Peterborough to Madoc, and probably further east has been extensively damaged by the sudden letting go of winter's hold on the soil and road structures.

Stocks Bread Company has temporarily suspended its delivery of bread by motor truck to the various places along its No. 7 route.

"The road is in such a bad condition," Alderman Dutton said today "that we simply had to send our bread by train until the roads are again in proper condition of travel."

Monaghan Pavement

Reeve M. H. Johnston said there had been some damage to the "retread pavement laid by the township on Edison Avenue, McGill street, and near McMahon's store at Cameron street and Monaghan road.

"There are just a few broken spots so far," Reeve Johnston said, "and I would not say there is any serious breaking up. The retread surface has stood our winters very well. I hear of several places on the county road system that required some attention, but it is not of great extent.

The county road through Monaghan from Crawford's Grove winding south and west across to the highway has some bad spots where the frost did considerable damage. New county roads in Ennismore required some filling with gravel, but the breaks in the surfacing are said to be moderate.

W. J. Moore told The Examiner that he has been visiting cheese factories in the district "and the roads are desperate. Some of them are impassable. It is a long time since I saw them so bad."

Deputy-reeve Percy Davidson, chairman of the county road committee, called some of its members in this morning to make a survey of the county road system, and examine the effect of the winter's much too sudden relaxing of its grasp on the soil.

Two-Month Term On Theft Charges

After John Foster Thompson had pleaded guilty in police court today to two charges of theft, Magistrate O. A. Langley, K.C., sentenced him to two months in jail on each charge, the sentences to run concurrently.

Thompson was charged with stealing a purse, oranges, chocolates and other articles from a parked car owned by Elinor Brown and with the theft of a suit case from an Oshawa man.

Constable Archie Menzies, called to give evidence in the first case, said that Thompson had admitted stealing the articles from a parked car.

Thompson called Constable C. J. McGillen as a defence witness. Constable McGillen testified that a short time before the goods had been taken from the automobile he had refused to let Thompson enter a dance at the Legion Hall because the accused was drunk.

Warning that if Thompson ever came before him again on a similar charge he would send him to the reformatory, Magistrate Langley made the sentence two months in the county jail in each charge.

LINDSAY

Coboconk Dam Is Washed Out

LINDSAY, April 15.—(ENS)—Mr. A. L. Killaly, Trent Valley Canal superintendent, Peterborough, and Mr. Bruce McNevin, M.P., have inspected the damage done as a result of the collapse of the government dam across Gull River at Coboconk on the week-end. It has not been officially stated when work will start on the structure.

A couple of weeks ago the government commenced the construction of a new dam to replace the old wooden one. Two or three sections were completed, and it was finally decided to cease work until after the war. This left one section of the old structure still standing. It was in a weakened condition and the pressure following the spring freshet caused it to collapse under the strain. The water poured forth in great volume through the broken section and quickly drained the millpond above the dam. The water rose to a considerable height below the dam, but no property was damaged.

Citizens of all classes in town and district paid the last tribute of respect on the week-end to the late Dr. J. L. Sutton, whose funeral took place from his late residence to Riverside Cemetery. The funeral was conducted by the Independent Order of Oddfellows. Service at the home were conducted by Revs. J. J. Black and F. H. McIntosh and the I.O.O.F. services at the grave by J. E. Anderson and H. C. Pass. The late Dr. Sutton was born in Cavan Township and came from Millbrook to Lindsay several years ago.

The funeral of the late Miss Mary Agnes Guiry, town, took place Monday morning from her late residence to St. Mary's Church where requiem mass was chanted by her brother, Rev. J. J. Guiry of Port Hope. There was a large attendance of friends and relatives. Present in the sanctuary were His Excellency Bishop O'Connor of Peterborough; Rt. Rev. Monsignor McColl, V.G., Lindsay; Rev. J. Ryan, C.S.B., Toronto; Rev. Father Galvin, Grafton; Rev. Father McFadden, Downeyville; Rev. Father McAuley, Campbellford; Rev. Fathers Butler and Kay, of Kinmount; Rev. Father Meagher, Lindsay and Rev. Father Greenan, of Peterborough. The service was preached by Rev. Father Welsh of Lindsay. Interment took place at the Catholic Cemetery at Downeyville.

Ice Goes Out Chemong Lake

The ice went out of Chemong Lake Monday night, and blue water greeted the Bridgenorth folks this morning as they looked out at the new day and the usual beauty of lake and countryside up in Jim Jopling's bailiwick.

There was nothing spectacular or destructive to the outgoing of the ice this Spring, and the long floating bridge across to Ennismore was hardly aware that winter had gone and summer had taken its place. No pounding of the bridge with big ice floes this season. Bridgenorth people believe that most of it melted away or just disintegrated into particles. At any rate there was no bombarding, and no wrenching of the bridge.

Sam Bell says it has been the most orderly change from ice to open water that he has ever seen, or something like that. And the Examiner's Ennismore correspondent adds another little detail that the lake made up its mind in a hurry. The ice was loosened from the shore last Friday, and this morning it had vanished all but some little fringe along the Bridgenorth shore. County gravel trucks were rolling across it this morning, ample proof that the bridge is all set for summer traffic.

War Comes First

RUSSELL, Man., April 15.—(CP). —Premier John Bracken said in an address last night that the only major issues of the Manitoba election campaign are the effective prosecution of the war effort "Necessity" for implementation of the Sirois report on Dominon-Provincial relations and the "serious" condition of agriculture. All parties supporting coalition are agreed on these three points, he said.

Lights Go Out; One Of Combatants Hit By Tumbler

A confused story of a fight in which the lights went out and a tumbler came flying through the air to hit one of the combatants on the head was told in police court today when Magistrate Langley endeavored to get the facts in two assault charges.

Douglas Yates and Angus Fontaine were both charged with assaulting Bert Pearson, occasioning actual bodily harm but after the evidence had been heard in the case against Yates Magistrate Langley dismissed the charge and the second charge was withdrawn by the complainant, Pearson, after he had given his own evidence.

From the stories told in court trouble arose when young Yates and his uncle, Angus Fontaine, went to the home of Yates' mother and found Pearson there. The witnesses, however, did not agree as to what had actually happened. Fontaine, called as a defence witness in the Yates' case, declared that Yates had not struck Pearson at all and witness said that he did not know whether he himself did or not because he had been struck on the head and dazed by a glass tumbler that somebody hurled during the altercation. Mrs. Yates, sister of the accused, was also called by the defence and she declared that it was her son and Fontaine who had started the fight and that Fontaine had kicked Pearson in the face.

Magistrate Langley said that he could not make a conviction against young Yates in view of the conflicting nature of the evidence.

After Pearson had testified in his charge against Fontaine he remarked that so far as he was concerned he was willing to drop the whole thing and with that the case against Fontaine was withdrawn.

Then Mrs. Yates announced that she proposed to lay a charge of assault against Fontaine, claiming that he had struck her and as a result she had had several ribs broken.

Boy Stole Anchor, Sold It For Junk

Detective Sergt. W. E. Meagher, called to give evidence, said that the boy had admitted stealing the anchor and selling it to a junk dealer for 50 cents. The witness told the court that the boy "had never had much of a chance."

Cheese Factories Getting Ready For Record Production Year

The swooping arrival of spring several weeks ago has revitalized the dairy industry of Central Ontario with new ambitions and vigor, and housecleaning in preparation for the 1941 season of pasturage which is likely to be at least a fortnight earlier than in normal years.

Cheese factories in William J. Moore's dairy instructorate, comprising Peterborough, parts of Northumberland and Victoria Counties, are putting in cold storage plants; others are buying new vats; farmers are investing in milking machines; and the De Laval Company has had a night shift working for the last three weeks or more.

Early Cheese Season,

The Ontario Government has been broadcasting the need of getting the cheese factories into operation at least two weeks earlier than usual, to supply an essential food for the people of Great Britain.

Providence is co-operating by transforming April into Maytime with something of the background and atmosphere of the first half of June, and there is a general bustling along all fronts of the dairy business.

Mr. Moore told the Examiner today that the following factories are installing new cold storage accommodation: Bobcaygeon, Warminster, and Warsaw in this county; and Woodland and Beaver in Northumberland. This is only one phase of this 1941 chapter of belated improvements.

"They are practically making a new factory at Warsaw," Mr. Moore said. Gordon Payne is president.

Demand for Milkers.

The De Laval Company is working at the peak of its capacity, and to prevent a "back log" of orders, it has decided to engage a night shift.

"Shortage of labor and postponed replacements and improvements during the depression" were the factors behind this surge of business, mentioned by Walter Fitzgerald.

"We have a heavy demand for milking machines," he said, "and that is no doubt due to the effect of labor shortage, and the dairy farmers' anticipation of it, together with a big demand for milk. It seems to me that the dairy farmers have decided to do everything they can to supply milk to the market, even to buying of milk machines.

Then, during the depression there was no doubt quite a general curtailment of replacements. Some recovery was noticed in 1937 and 1938, but the industry as a whole is feeling now the full effect of the postponement of all that buying and improvement to plants."

Mr. Fitzgerald said that the De Laval Company's orders are all for domestic delivery and use.

The Earlier Season,

Spring may change its mind before it advances far into May, Mr. Moore remarked, but milk production is bound to be earlier than usual, once the pasturages and the growth of grass get a start from this present sunshine and moisture.

Raffle Of Canoe Adds $602 For War Victims

By far the largest single contribution to come to the British War Victims Fund, came in as a result of the draw held on the canoe donated by J. B. Odette and Sons. Tickets for a total amount of $611.90 were sold on it, and expenses for two of the four lots of tickets printed amounted to $9.18 leaving a net return of $602.72. As a further contribution the Odette Brothers paid for the first lot of tickets printed, and Miss M. Rodney paid for one set of tickets as a contribution to the fund.

Much credit also goes to the Odette Brothers for organizing a goodly share of the ticket selling, and others who materially assisted in this were Grafton's Ltd. The Examiner, and Scarfe's Paint Shop.

His Worship Mayor Hamilton drew the winning ticket No. 65 yesterday afternoon at the Examiner office from a large churn loaned for the occasion by De Laval Co., and the winning ticket was held by Harry Bateman, who lives at the Y.M.C.A. We wish the winner much pleasure from its ownership and congratulate the donors on the amount realized for the Fund. At the same time thanking those who assisted in various ways to help the draw to such a success.

McLeod's Drug Store has proved to be most consistent in adding its share to come in from the Penny Boxes ever since the Fund was started.

Call Of The Kawarthas

The Ladies' Auxiliary War Service Council is sponsoring a showing of the picture, "The Call of the Kawarthas" at the Collegiate Institute on Monday, April 21. Tickets are now on sale for this, and can be procured from the representatives of all the city women's organizations who are members of the Council. Mrs. G. Benton is the convener for this, and tickets can also be procured from Grafton's Ltd., The Examiner, and at the city clerk's office. While the picture has already been shown in many large centres in the U.S.A. this is its first public showing in this city, and the citizens will be much interested in seeing the means adopted in attracting American tourists to this country, with the consequent advantage to Canada in American monetary exchange.

The films have been loaned for the occasion by the Peterborough Tourist Bureau, and F. L. Roy is giving his services in operating the projector with sound equipment, and 50 per cent of the proceeds will come to the Fund. Plan to spend an evening of pleasure to see the beauty of our nearby country, and at the same time through this help the less fortunate people of Britain.

Tickets on the draw for the 97-piece set of china, "Queen's Bouquet" donated by Routley China Store are going well, and the draw is expected to be made shortly. Tickets may be procured from Routley China Shop, The Examiner and the Thumbs Up Girls.

If through some twist, jar or strain a vertebra at a certain part of the spine become slightly deranged, causing constriction of the nerves supplying the kidneys, these important organs cannot work properly and it is practically impossible for them to function normally again until that nerve constriction has been reduced.

Common Sense Necessary to Balance Family Budget. Wife Can Go a Long Way on Income She Has if She Studies the Spending of Money.

Dear Miss Dix—If Anna and her fiance, who asked you recently if they could undertake marriage on a salary of $20 a week, are intelligent enough, they can do so and live comfortably. I know from experience. My husband and I have been married several years and have two children, both born in hospitals. We have an income of only $25 a week. On this we are among the better dressed class of people. We live in a modern furnished apartment in a good neighborhood. We have plenty of nourishing, good food. We go to entertainments on an average of three nights a week. We entertain our friends. We make a 300-mile trip in our car, which we own, to visit relatives every month or two. Besides this, we pay $40 per month on debts which we made while farming. If we can pay off our debts, support a family of four and enjoy a very happy and comfortable married life on $25 a week, surely two people can live on $20 per week if they will only use their heads.

WICHITA.

ANSWER—I'd say they would have to use their heads and also a conjuring trick or two to equal your record in financing. If as the proverb tells us, figures do not lie, you have performed a near-miracle in spreading 25 bucks over an almost incredible amount of family expenses, and I beg of you in the interest of innumerable women who are struggling hopelessly with their budgets to tell us how you did it.

Believe me, any woman who can pay off debts, buy gasoline, take long motor trips, dress the family well, feed them on good food and give parties and go to parties on $25 a week is a financial wizard, and she should not keep her secret to herself. She should reveal how she does it.

Nor should she devote her talents to running one small family. She should be at least Assistant Secretary of the Treasury, and I am sure that when Mr. Morgenthau tries to balance the budget he would welcome her assistance with shouts of joy.

Go With Parent You Love Better

Dear Dorothy Dix—I am a girl of 17, the child of divorced parents, and soon must make up my mind which one I choose to live with. My father has married again and has a second child whom he adores. By the terms of the divorce I have had to visit my father twice a month, but when I do his wife makes thing very unpleasant for me during my stay. My father says that if I choose to live with my mother he will forget he ever had a daughter. My mother has not married again and has a little business which supports her quite comfortably. I love both my parents and I don't want to give either one of them up, but I am getting so I can't stand the continual abuse of each other that my parents force me to listen to. What do you think I had better do?

ANNA.

ANSWER—Poor little girl, having to suffer so for the sins of your parents! Another pathetic reminder that in the wreck of every home that is pulled down by the passions and weaknesses and lack of self-control of people with children, there lies buried the happiness and well being of the innocent little victims.

In making your choice between your parents, Anna, you must be guided by your own instincts. Go to the one you love best and to the household in which you find the greatest peace and happiness. But make your selection dependent upon a solemn promise from the parent you go to never to say another word of abuse about the other one.

If your stepmother is jealous of you and resents you even visiting your father, I should think there would be small chance of your finding anything but misery in that household. At any rate, comfort yourself with this thought—that if you are 17 you will soon be able to go out on your own and visit between your mother and father as you please. So you will not have to give up either one for long.

I urge you to begin at once to fit yourself for some occupation by which you can make yourself independent.

Advice Still Is: Don't Marry Secretly

Dear Dorothy Dix — You say: "Never get married secretly." If I don't, what shall I do I have promised a boy I would marry him and we are both a year under age. We can't see ourselves waiting another year, yet we know our parents would be furious with us. Would it be better to get married and then tell them the next day? What shall we do?

WORRIED BOY AND GIRL.

Brands 'Disloyal' Notes Cruelty, Asks Separation

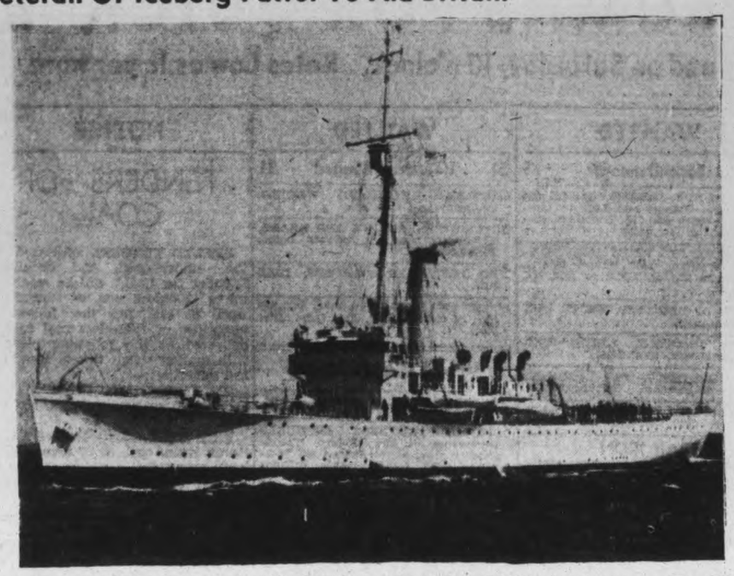
NEW YORK, April 15—(AP). — Mrs. Margaretta Wherry Treherne-Thomas filed a separation suit in Supreme Court here to-day against F. Hugh Treherne-Thomas, scion of a prominent Welsh steel and tinplate family whom she married here in April, 1926.

The suit cited the "constant state of tension, excitement and apprehension" caused by repeated German air raids. She said the raids got so bad last June—three months before the intensified German aerial assault on Britain opened—that she packed four suitcases and "escaped" to New York via Liverpool and Canada with her two children, Rhoda 13 and six-year-old David.

Fairwood, her husband's ancestral estate at Killay, Glamorganshire, Wales, is a frequent bomb target, Mrs. Treherne-Thomas claimed in the suit. She intimated that her husband should be glad she is safe, but instead has been sending almost daily letters and cables "in which he falsely charges me with treachery and disloyalty." She based her separation petition on the plea that these messages constitute cruelty.

She is the daughter of William M. Wherry, lawyer and utilities authority, at whose home she now is living between trips on behalf of the British War Relief Society.

Veteran Of Iceberg Patrol To Aid Britain



More aid for Britain came with President Franklin Roosevelt's announcement that 10 U.S. coastguard cutters would be released to British naval crews. The 250-foot cutter Ohelan is a veteran of the iceberg patrol.

Winnipeg Boys Within Game Western Title

SASKATOON, April 15.—(CP)—Winnipeg Rangers are only a game away from the Western Canadian junior hockey championship because of a brilliant goal by Centre Bill Robinson with only 25 seconds remaining in last night's game here with Saskatoon Quakers.

Robinson took a pass from Left Winger Sam Fabro in the centre zone, circled a Saskatoon defenceman and neatly faked Goalie Russ Dertell out of position to score at 19:25 of the third period and give Rangers a 4-3 victory and a 3-2 lead in games in the best-of-seven western final.

The Canadian Amateur Hockey Association had announced the sixth game would be played in Winnipeg if attendance at last night's game was unsatisfactory but after the game it was announced the series will be resumed here tomorrow as scheduled. A seventh game, if necessary, will be played in Winnipeg Friday.

Dollars To Doughnuts

By EDITH ELLINGTON

YESTERDAY: Bee begins to learn more about Huntington's, and the way the store controls many lives. Vera's love affair is balked by Huntington's. After a particularly busy day, one of the stock girls faints. Toby shouts for Bee.

A SHOCK FOR THE DUCHESS.

CHAPTER XVII.

Beatrice stared down at the girl on the floor. For a moment, she was so surprised, and frightened she couldn't move. Miss Ryan's face was white, her eyes were closed, she was as still as death.

Toby cried, "Get somebody! Get some water! Do something!"

But Miss Dane was already pushing aside the curtains. "How long does it take to—" she began testily. Beatrice's face stopped her. "What's happened?"

"Miss Ryan fainted," said Toby.

Miss Dane rushed forward. "Everything happens to me!" she cried in irritation. "The department's mobbed, nobody does anything, stock's in a mess, shipments don't come in on time— and now this!"

"I'm sure she couldn't help it," Toby snapped. "Or do you think she's faking?"

"Go away—" Miss Dane made a distracted lunge, and peered down at the unconscious girl. "Get some water. 'Phone for the nurse." She began to rub Miss Ryan's wrists, almost impatiently. "Haven't I trouble enough with those contingents they wished on me? And not an 18 in black, and I have to see that girl from advertising in a minute! How can I get up a decent ad with all this going on?"

There were little beads of moisture on Miss Ryan's upper up. Her nose looked pinched. Beatrice said, "I think she ought to have a doctor."

"You think!" screamed Miss Dane still roughly massaging Miss Ryan's limp wrists. "You think! What were you doing in here, anyway? Get out on the floor, wait on somebody!" She added, "The girl probably didn't have any lunch, that's all."

To-day was pay day, Beatrice remembered. The envelopes wouldn't be distributed until nearly closing time. Perhaps, she thought pityingly, Miss Ryan had not had lunch money.

Toby came back with water. "Lift her up. I'll see if I can pour some down her throat."

Beatrice said, "Whisky would be better."

"Oh, give it to me!" Miss Dane snatched the glass and dashed it into the prostrate girl's face.

There was a gasp, a moan, and Miss Ryan's head moved slowly from side to side. At last, slowly, her eyes opened. She stared up at them.

She winced, and tried painfully to rise.

Beatrice knelt beside her, swiftly. "You're ill, don't try to get up. We'll send for a doctor."

"Nonsense!" snapped Miss Dane. "Help her up. She can walk to the elevator, can't she? Take her to the infirmary." She looked at Miss Ryan with ill-disguised disgust. "The busiest day we've had in weeks and you faint!"

"I—everything went black—" Miss Ryan whispered. "I'm all right now, though." She tried to stand without leaning on Beatrice. "I can go back on the floor."

With a shock, Beatrice realized that the girl was afraid of losing her job. "You're going to infirmary," she said quickly. "Come on."

But when they go to the elevators, Miss Ryan caught at Beatrice's sleeve. "No. Don't take me up there. They— they'll find out what's the matter with me, and I—I've got to keep on for a while...." Her blue eyes besought Beatrice, and her fingers plucked nervously. "Please, Miss Davis."

"What is the matter with you?"

"I—I'm going to have a baby. Oh, don't look like that! I'm married. I've been married for two years." Her eyes dropped. "Jimmy works in the shipping, and he doesn't make much, that's why we—we kept it secret." She leaned against the wall and closed her eyes for a moment. "Promise not to tell. I'll be all right. I'll go back in a minute."

Pity swept Beatrice. "I'm not the only one who's hiding things," she thought. But her secret seemed insignificant beside the plight of this girl.

"Let's go to the infirmary anyway. They'll only give you a sedative and let ou lie down. I'm sure they—they couldn't tell.....Say you went without lunch."

"I did," confessed Miss Ryan. "I'm saving for baby clothes and a crib." Her chin lifted. "I would have been all right if it wasn't for that extra work, stooping to pick up stock and lifting my arms so much, rehanging things...."

"It's not fair," Beatrice said quietly. "They shouldn't have let the other stock girl go."

After she left Miss Ryan in the infirmary, she told Miss Dane briefly, "She's better, but she won't be back to-day."

Miss Dane fumed about being shorthanded. Beatrice walked off and left her. What could she do for Miss Ryan, she wondered. The girl ought not to be standing on her feet all day, working. Yet she knew Miss Ryan would be back to-morrow. She'd stay until the very last minute. It was barbarous.

"Why can't a big store like this provide for such emergencies? Both she and her husband work here. Surely the store owes them something."

She wondered if Grandfather had ever considered such situations. She knew that if his attention had been called to a young couple—any young couple, not just his own employees—in this fix, he'd have promptly presented them with the baby clothes and crib. "But I can't do that. I'm just a salesgirl. She'd think I'd stolen the money. Anyway, I can't write a cheque now. They'd trace me."

What did girls do to help each other—girls without money, without influence? Miss Getz sidled up to her. "I know what ails Ryan," she said quietly. "You can't fool an old hand like me. I've seen too many of 'em."

Anthony Bradley was coming toward them. Beatrice whispered, hurriedly, "I'll talk to you later."

Anthony asked, "What was the excitement?"

"She skipped her lunch."

"Oh." He rattled some sales slips in his hand. "I have a class tonight. Would you—would you have dinner with me, somewhere nearby, before I go? If you'd wait, I could take you home afterward."

"I'd love to."

In the little restaurant, she wished she could tell Anthony about Miss Ryan. But of course she couldn't. She said, instead, "Do any stores anywhere give their employees sick leave? I mean, supposing a girl's run down and needs a rest. Or an operation...."

"What do you think stores are, philthropic institutions?" He crumpled a roll. "But the ideal store, the store I sometimes think about—you know, with Anthony Bradley as the general superintendent and all the other stores on Fifth Avenue biting their nails in envy"—he grinned—"if a store can bite its nails. Anyway, the ideal store would give sick leaves. The employees would be part of a happy, loyal family, don't you see, feeling secure in their jobs and giving their best because working for that store, being happy and well treated, would naturally result in increased efficiency. I'd have a headth department, to keep everyone at peak fitness, and a welfare department to deal with the special cases...."

Beatrice made herself breathe quietly and evenly. "The Duchess ought to hear you."

That name the girls in the store had bestowed on Beatrice Huntington Davenport was strongly bitter on her lips. But she wanted to see if Anthony would recognize it. He did.

"Her Grace doesn't bother with the source of the polo ponies she buys her boy-friend," he said.

Startled, she almost dropped her work. How did Anthony know about the polo ponies?

THE STARS SAY . . .

By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

For Wednesday, April 16

A DAY to be up and doing with verve, zest and initiative in whatever the direction the yearnings and aspirations are most insistently centered. This is likely to be on the joys of a sentimental or emotional complexion rather than the solid or workaday, although in practical lines there may be signs of promotion preferment, honors or other tokens from the hands of superiors or those in high places Cultural and artistic ambitions may be gratified. In all intimate affairs be alert to peculiar angles of intrigue or duplicity.

If It Is Your Birthday

Those whose birthday it is should be on the eve of a year of opportunity for succeeding in a progressive and productive chain of events, involving the private as well as public life. There are indications of favors, honors and promotion from those in prestige and power and also the artistic, intellectual and emotional urges may find most felicitous expression. It is time for pushing for high goals and cherished aspirations, but keep clear of possible entanglements of a peculiar or intriguing nature.

A child born on this day should have many artistic, literary or musical talents as well as practical creative urges. It will have an engaging, amiable and lovable disposition and should attain position and happiness in its career.

midget and juvenile organizations.

To Decide On Division.

The committee has the names of the organizations which developed the 15 players and was authorized by the meeting to decide on the division. Details of the other five must be submitted before May 15, when money for them will be distributed. More than 24 players joined professional teams within the last year but under the N.H.L.-C.A.H.A. agreement no payment is necessary for those who were on negotiation or reserve lists prior to September 12, 1940, or were signed before that date. Of the 24 on which payment was made by the N.H.L., full payment was made for some and part payment for others.

Payment for junior-age players was made in full by the N.H.L. and was handled separately from the special interim cases.

Starting September 12, 1941, the C.A.H.A. will receive $500 for every player who plays in the N.H.L. and $250 for every player who plays in minor professional hockey with an additional $250 to be paid when and if the player later graduates to the N.H.L.

Players for whom the special interim payment will be distributed soon are George Brown, Blink Finkbeiner, Len Halderson, Elmer Lach, Lou Babovitch, Pete Slobodian, George Johnston, Dave Desreaux, Jake Milford, Bus Wycherley, Charlie Rayner, Bill Judza, Joey Johns, D. Norris, F. Gourlay, and Herb Burron. Payment will be made by May 15 for W. Knott, V. Hellyer, J. McAtee, P. McAtee and Jack Cain.

Resolutions passed by the convention provided that no professional will be reinstated after January 15 for that season and set up a rules committee comprised of W. A. Hewitt of Toronto, registrar-treasurer, Vic Johnson of Winnipeg and Alphonse Therien of Montreal.

Playdown Guarantee.

Another approved motion gave the 1942 western intermediate playdowns the same guarantee which had been adopted earlier in the day for the 1942 eastern playdowns—up to $200 for each branch participating if there is a deficit.

The two Quebec delegates were the only persons voting against adoption of the report of the committee drawing up a constitution for the I.I.H.L. No discussion was held in the open meeting but the subject was discussed at length at a closed committee meeting. The I.I.H.L. annual meeting is scheduled for today.

The C.A.H.A. delegates also resumed open sessions today.

Wartime regulations providing that hockey clubs losing players through enlistment must have replacements within certain time limits were passed yesterday afternoon. They provide:

1. Players belonging to a club in the previous season and lost to the club prior to September 15 must be replaced before November 1.

2. Players belonging to a club in the previous season and lost between September 15 and November 1 must be replaced within 10 days after the club plays its first league game.

3. Players lost after the club enters competition must be replaced within 10 days.

Military Replacements.

Replacements must be obtained from among players engaged in military service and moved into the district or from among players of the same or lower category from any other club, in Canada or elsewhere, providing such club grants a release.

The finance committee was authorized to divide receipts from this season's playoffs, exceeding the $30,000 budget, to give 75 per cent. as bonuses to teams participating in junior and senior playdowns, on the basis of games played, and 25 per cent. to war charities or for war purposes.

Registrar-Treasurer W. A. Hewitt, Toronto, announced the fifth game of the Eastern junior hockey final between Montreal and Oshawa will be played in Toronto tonight. It had previously been decided the fifth game of the series, tied 2-2, would be played in Toronto Wednesday, but Mr. Hewitt said the Royals were taking a chartered plane to Toronto today and it was learned they would be charged with the plane, even though they might be unable to use it.

Dorothy Dix

ANSWER—If you do the right thing and the sensible thing, you would act like adults who have some self-control and a proper sense of the responsibilities of marriage, and put off your wedding until the law assumes that you have intelligence and judgment enough to make a binding contract.

You wouldn't rush into marriage like two silly children who have to have what they want the minute they want it, no matter whether they have a right to it or not, or what trouble it will cause others, or what catastrophes it will bring on themselves.

A year goes by very swiftly. It will fly if the boy who proposes to take a girl's life in his hands spends it in fitting himself to support her, and if she puts it in in learning how to cook and keep house so as to make him comfortable. And, perhaps, it will save you both from playing on your parents as scurvy a trick as children ever do when they foist their husbands and wives on their fathers and mothers to take care of.

But, in any case, don't marry secretly. If you marry at all do it openly and honestly and above board in the sight of all men. Every secret wedding carries with it an aroma of scandal.

What to Do About Insurance

Dear Miss Dix—Although I have been married a year, my husband has not as yet turned over his life insurance policies to me. His mother is the beneficiary and she still has them. They claim that inasmuch as she has paid the premiums all these years that I am not entitled to them. My husband took out a policy on me shortly after we were married, naming himself as beneficiary. Do you think this is fair to me?

G. R.

ANSWER — Certainly if the mother paid all the premiums on her son's insurance and it was taken out in her name, the policy belongs to her. It was merely an investment that she made with her own money. If you object to your husband taking out a policy on you in which he is the beneficiary, make him even things up by your taking out a policy on him for your benefit.

Lawn Bowling

By HERB MARTIN

It was just one year ago to-day that we commenced the lawn bowling articles for the 1940 season and on Oct. 26th the same year we concluded for the season, and now we are all ready to go for another season, and we hope will be crowned with success, on the greens and off the greens.

At this stage of the year the "organization" of any summer sport begins in earnest, and this is true of our Lawn Bowling Club as well as any other clubs.

Already some of the committees have held meetings and only last night the membership committee, under J. T. Braund, held a really important one. It is now up to the skips to move swiftly and have the personnel of their rinks in the hands of the chairman at once. In less than one month the schedule book goes to press, so those who are interested in lawn bowling can see what an amount of work has to be crowded into that four weeks.

In a day or two members of the committee will be around to interview old members and prospective members. Co-operate by signing a membership card and come out with the crowd and enjoy five months of real healthy sport.

Floating Mine Scares New Englanders

A floating mine bobbing 50 yards offshore of Winthrop beach brought hundreds of spectators and the spreading of alarm that a serious explosion was imminent. Army officials dispatched a detail of soldiers quickly to the scene, policing the area, the coastguard was called and little boys who were pelting the mine with stones were quickly routed. Eventually a large "6" was discerned on the mine, with report that the mine was a "dud" from nearby Fort Banks, and was one of a number of practice mines which had broken loose from its moorings. ABOVE photo shows soldier from Fort Banks perched atop the mine when caught "high and dry" by incoming tide after the mine had been brought to shore by coastguardsmen.

HERE'S HOW TO CORRECT CONSTIPATION WITHOUT DOSING!

If you have suffered from constipation, you probably know from experience that harsh purgatives give, at best, only temporary relief.

Eat ALL-BRAN every morning . . . drink plenty of water . . . and see if you don't notice a big difference in the way you look and feel! Available at all grocers' in two convenient sizes. Made by Kellogg's in London, Canada.

THE ONE SOAP ESPECIALLY MADE TO PREVENT "B.O." (Body Odor)

Perspiration plays no favorites

Winter or summer—whether you are active or just sitting still—you must perspire from 1 to 3 pints daily. Otherwise you would die of hyperpyrexia (heat-stroke)! Most of the time you cannot see or feel this perspiration because its moisture evaporates. But sweat deposits remain on the skin, decompose and cause offensive "B.O." (Body Odor). Only when you use Lifebuoy regularly can you be sure you never offend.

You may have looks and brains and personality — every quality that spells success. But if you also have "B.O." you'll find it hard to get ahead.

WE ALL PERSPIRE CONSTANTLY. And perspiration left on the skin decomposes, becomes stale, offensive. That is why we all need LIFEBUOY. For, of all popular soaps LIFEBUOY IS THE ONLY ONE ESPECIALLY MADE TO PREVENT "B.O." No other soap has LIFEBUOY'S DEODORIZING ingredient. No other soap gives day-long ALL-OVER protection against offending.

Surprising Meanings in Mysterious Dream Images

Have You Ever Dreamed This?

Strange dreams that leave you puzzled! Outside the window, a man whom you know gazes at you with wide, staring eyes—WHY?

Like all dreams this has a definite meaning. In queer symbols your dream mind expresses emotions you may have concealed—even from yourself!—in waking life.

The friend gazing at you? Deep down you may fear he is critical of you, a fear that is affecting you more than you realize.

But if you dream you are peering at him, you are suspicious, asking yourself, "Can I trust him?"

When you take them seriously, your dreams often throw a helpful light on disturbing problems. Some dreams are real eye openers. A dream of a screen? A hint you're afraid to admit something to yourself? Running from a snake? You may wish to be rid of some love relationship.

Other puzzling dreams make sense when you understand their symbols.

In our 32-page booklet, a well-known psychologist explains many common symbols in dreams of fear, hope, fulfilment; in sex dreams, "prophetic" dreams. Tells what it means when you dream of being naked in public, of flying, feeling pain.

Send 15c in coins or stamps for your copy of THE MEANING OF DREAMS to the Examiner, Home Service, Peterborough. Be sure to write plainly your NAME, ADDRESS, and the NAME of booklet.

IT MAKES A DIFFERENCE

SOME combinations of cards work out differently in actual play from the way you might think offhand if you fail to study them carefully. Apparently you can play them either of two ways, and get the identical result. Further probing of their possibilities may show that one method is definitely the correct one and the other just as definitely incorrect.

As soon as West led his heart K and the dummy was faced, the declarer saw that he was certain to lose a trick in spades, plus almost surely a trump trick to probable bunched trumps with Mr. Doubler in the West. He therefore could not afford to lose a club trick. To make his contract, he would have to find East holding the club K. So he based his rapid calculations on that contingency. He ruffed the heart K, then confirmed the trump bad news by laying down the A, following it with the K. He then took his spade loser with a lead to the J and Q and ruffed the returned heart. He cashed the diamond Q, led to the spade A and was now ready to play the clubs.

As he explained later, he had all cards ranging from the 9 to the Q, so it made no difference whether he led the J or the 9 from the dummy, as the 10 could be played under the J to leave the lead in dummy. That is what he did—led the J and played the 10. East ducked and then the 9 was led, which East covered with the K. South overtook with the A, then suddenly realized that after cashing the Q, he had to lead the 3 to the 8, setting him.

If he had led the 9 first, East could not have taken a club trick, regardless of whether he covered it or not. Just figure it out for yourself. It most certainly did make a difference, which card was led from dummy on the first club trick.

Canuck Mother Darns Socks For All The Boys

LONDON, April 15—(CP).—Canadian soldiers have beaten a well-trodden trail to the door of an energetic little Canadian "mother" who darns their socks, mends their shirts and sends them away with a knitted comfort and an invitation to "come back again."

In a room in the Beaver Club, home for Canadian servicemen in London, Mrs. Mortimer Appleby, formerly of Victoria, B.C., carries on her job as supervisor of the "comforts room."

Her task is a full-time one. But hard work hasn't sapped the strength nor dimmed the ardor of the 69-year-old woman who volunteered for war service when "Canada called." There's more work than she can handle herself, so when she gets "real busy" she summons her co-worker, Mrs. J. E. Ellis of New Westminster, B.C.

Her nimble fingers never remain idle as she sits beside a sewing basket. But she finds time to unpack, sort and store comforts donated for the services.

Off For Ireland.

Many soldiers ask her to sew on shoulder badges. Pte. Irvin O'Connor of Saulte Ste. Marie, Ont., was going on leave to Ireland when he decided he'd better have his identifying badges in place. So he visited "Mother" Appleby.

In a few minutes the badges were on and the youth turned to go.

"Whoa there!" called Mother Appleby. "Don't you need any socks, mittens or pullover? It will be pretty cold in Ireland."

"Perhaps you're right," Irvin agreed. "I'll take a pullover if you have one that'll fit."

"Here you are," she said, handing him a khaki sweater. "Have a good time."

"That's how it goes," she explained to a reporter. "They come and they go, but they always come back. It's funny sometimes to see them standing about, waiting their turn. But I've time for them all. Some are lonesome and I always try to send them away with a cheering word."

Operation of the room doesn't "cost a cent." Goods are donated by persons in England and Canada. Comforts from the Dominion are shipped through the Red Cross, earmarked for the Beaver Club.

"I'm not getting nearly enough, though," she said. "I can use a lot more. The winter's nearly over and it's time to think about the summer. The boys soon will be clamoring for lighter garments."

SEVERE NEURITIS PAINS STOPPED BY SYNTONA

This Lady Says It Helped Her After Many Other Things Failed. Tells of Other Health Benefits.

"When I began taking Syntona several weeks ago I was suffering terribly from neuritis that had bothered me for the last three years," says Mrs. H. R. Dyment, Dundas, Ontario.

"I took many medicines, but nothing would relieve the severe pains in my shoulder and back. There were many nights that I couldn't sleep, my nerves were so bad that I felt tired and run down and had no desire to do my work or go any place. My food soured and I suffered a lot from acid risings and a sick nauseated feeling in my stomach.

"All that has changed since I've taken a few bottles of Syntona and now I feel like a new woman. The pains have entirely gone away, my nerves are steady once more and I have regained all my lost strength and energy. I have a good appetite now, too, and never have any trouble with my stomach no matter what I eat. My friends all remark how much better I look and I owe this all to your wonderful Syntona medicine."

MRS. H. R. DYMENT

All who suffer are cordially invited to call at Elliott's Drug Store, Peterborough, and learn the plain truthful facts about this grand medicine that is doing so much here. Remember the name, Syntona, and avoid disappointment.—(Advt.)

EVEN DUBLIN SENDS AID TO QUEL FIRES ACROSS 6 NORTH COUNTIES AFTER RAIDERS BOMB WIDE PATH OF DEATH AND DESTRUCTION

BELFAST, Nortnern Ireland, April 16—(CP).—The Nazi Air Force swept across Northern Ireland like a tornado last night, leaving a wide path of death and demolition through Belfast and smaller towns and even isolated farms of the six counties.

A tour of the worst of Belfast's bombed areas showed that hundreds of working class homes had been shattered in the four-hour raid. Many persons were killed in a direct hit on a bomb shelter.

Several hospitals and churches and newspaper plants were hit by high explosives which fell also on residential and shopping areas, according to an official communique.

Commenting on the aftermath of the attack, the communique said: "The recruiting officers are besieged this morning."

The raiders came over in waves, dropping flares which ground defences machine-gunned. At one time the whole sky was lit up with flares drifting to earth.

Huns Meet Fierce Resistance Everywhere; Duke Of Aosta Sends Envoy By Plane To Diredawa Seeking Terms For Surrender

British Closing Ring On 40,000 Italians In Ethiopia

CAIRO, Egypt, April 16 —(AP)—British general headquarters said today that the Duke of Aosta, Italian viceroy of Ethiopia, had sent an envoy (apparently to negotiate surrender) to the British headquarters in southern Ethiopia.

Other military circles said they had no reason to doubt the accuracy of a daily sketch report from Ethiopia saying the Duke of Aosta, the Italian commander in chief, had sent a representative by plane to interview the British commander at Diredawa.

However, they said they had no confirmation of the report. The Sketch correspondent said the Duke requested safe conduct for the plane Tuesday and that British army officers were awaiting when it brought the envoy to Diredawa.

Diredawa is on the Addis Ababa railway east of the capital.

In Ethiopia, military circles said, 40,000 Italians and 36,000 natives loyal to the Italians were concentrated in the Dessie, Gondar and Jimma areas.

In the Dessie area, they said, there were 10,000 Italians and 12,000 natives, while in the Gonar region there were 8,000 Italians and 9,000 natives and in the Jimma area, 22,000 Italians and 15,000 natives.

Obbia, 320 miles up the coast from Mogadiscio, captured Italian Somaliland capital, military circles reported, has surrendered to the British forces and patrol airmen saw white flags at Garda, 200 miles north of Obbia.

NEW YORK, April 16—(AP).—William McChesney Martin, 34-year-old president of the New York Stock Exchange, went into the army today with the observation that he believed the United States would enter the war.

The man who has headed the nation's foremost securities market for three years, reported for examination under the Selective Service Act, quitting his $48,000-a-year post for private's pay of $21 a month, and passed the required tests.

Slav Situation Bad; Nazis Increase Armored Pressure

LONDON, April 17 — (CP). — Wide-open battle flamed along the entire British front in Greece today, and the Germans acknowledged that Hitler's invasion was meeting "stubborn" resistance after previously claiming the Allies were in headlong retreat.

"Our troops are now in contact with the enemy along the whole of our front in Greece," the British Middle East Command said tersely.

It was apparent that a climatic struggle which may decide the fate of the Aegean kingdom was fast developing.

British quarters in Athens said German armored spearheads were executing savage thrusts, but declared that nowhere had they overshot the new Allied defence line.

London conceded that the situation in Yugoslavia was bad. Hitler's High Command claimed the capture of Sarajeva, Central Yugoslavia, where the assassination of Archduke Franz Ferdinand touched off the First Great War, and the surrender of thousands of Serbs.

Information reaching London indicated that Yugoslavia no longer had unified control over her armies, but it was believed they would continue to fight as guerillas.

Mussolini's High Command claimed Italian troops had captured Yugoslavia's chief naval base at Split in a 24-mile thrust down the Adriatic seacoast.

15,000 City Of Colima Is Almost Wiped Out With Nearby Volcano Erupting Setting Forests Ablaze As New Menace

MEXICO CITY, April 16—(AP).—Governor Pedro Torres Ortiz of Colima State telegraphed the government information office today that the city of Colima, which has a population of 15,000, was "almost totally destroyed" in yesterday's earthquake.

Federal troops have removed 36 bodies and nearly 100 of the injured from the ruins, the Governor telegraphed. The full toll of dead and injured in the towns of the seven states in the southern earthquake felt may not be known for days.

Colima, capital of Colima State, 275 miles west of Mexico City, appeared to be hardest hit of the towns able to communicate with the capital. Governor Pedro Torres Ortiz radioed that half of the city's 15,000 residents were homeless, dead or injured.

Colima Volcano, near Colima, erupted, Governor Ortiz said, kindling forest fires that seriously menaced the shattered city.

Mexico City sustained damage estimated unofficially at more than $1,000,000 when heavy shocks wrecked buildings and started a fire in the industrial area that levelled a square block.

The temblor, which began with violent shocks lasting five minutes in Colima, tapering off in a series of lesser tremors, apparently centred in the historic earthquake centre of Chilpancingo, about 50 miles inland from the Pacific coast resort town of Acopulco.

Destruction and undetermined numbers of casualties were reported from Guadalajara, capital of Jal-

No German Pact

ANKARA, Turkey, April 16—(AP)—Official quarters said today that no non-aggression pact is being negotiated with Germany.

The People's Party unanimously endorsed a secret statement of policy by Foreign Minister Sukru Saracoglu.

The Turkish radio said Germany is finding her troops insufficient for the Balkan campaign and therefore will have to double the number to 1,000,000. This, the radio said, will entail delay and also complicate the problem of supply.

Assault Is Launched West Of Salum, On Libyan Border

CAIRO, Egypt, April 16—(AP). — British military sources said tonight that in the struggle with Axis forces at the Egyptian frontier the Libyan strong point, Fort Capuzzo, had changed hands several times before British troops finally recaptured it.

LONDON, April 16.—(CP).— An official announcement to-day said British forces in North Africa had "successfully attacked the rear of the German position in the Capuzzo area on the Egyptian border."

Fort Capuzzo is a strong point in Libya, just across the border from Salum, where British troops have been fiercely resisting Axis armored forces thrusting eastward.

A Ministry of Information statement said:

"It is learned in London that in Libya our forces have successfully attacked the rear of the enemy position in the Capuzzo area, where enemy vehicles were shelled and set on fire.

"In Ethiopia our patrols have routed the enemy at Safartak Ford, 30 miles south-east of Derba Markos, and have captured forts on the left bank of the Blue Nile in this sector.

"In the Aduwa district (of Ethiopia), mechanized troops have encountered an enemy position in the Dabarach area."

Warships Aiding Tobruk.

ROME, April 16 — (AP). — The Italian High Command today reported that British warships have come to the aid of the beleagured garrison at Tobruk, Libya, which was acknowledged to be offering fierce resistance to German and Italian forces.

1000 Experts Weekly

TORONTO, April 16 — (CP).—Technical schools in Canada have established a schedule requiring them to turn out 1,000 skilled workers for war industry weekly, B. M. McLean, director of war training classes at Toronto's Danforth Technical School, said today. He said that the rate was 550 trained workers by January 1 and by March 1 was up to 950.

The latest rate is sufficient for the present, he said, but by June industry will be expanding faster than the school schedule.

Air School Blaze Burns Officer, Routs 60 Others

DUNNVILLE, Ont., April 16 (CP) —Fire of undetermined origin gutted the officers' quarters at the Royal Canadian Air Force No. 6 Service Flying Training School near here early today, forcing 60 men to flee the quarters and causing severe burns to Fo. J. A. Baldwin, 29, of Westmount, Que., who was overcome by smoke while attempting to retrieve some of his possessions.

Baldwin, 29, is a former Canadian doubles squash racquets champion, and was one of the Dominion's leading tennis players a few years ago. He was given first aid at the school and rushed to the hospital at Hamilton, about 40 miles from here.

At hospital Dr. Miles G. Brown said Baldwin's condition was fair. He suffered second-degree burns and hock and did not recover consciousness until shortly after his aumittance to hospital.

Officials at the school said that he was rescued unconsciously from the burning building by Po. F. H. McNeil, who braved the flames to reach the stricken officer.

McNeil, after learning that Baldwin was in the burning building, climbed through a window and, "holding my breath," ran the few steps to Baldwin's room.

"He was lying in the centre of the floor," McNeil said. "One side of the room was on fire."

McNeil lifted Baldwin over his shoulder and made his way back to the window where he handed the unconscious flying officer into the waiting hands of fellow officers.

Baldwin returned to his room after leaving the building once to retrieve some of his belongings and was overcome by fumes.

Monks In Danger

Athens, April 16 (AP)

GREEK religious circles expressed fears today for the fate of the 1,100-year-old Orthodox Autonomous Monastic Republic on Mount Athos, now under German military rule.

More than 4,800 Greek, Serb and White Russian monks live in 20 monasteries on the beautiful 6,000-foot mountain south of captured Salonika.

Religous authorities here point out that the monastries virtually are supported by contributions from outside and by the sale of religious paintings and trinkets. They express concern that these

RAF Gets 4 Ships In Raids On Two Coasts

CAIRO, Egypt, April 16—(AP).—The Royal Air Force blew up a 6,000-ton merchant ship and a 7,000-ton ammunition vessel in a raid on Italian-held Valona Harbor, Albania, on the night of April 14-15, the R.A.F. Middle East command announced today.

A communique also announced that the R.A.F. had cut a German line of communications in Yugoslavia by breaking up the main bridge over the Vardar River at Veles and had destroyed much transport on the Veles-Prilep road.

LONDON, April 16—(CP).—The Air Ministry announced today that "three heavily laden enemy coastal vessels" off the northwest coast of France were attacked in daylight yesterday and two left sinking from direct hits.

"Aircraft of the same command made a low-level attack on the (German) island of Borkum at dusk. A freighter lying off the island also was attacked and hit twice amidships," said the communique.

The R.A.F. renewed the bombardment of Kiel, German naval base, last night, and the Ministry said "many bombs fell on shipbuilding yards and fires were started." Kiel was the principal objective of operations against "targets in Northern Germany."

All 12 Mines Shut In Cape Breton As 10,000 Strike

GLACE BAY, N.S., April 16. — (CP).— Coal production was at a standstill in Cape Breton to-day as 10,000 workers observed a strike call and tied up the island's 12 collieries, 10 operated by the Dominion Coal Company and the other two by the Nova Scotia Steel and Coal Company. None but stablemen and pumpmen entered the pits.

Designed to go into effect on Tuesday midnight the strike call was sent out shortly before the deadline and last night workers of three collieries only refused to work. But to-day they were joined by the employees of nine other collieries.

Miners of one Glace Bay pit and two at New Waterford walked out at midnight in compliance with the call, sent out from an unofficial convention of U.M.W. members to VICHY, France, April 1—(AP).—A representative of Films Paramount, French subsidiary of Paramount Pictures, Inc., said today German military authorities had occupied offices of all United States film distribution companies in Paris last Saturday. Cardin, Two Others Due to Go?

Transport Chief Said Ill—Fisheries, Farm Heads May Change

OTTAWA, April 16 — (CP). — With Parliament adjourned for the Easter recess and spring's first warm days at hand, talk on Parliament Hill has turned back to the possibilities of Cabinet changes. The name of Transport Minister Cardin is receiving the most mention.

Mention of reports that ill-health may lead to his resignation was made in the Ottawa Journal to-day. This was coupled with the possibility that when it becomes necessary for Prime Minister Mackenzie King to deal with one change in his ministry there will be one or two others "in a long-anticipated Cabinet reorganization."

It has been known for some time that Mr. Cardin, who also holds the Public Works and Transport portfolios, has been in poor health. During the recent sitting of Parliament he was absent from his desk for a time because of illness.

Named in conjecture as a possible successor to the Transport Minister should he retire from the Cabinet is Col. Thomas Vien (Lib. Outremont), Deputy-Speaker of the Commons.

Fisheries Minister Michaud has for some time been the subject of retirement rumors coupled with suggestions he would receive an appointment to the Judiciary in New Brunswick. Burton Hill (Lib. Charlotte) has been mentioned as a possible successor to continue the New Brunswick Cabinet representation.

Recently there were reports that Hon. J. G. Gardiner would relinquish one or other of his portfolios —Agriculture and War Services — but inquiries elicited nothing official that tended to confirm these suggestions for the immediate future.

2,100 Ontario Schools Nearing Million Mark

OTTAWA, April 16.—(CP).—Mrs. Mary Lindsay, in charge of promoting the sale of war savings stamps and certificates in Canadian stamps announced to-day that school children from 2,100 schools in Ontario had bought nearly $1,000,000 worth of stamps and certificates during the first three months of 1341.

She said that basing an estimate on the contribution of the Ontario schools, officials of the War Savings committee here believe Canada's approximately 2,000,000 school children will purchase annually stamps and certificates worth about $8,000,0000. It was estimated that each student would purchase on the average one $4 certificate each year.

FDR Backers Rally for Convoys

Senate Group Acts After Chief States Shipping Be Protected

WASHINGTON, April 16—(AP).—The United States administration rallied its forces in the Senate Foreign Relations Committee to-day to shelve a proposal by Sentator Chas. Tobey (Rep.-New Hampshire) which would put Congress on record against using the Navy to convoy shipments of war supplies to Britain and other belligerent nations.

Preliminary polls of committee members showed an administration majority and Senate Democratic Leader Alben Barkley said he assumed the vote would go against reporting the resolution out for Senate debate, but Tobey, who is not a Foreign Relations member, arranged to make a personal plea for favorable action.

The committee's deliberations on the convoy question at this time assumed added significance because of President Roosevelt's statement at a press conference yesterday that United States merchant ships travelling the world's sea lanes outside of prohibited combat zones would be accorded full protection.

Emphatically, Mr. Roosevelt told reporters such protection was not a question of policy but a matter of law. Some legislators speculated that his statement meant, in effect, that naval escorts would be provided any time a vessel under the United States flag faced potential danger in delivering her cargo.

Such potential danger might arise, authorities generally agreed, if United States ships undertake to deliver munitions to Egypt, through the newly opened Red Sea route, for transhipment to British forces operating in Africa and Greece.

The President made his remarks during a mass interview in which a correspondent asked him if he was depressed over British reverses in the Balkans and Libya. He replied in the negative. He then was asked about rumors of defeatism in the administration. He asked with a grin if he looked gloomy.

Antonescu declined to disclose the names of the suspects until a court martial convenes, but he said they were members of the "death squad" of the outlawed Iron Guards.

German Drive Has Reached Siatista Pass In Greece

ATHENS, April 16 — (AP). — Germany's drive through mountainous Northern Greece has carried to the western outlet of Siatista Pass which opens, between peaks 6,000 feet high, on a corridor of easier country to the south.

This penetration, disclosed last night by a Greek spokesman, was said to have cost the Nazis heavily as they battled through tortuous mountain routes, harassed by sharphooters.

The dent the Nazis drove in the point of original V-shaped Hellenic defence line, together wtth Greek withdrawals on the Albanian flank, apparently has shifted the defence front into an almost straight line across the Greek Peninsula from its eastern hinge, where British forces were still holding out at Mount Olympus.

In London military circles said to-day German pressure in Greece is increasing.

They acknowledged there had been fierce attacks, but asserted there is "no truth whatever" in German reports that the British forces are leaving Greece.

Information raching London indicates the situation in Yugoslavia frankly is bad, it was said, and the impression prevails that the Yugoslavs no longer have unified control over their armies.

The Greek high command declared today that "ordered movements of our troops toward new positions" were carried out in western Macedonia (centre of the present fighting front) and that local Italian attacks in Albania were repulsed with heavy losses.

The German air force, meanwhile, ranged widely over Greece, heavily bombing communities directly in the line of the Nazi drives.

Thirty persons were reported killed and 50 injured in a severe bombing of Trikkala on the Athens railroad 55 miles south of Siatista.

Fifteen German and one Italian planes were shot down, communques said.

Steep Mountains Aid Allies On New Front

(By KIRKE L. SIMPSON.)

WASHINGTON, April 16.—(AP). —Recurrent and unverified reports that Yugoslavia has been seeking armistice terms added new shadows to a Balkan picture that was already dark enough for the Allies.

If it proves true, grave added danger must threaten the British and Greek troops. It would release additional Axis divisions and air power to batter southward into Greece. Complete Yugoslav collapse also well might shake Greek determination to continue the fight and confront British forces in Greece with the desperate necessity of seeking escape by sea.

(Informed sources in London termed the report that Yugoslavia is asking for an armistice as "a typical bit of Goebbels' propaganda." These sources said latest information in London "gives no reason for any despondency about Yugoslavia.")

Even without such rumors of impending Yugoslav capitulation, the British - Greek plight along a shrunken and backward moving defense line from the Aegean to the Adriatic was grave enough. Censorship still concealed the actual Allied deployment on the secondary front selected. But it was clear that the Allied centre had been forced back forty miles or more from its original middle hinge at Florina.

Berlin and Rome vied with each other in asserting that Nazi and Fascist spearheads had driven down virtually parallel Greek valleys running southward from the vicinity of the Greek - Albanian - Yugoslav border region to Kozane and Servia in the east and to the vicinity of Siatista on the west.

Athens announced Italian recapture of Koritza, important crossroads bastion of the Greek line westward across Southern Albania to the Adriatic, south of Valona. German-Italian forces were also threatening to outflank Klissura, Greek-held eastern terminus of the Klissura-Tepeleni Gorge, vital to the Greek hold on Southern Albania.

Despite all these adverse reports, London reported increased optimism in British military circles as to the situation in Greece. On what it was based was difficult to discern, aside from the fact that the Greek - British allies apparently have managed to cut down their fighting front perhaps 10 miles.

The indicated withdrawal from the abandoned Florina apex of the original Allied defense wedge to an approximately straight line from Gulf of Salonika near Mt. Olympus to the Adriatic south of Valona would achieve that reduction of front. Even Berlin reports indicate it was accomplished without more than rear-guard skirmishes with advancing Axis columns.

Mountain Obstacles

It is obvious also that the new Allied front is still supported by steep mountain terrain and keyed to narrow passes that are definite obstacles to mechanized attack. London optimism seems geared to hope that these can be held to bar Nazi-Fascist debouchement into the great valleys of Central Greece.

In North Africa, continued British resistance at Tobruk despite encirclement by Axis mechanized units which have invaded Egypt gives a more hopeful prospect. As this is written no word of deeper enemy penetration into Egypt had come for twenty-four hours or more. The initial force of the Axis drive may be waning or the Tobruk stand of the British forces, seriously threatening Axis supply lines, may have forced at least a temporary halt.

THE WAR TO-DAY

By GUY RHOADES
Canadian Press Staff Writer

British and Greek forces, apparently stiffening after their recoil before the force of a Nazi mechanized attack, seem to have established a more easily tenable line than the one they held before.

It is now a line running roughly northwest from Mount Olympus across Greece to Kastoria, then cutting southwesterly almost at right angle to the vicinity of the Albanian port of Chimara where it faces the Italians.

The German radio and press, apparently interpreting the British and Greek establishment of a more strategic line as a British "rout," crowed loudly and said spearheads of their twin assaults launched from Salonika and the Bitolj Pass had penetrated 65 miles and were converging.

Should these spearheads converge soon they would bite off a small piece of Macedonia. Should they penetrate further without fanning out they could drive a wedge in Greece, possibly squeezing the eastern defenders southward or into the Gulf of Salonika and the central troops southward or toward the Albanian border.

Some of the German glee, however, appeared to have been based on a false interpretation, innocent or intended, of British ship movement along Greek coasts. The Germans started claiming yesterday that British troops were being embarked for an evacuation of Greece and that they were subject to heavy assaults from German dive bombers.

British authorities confirmed the suspicion in the minds of many that actually British reinforcements were being rushed to Greece and disembarked at strategic points from which they could hasten to face the German assault.

After shouting for two days that British forces at Tobruk were encircled and would be forced to leave in the manner of a "second Dunkirk" German tubthumpers became signally silent today on the whole North African situation.

Their silence might be taken as an unconscious substantiation of British announcements from Cairo that although German-Italian tanks had penetrated the outer defences of Tobruk they had been so severely mauled that they were forced to withdraw with heavy losses. Similarly the Axis forces were forced back from an assault on Salum.

It appeared significant that the German high command left the cheering and extravagant statements to the press and radio and did not officially associate itself with it. This, presumably, left an "out" in case the show failed, in which case the government could alibi itself from any charge of misleading the home front.

British authorities expressed considerable optimism over the turn of events in North Africa. They had indicated an opinion a couple of days ago that it might be necessary for British forces to re-establish the old defence line around Mersa Matruh. Today, however, they expressed the view the combined Axis offensive had been slowed or stopped. This might mean that the second advance into Egypt of Axis arms would fall short of the first.

A possible reason for a weakening of the Axis onslaught was seen in the length of supply lines, a length which obviously was being felt, for aircraft were reported bringing up the only fuel available to the so-called "Panzer" troops.

Most Of Clothing Lost.

Practically all the officers' clothing and personal belongings were destroyed.

The R.C.A.F. firefighter squad at the school fought the flames with the aid of the Dunnville volunteer brigade but the blaze was beyond control when discovered and the frame building was destroyed.

The swiftness with which the flames spread and gutted the building made it difficult to determine the cause of the fire immediately, officials said.

The weather was mild and none of the officers forced into the night suffered. Arrangements were made quickly to supply them with suitable clothing.

Baldwin had been stationed at the school here since last November.

Baldwin played No. 1 for Canada against the United States in the Lapham Cup international racquets tournament at Toronto a few weeks ago and participated in the Ontario indoor tennis championships early this month, reaching the semi-final against Bobby Murray of Montreal.

French Envoy Offers U.S. African Bases

Tells F.D.R. His Move Same As Danish Greenland Action

SAN FRANCISCO, April 16—(AP) —The United States Government was offered the use of all French naval and military bases in North and West Africa and Indo-China in a telegram French Vice-Consul Paul Bibily sent to President Roosevelt last night.

Bibily, who asserted he is the only legal representative of the French republic in this country, made the offer on what he regarded as similar ground to that which the Danish minister, Henrik De Kauffman, gave the United States access to naval and air bases in Greenland last week.

Contending the Vichy Government headed by Marshall Petain is a self-appointed "puppet state" controlled by the Germans, Bibily argued that Vichy has no authority to speak or act for the French people or republic.

His telegram said:—

"Considering some one must speak right now for helpless Continental France, and in view of the extreme gravity of the present hour and absolute necessity of keeping mastery of the Mediterranean, Near East and Far East....noting also they said "our army has succeeded in compelling the British forces in Greece to make a stand and face us in combat.

This contrasted with earlier Nazi press and radio assertions that the British army was in full retreat.

Just where the British and Germans have come to grips was not revealed. Apparently, however, the Germans believe the British forces are massed along a line which may be described roughly as: Larisa to Trikkala to Ioannina.

Athens had two air alarms this morning, but no enemy planes were sighted over the city.

During aerial operations yesterday 15 German planes and one Italian plane were reported shot down—five in the Piraeus region—against no Allied losses.

No Break Through.

ATHENS, April 16 — (AP). — Fighting was general along the British front in Greece to-day, British sources said, but despite their vigorous mechanized thrusts the Germans had not reached the main British-Greek defences for the battle which may decide the fate of the Ionian Peninsula.

Authoritative sources said the Nazis no where had overshot the main defence positions in their drive through the mountains which carried them to the western outlet of Siatista Pass opening between peaks 6,000 feet high to a corridor of easier terrain to the south.

Greek General Headquarters said Greek troops in Western Macedonia had been successfully withdrawn to the new defence positions.

Inflict Heavy Toll.

Before the Greeks retired, headquarters said, they inflicted heavy losses on the mechanized German forces.

Strong reinforcements of men and material were reported in position in the new defence line, where the terrain makes mechanized attacks extremely hazardous.

The main German drive appeared to be directed down the central section of the Peninsula from the Bitolj (Monastir) Gap, while the column which crashed down the Vardar Valley and took Salonika was in contact with the Allied forces to the east in the region of Mount Olympus. Here, the Greeks said, "several thrusts by enemy mechanized forces were repulsed."

The penetration through the Siatista Pass was disclosed last night by a Greek spokesman. The advance was said to have cost the Germans many lives as they struggled through tortuous mountain routes harassed by sharpshooters.

Greek Forts Still Hold.

Col. Conto Leon, acting military attache at the Greek Legation in London, declared meanwhile that several "weak and doomed" Greek forts—cut off in Eastern Macedonia after the Germans took Salonika—still were holding out, "although constantly harried and suffering heavy bombardment and dive-bombing attacks."

Leon said that an isolated but stubborn Greek force had "for many days blocked routes into Eastern Macedonia, thus making possible rescue and smooth embarkation and transportation of substantial numbers of Greek forces from that area."

"When these numbers are revealed," he added, "they will cause amazement and relief."

Leon asserted that the speedy capture of Eastern Thrace, through the advance on Xanthe, was not a military feat because the area was not defended.

The removal of the main Greek forces, he said, began early in March and "when the German attack came (Sunday, April 6) Greek troops and the bulk of the population had gone."

The attache declared that Greece had planned to resist the Germans even in the event of Yugoslav capitulation to Axis demands and had concentrated her main forces in Central Macedonia.

After the Yugoslav coup d'etat on March 27—with a friendly Yugoslav army covering the Vardar Valley route into Greece—Greek divisions were transferred to strengthen the defence of Eastern Macedonia, he said, and "this transfer, though dictated by logic, proved fatal."

OSHAWA, Ont., April 16—(CP).—Striking employees of the Schofield Woollen Company, who have been out since April 7 to enforce demands for a collective bargaining agreement, went back to work today. About 80 workers were involved in the strike.

The decision to return to their jobs was made at a meeting of the Canadian Hosiery Workers' Union last night when a message was sent to Ottawa advising Labor Department authorities of the move. It was said today that they had received no reply, but a conciliation officer was expected to arrive from Ottawa.

"After consulting with unions supporting their walkout," a union statement said, "striking employees have decided to return to work and to immediately seek direct negotiations with the firm for a collective bargaining agreement."

The statement indicated that if negotiations fail to make progress, an application will be made for a conciliation board.

WILFUL NEGLECT CAUSES ACCIDENTS PORT HOPE AUDIENCE TOLD

Canada At War Such Neglect Equals Sabotage

FORT HOPE, April 16 —(ENS)— Safety in industrial plants exist only in the measure in which individual workmen observe the dangers inherent in their jobs. Norman Dean, M.A., F.S.S., told industrial workers at a mass meeting in the Town Hall Tuesday night. He is a statistician with the Workmen's Compensation Board and in the interests of the Industrial Accident Prevention Association, spoke on the topic "When Am I Safe?"

Prior to his address the meeting which included ladies and men from Port Hope industrial concerns enjoyed a community sing song led by K. J. Hodgert and E. Brandwood. H. Lucas, Cobourg, was chairman of the evening.

Dr. Dean charged that accident occur because of ,willful neglect. Each of the 1,454,000 accidents which the Compensation Board has considered since 1915 at a cost of $142,000,000 could have been avoided he claimed, by careful consideration of the dangers involved in the job on which each accident occurred. Such neglect when Canada is at war is equal to sabotage and detracts that much from Canada's war effort.

Compensation is paid by the public through increased costs Dr. Dean remided his audience. He emphasized there are no hard and fast rules by which accidents may be avoided in industry, declaring that in every job there is a possibility of something happening. The home, statistics prove, is the most dangerous place from the consideration of the number of accidents.

Trivial circumstances frequently cause the most serious accidents, Mr. Dean proved by citing case histories. "Never can you consider yourself safe in a plant," he emphasized. "You yourself can remember this one thing, "that in everything I do, there is a possibility of getting hurt."

. . . by building a home for my family

THOUSANDS of Canadian workers are beginning to realize that after-war security is within their reach today.

There's work to be done now — but there is tomorrow to think of, too. That's why the Government is sponsoring the building of low-cost homes for workers.

Under the National Housing Act, you can build a home for your family and pay for it as you pay rent now. In small monthly payments. Interest rates are low — a very small investment is needed.

And these are homes to be proud of. Insulated with Ten/Test, they are soundly constructed — easy to heat, because Ten/Test insulation is built right into many of these homes. That means low upkeep, low heating costs. It provides durable, permanent insulation as long as the house endures.

Be sure you specify Ten/Test insulation in your home when you build. For Ten/Test does THREE jobs at one low cost.

1. Ten/Test insulates.
2. Ten/Test stops cold-air seepage.
3. Ten/Test adds structural strength.

Only RIGID fibre board insulation does all three of these essential jobs.

Be wise — take advantage of this sound plan. Ask any Ten/Test dealer to give you details of how the plan works. Or send this coupon today.

Britain Fights Alone

How many battles can Britain fight? When the war started France was an active ally, but France dropped out and Britain has since been going alone. The threat of invasion has never been lifted and that has called for the concentration of an unusually large number of troops in the British Isles.

When Italy moved in to attack Greece, Britain went to the assistance of that country, and it called for the use of transports, naval strength, equipment of all sorts and thousands of men.

When the campaign in Egypt was opened by the drive of the Italians toward Alexandria Britain had to meet with that threat and do it with a small army, which was fortunately strengthened by the arrival of the Australians.

When Haile Selassie started out for Ethiopia it was again the British who had to go to his assistance.

Meanwhile the German army was doing little fighting. It was busy rolling its equipment and marching its men into the Balkans and putting pressure on the lesser nations to let Hitler have his way so his troops could march over their boundaries with no resistance. When Yugoslavia refused it was Britain again which had to go to the assistance of that nation. Quite true, it may all have a bearing on the battle for the control of the Suez, but that does not alter the plain and hard fact that Britain has had to make all these moves and make them alone.

In the battle of the Atlantic it is a long way removed from the last war, during which Britain had the support of the naval power of France, Italy, Japan and United States. Today she fights alone on the high seas to keep her life line open.

The indications all point to the conclusion that enlistments in Canada will have to step up briskly. The call has gone forth for 116,000 men for 1941, and they need a deal of training before they can be considered ready to go overseas. There is an urgency in the situation which cannot be concealed. Nor should it.

No Solution In Sight

Hon. J. G. Gardiner, Minister of Agriculture, was on the radio at Regina, and from there he talked to his own people, the farmers of the West. There was no one to interrupt or ask questions like there would have been during a debate in the Ottawa House.

The Minister told the farmers he was not trying to do something for them in arranging a bonus on land turned aside from wheat production. Four dollars per acre for allowing wheat land to run fallow is not profitable either for the farmer or the government.

The real problem, according to Mr. Gardiner, is that the 1941 yield must be kept down to 230,000,000 bushels.

The size of that undertaking can be pictured by recalling that the wheat yield of 1940 was 525,000,000 bushels.

Anything over 230,000,000 bushels for 1941 could not be disposed of for three years.

Every 100,000,000 bushels produced above 300,000,000 would cost the government $100,000,000, and the government already has $400,000,000 tied up in wheat, to which will be added another $50,000,000 carrying charges for 1941-42.

In order to make it very plain Mr. Gardiner said: "The government would be best pleased if you did not grow any wheat this year." Only 230,000,000 bushels could be sold, and if none at all were grown and delivered, the amount for which there is sale in sight could be taken from the surplus on hand and still leave sufficient.

We still think it is a poor plan to pay people for not growing wheat, but what else is there to suggest? We have thousands of farmers in Western Canada who have to live. They cannot possibly stand around through the productive season of 1941 and make a living by looking at the land. It is easy enough to tell them to grow something else. But what for instance?

It is arranged that $35,000,000 will be spent on bonusing non-production of wheat, but against that it is perhaps just as well to look back to the year 1925 when the wheat crop of the West had a market value of $451,956,000.

We believe Mr. Gardiner was correct when he told the farmers of the West that they were not going to make anything out of the bonus for non-production. Neither is any other section of the Dominion.

There Was No Other Way

The Provincial Council of the Ontario Secondary School Teachers' Federation is not pleased with the salary schedules for teachers in municipalities which are under the supervision of the Department of Municipal Affairs. Such salaries are too low. The Municipal Department, it was charged, was dictating to the School Boards and making the decisions regarding teachers' salaries.

Possibly that is irksome, but behind it all there is quite a chapter of municipal history and a good deal of poor municipal management. These municipalities had not been able to make a go of it; their finances were in poor shape and were actually dangerous. There had been default of payment of legal obligations, and then it was that the Department of Municipal Affairs was called in to set the house in order and try and save the situation.

It really meant that this outside organization had to go in there and do things which the elected representatives of the people in such places either would not do or were afraid to do. They had to get the expenditure down to the point where it would step along and keep pace with the income, and it had to recognize that the ability of ratepayers to pay had a good deal to do with keeping the finances of a municipality sweet and in good order.

The credit standing of all such municipalities was at stake and in order to get back on safe ground it was necessary to make reductions, and the school teachers were included in the list. We are quite certain those charged with this kind of work found no particular pleasure in reducing salaries. They would be called dictators of course, and that is what they had to be. They have cleaned up the situation in a good many centres, and for the most part have made rather a good job of their municipal housecleaning.

The Voice Is Hitler's

United States proposes to take over by charter or purchase 39 Danish ships now in U.S. ports. Then came a decision by the Danish government to the effect that the ships were not for sale. It was reported this way:

COPENHAGEN, Denmark (via Berlin). — The Foreign Office declared it had instructed Hendrik de Kauffman, Danish Minister in Washington, to advise the United States that Denmark would neither sell nor lease ships now in protective custody in American ports.

That report (via Berlin) is intended to express the will and desire and decision of the government of Denmark, but we do not believe it does.

There was another transaction put through at Washington, and it was signed by Cordell Hull and the Danish Minister in Washington. It had to do with Greenland, and this is one of the points included in the document:

"Although the sovereignty of Denmark over Greenland is fully recognized, the present circumstances for the time being prevent the Government in Denmark from exercising its powers in respect to Greenland."

So it comes down to a rather simple question: If these "present circumstances" prevent Denmark from exercising its sovereignty, or its will or desire, in regard to Greenland, would not the same circumstances prevent Denmark from exercising its sovereignty in regard to the Danish vessels at present in ports of United States?

It means only one thing — the voice speaking from Copenhagen is the voice of Hitler, and United States refuses to recognize that voice as speaking for the people or the government of Denmark.

The Consumer Will Pay

There are 400,000 employees of the Bethlehem Steel Company of Johnstown, Pa., and the U.S. Steel Corporation, and a strike was threatened by the C.I.O. The result was an announcemen of an increase in wages of ten cents per hour, and taking an eight-hour day as the basis it means a daily increase of $320,000 in wages. If one is inclined to go in for greater figures then it is a simple matter to go on from that starting point and figure what it will mean in a month or a year. It does not take many days to enter the million class.

Then what? According to latest returns steel production in United States in 1940 paid taxes amounting to $3.32 per ton of steel produced, and the net income was $4.14 per ton. The steel companies have nothing which looks like a perpetual reserve out of which wage increases can be paid, and so we take it that the increased wages of $320,000 per day will be added to the price at which the tonnage is sold. It will follow the old rule of being passed along to the consumer.

There is a tremendous demand for steel at the moment, and it will continue through the duration of the war. There are certain classes of steel on which delivery is even now well behind schedule. There is also a very close connection between steel prices in United States and the steel used in Canada because our country, while manufacturing steel, also imports it. When prices go up in United States they become firmer in our country.

So that increase of ten cents per hour will have an effect in Canada. We recall having discussed that same question with Nelson Monteith, who was Minister of Agriculture in the Whitney Government, and who is also the one surviving member of the cabinet of that time. He farms in a pleasant spot on the Embro Road, a short distance from Stratford, in Perth county. He remarked he had noticed where there had been a boost in the price of steel, and continued:

"I have farmed for many years, and have also had opportunity to observe the way in which prices have gone for those things which I must purchase as a farmer. I can almost with certainty lay that clipping to one side and wait until the results of the increase in the price of steel starts to come back and attach themselves to my farm. I know it will be done because it has always worked out that way before. A certain amount of that steel will go into the implements or utensils which we need here and quite likely by the time the process of passing on the increase to the consumer gets around this far it will amount to a good deal more than the original increase in the price of a ton of steel. But whether it comes this month or next month or in six months from now I know it is going to arrive. On the farm we are consumers and we never get missed when it comes to passing around the increased prices."

And the observant Nelson Monteith was right. An increase which is going to mean some millions of dollars for steel workers in United States may not seem to have any direct connection with people in Canada. But it has.

NOTE AND COMMENT

Iron ore enters a modern auto factory one morning and by noon the next day is going out of the delivery door as part of a finished car. And after that it has a fairly good chance of coming back again as scrap metal.

We read where a robber in Western Ontario, "was surprised when at his work and made a hurried exit." Reading in our book "What To Do In An Emergency" we concluded the robber did exactly the right thing.

The 350 cadets attending New York Military Academy gave their cots and bedding to British war victims, and for the rest of the term will sleep on the ground. That must be what they mean by giving till it hurts.

Brockville town council has asked for an investigation of the increase in the price of milk, and our belief is that such investigation will reveal that rumors of the increase are quite correct. And that will be all.

Man in England who died recently left $95,000 to his widow and suggested in his will that she should marry again if she so desired. Perhaps that is evidence of the changed conditions reported to be coming when the war is over.

The chief of the German army in Norway was near the point of explosion the other morning. When he sat down to breakfast he found copies of the London Times only two days old. He's been busy since trying to find out how they arrived. And hasn't.

STUMPED

(By A.R.K.)

¶ I must admit that I am stumped, and many times quite badly bumped, and feel much like a sap; the reason why I'm out of luck, and feel so often stalled and stuck, is looking at the map.

¶ I read the war news every day, and spell the names I cannot say, from here they're rather far; and then I start on maps once more, and search as I have done before, to see just where they are.

¶ Some names impress me by their size, to say them loud would not be wise, they look so strange to me; so many letters for one name, it really seems a wasteful shame, they should make two or three.

¶ And places where the fight goes hard, and where the line won't bend a yard, I search for them in vain; it's in a mountain I can't find, and all the roads they say are mined, I'm puzzled in the brain.

¶ I used to study maps at school, and worked according to the rule, I knew the names quite well; knew capitals and boundaries too, of rivers quoted quite a few, and where tides rose and fell.

¶ But when I read the Balkan news, I get at once the mental blues, I'm not a clever man; I trip on names of foreign kind, and then it is I'm sure to find — how ignorant I am.

Soviet Envoy Finds Himself Quite Popular

By CHARLES P. STEWART

WASHINGTON.—Comrade Constantine A. Oumansky, Moscow's ambassador here, is up against new experience. He actually is quite popular in Washington. The state department not only is glad to see him when he calls; it urges him to drop in more and more frequently. Secretary Hull and Undersecretary Welles give him warm handclasps. Newspapermen head into his embassy and, after talking with him, beat it out to write almost friendly stories about the Soviet republics.

C. A. Oumansky

I'll bet Constantine could give an ambassadorial party now and get a good attendance. Not so very long ago, every time he issued invitations to some classy function at his diplomatic headquarters on 16th St., the invitees virtually boycotted him. It was noticeable, too, that Muscovite chuck is mighty toothsome and stimulating, including delicious caviar and pungent vodka. But Constantine couldn't get more than a corporal's guard of guests on to his premises to eat and drink his refreshments.

It was partly because the Stalinist outfit is communistic, but that alone didn't get Constantine so completely blacklisted. The Soviets' action in hopping on to Finland was what utterly finished him socially and pretty well finished him officially.

What rehabilitated him was Moscow's friendly stand for pro-British Turkey, which is interpreted as foreshadowing a rift in the loose compact between the Soviets and Germany.

BACK-PATTING EXPLAINED

In principle Washington doesn't like the Communists any better than ever it did, but it certainly does think they ought to be encouraged to turn as sour as possible toward the Nazis, the Fascists and the Japs also. Hence all the pats on the back that Ambassador Oumansky is getting.

State Undersecretary Welles held a whole week of conferences with him, and then issued his statement expressing Uncle Sam's "pleasure" at the position Moscow's assumed relative to the Turks. He didn't mention pleasure concerning reports that Russia had put a stop to exports of its oil to Germany, because those reports haven't been confirmed yet. If they are confirmed, though, it'll be still more pleasurable.

Neither American diplomats or military experts rate the Russians very high as a fighting organization. Not that, individually, they can't fight all right, probably, but their management's considered very poor.

Still, they're numerous and geographically strategical.

Then there's Yugoslavia, the biggest of the Balkan countries, which is a mixed-up mess. Originally it was Serbia. Serbia came out of the last world war with the acquisition of several other groups of peoples. These others are the one that dictated the dicker with Herr Hitler just before King Peter came into power, but Serbs remain as the nub of Yugoslavia, and they're violently anti-German—and, are dandy scrappers though not overly equipped for warfare.

Now if Hitler has Serbian Yugoslavia on his hands, plus Greece, plus pro-Zog Albania, plus Turkey, plus all the help Britain can give 'em, plus all sorts of supplies from the United States and minus any effective help from Italy and without any effective Japanese aid in that field of operations—won't such a combination be calculated to worry him—with another war on his opposite front?

And then add the Soviets, if they can be wished into the aggregation!

THEY'D BE HANDY

It makes no difference whether you like Communists or not. It's a situation in which Russia can come in handily from the democracies' standpoint—as an anti-Axis belligerent if available, or even as a pro-democratic neutral if that's the best that can be squeezed out of the Moscow government.

So Ambassador Oumansky isn't merely being treated with an increased amount of consideration. He's being definitely played up to, with a view to getting pro-democratic reports to Moscow out of him.

If the Axis can be licked, the Communists can be attended to later.

Just at the moment Congressional Anti-American Investigator Martin Dies, with all his anti-communistic talk, is a nuisance.

NAZIS ADOPT IDEA

THE power-operated gun-turret, one of the features of British aircraft which have helped the R.A.F. to gain superiority over the enemy, has now been adopted by the Germans, who formerly attached little importance to it. It is installed in the new Focke-Wulf Kurier, a long-range four-engined bomber, where it is mounted on top of the fuselage, houses four guns, and is electrically operated.

Some types of turret now in use are rotated electrically and house as many as four machine-guns. They have been so successful that frequently big bombers equipped with turrets in the nose and tail have destroyed enemy single-seater fighters. — Manchester Guardian.

• Had Only One Leg, But . . .

From the Leeds Yorkshire Post

I WAS standing behind the counter at the Bradford Employment Exchange listening to the clerks who were interviewing the 800 men who now sign on locally as wholly unemployed.

There is a big drive in progress to find men who can be put to work on urgent Government contracts. It is shovel work, a lot of it, but not necessarily digging.

A man came up to the counter, on crutches. He had a lean face, birdlike in its intention eagerness.

"How old are you?"

He slapped open his birth certificate.

"Forty-one."

"Quite fit?"

Well, I have a leg off." He looked imploringly at the clerk. "But I'm willing to do owt."

The clerk was moved. He bent over a sheet of foolscap and seemed to take longer than usual to write out his name.

"I can do owt, really," said the man, shifting on his crutches.

"How much of your leg is off?"

"From the hip....It's a beggar when you have to come to this."

"Can you use a shovel?"

"I shifted all my own snow....I know I've only one leg."

"But your heart is in the right place," murmured the clerk. "Just a minute."

He turned to me. "I'd like to do something for him," he said. "We interviewed a man in Leeds, last week, and he only had one leg. He was so keen he went out into the middle of the floor and showed us that he could use a shovel. Gave us a demonstration with his stick. The contractors took him on. But his leg was off below the knee, and he had an artificial foot."

The clerk went off, and consulted a higher official. When he came back he was smiling.

"Come in tomorrow morning, and we'll see what the contractors say," he said to the man across the counter.

"Right," said the man briskly, gathering up his birth certificate.

The clerks interviewed about 400 men, selected over 60 who will travel to their new employment in special buses. They will be paid 1s. 5¼d. an hour, and will be able to earn £4 10s. or more in a week of favorable weather.

On the site to which the men will travel are hutments providing warm sleeping accommodation, wash-houses with hot and cold water and shower baths, and a canteen where meals are cheap and wholesome.

The men are urgently needed, but the task of finding them is not made easier for the officials of the Employment Exchange by the dwindling unemployment registers. In the North-Eastern Region of the Ministry of Labor (the West and East ridings) there were 60,000 wholly unemployed a year ago—there are now 12,000.

A similar drive in Leeds about a fortnight ago produced 225 men from among 600 wholly unemployed.

Many of the men I saw had passed middle age but were none the less eager on that account.

One man, who was 64, and looked at the clerk with a comical expression over his spectacles, said he had worked a couple of years back as a delver in a quarry.

"Can you use a shovel?"

"I've used a hammer and crowbar."

"I can offer you a job."

"Well, nah then," he nodded laconically.

"It's a bus ride."

"I'll go anywhere....I'll go to China, if you want me."

No Fear

The little guests at a party were being arranged in a group for a flashlight photograph. Seeing one little fellow who appeared rather awed, the photographer spoke to him kindly. "Cheer up, sonny," he said. "Smile at this little girl over here."

"Why should I?" he asked indignantly. "She's my sister."

Hairy

George was still full of sleep when he yawned, walked to the table, and reached for the hand mirror. His fingers grasped the hairbrush instead. "Great Scott!" he exclaimed in amazement. "I certainly need a shave this morning!"

PAT ON THE BACK

LETHBRIDGE Public School Board deserves a pat on the back for its action in reducing the demand on the taxpayers of the city this year by $3,000. Coming at a time when very heavy war taxes are being imposed on the people, any relief, however slight, is appreciated by the citizen, and it is evident that the members of the board felt that way about it.—Lethbridge Herald.

RUN, NAZIS!

SINCE the successful British-Norwegian raid on Lofoten, the Germans have heavily reinforced their coast patrols. One of these, operating near Bergen, was reconnoitering after nightfall when suddenly a shape appeared on a hillside out of the darkness. "Halt!" cried a soldier. But when other shapes appeared the Germans dropped everything they had and ran for their lives. The "shapes" then remained in full control of the hill. They were 12 sheep!

Next day the German commandant posted orders to the effect that all sheep must be at home by 7 p.m. Otherwise they would run the risk of being shot.—News of Norway.

Wing Commander Is Missing

The United Kingdom Air Liaison Mission has asked the assistance of the general public in seeking information on Wing Commander W. J. B. Elliott, missing from his duties in Ottawa. After taking part in the heavy fighting in France leading up to the British evacuation, Wing Commander Elliott recuperated in England and then came to Canada, for special duties in Ottawa. He endangered his health by overwork, and associates prevailed upon him to take a rest, leaving Ottawa on March 22 and was later traced as far as Prescott. Wing Commander Elliott is 36 years old, weighs 135 pounds, and his height is 5 feet 8 inches. He has dark brown hair, well-groomed and parted on the side. He has a prominent chin and is heavily lined about the mouth. He speaks quickly and occasionally with a slight stutter. He wears false teeth. When last seen he was wearing a rough brown tweed sports jacket, fawn flannel trousers and brown shoes with a thick crepe rubber sole. He never wears a hat. Anyone having knowledge of Wing Commander Elliott is requested to communicate with the police or with Royal Canadian Air Force Headquarters at Ottawa.

Lindsay Adopts Fast Time To Start May 4

LINDSAY, April 16.—(ENS).) — Daylight saving will become effective in Lindsay on May 4. This was the decision of the town council at its meeting Monday night when the necessary by-law was passed with but one dissenting voice. Alderman Lamb in his opposition to the measure, pointed out that Lindsay was essentially a farmer's town and that the farmers of the district were strongly opposed to a change in time.

Mayor Claxton stated that he understood there would be a saving of $6,000 on power through the introduction of daylight saving, and as the majority of towns are on fast time, Lindsay should also follow suit.

It was announced at the town council that a total of 79 local residents are receiving relief at the present time in comparison to 271 in 1940. However, in comparison to $1.69 cost per capital in 1940, the town this year is compelled to pay $2.12 per capita.

Ald. Butler put up a lone fight at the meeting in his efforts to have the paragraph in the traffic by-law relative to one hour parking on Kent street rescinded. He charged that the farmers were being chased and kicked from one end of Kent street to the other by the police and that business was being driven from the town. Several aldermen ridiculed Alderman Butler's contention, claiming that a great many farmers had expressed themselves as being well satisfied with the measure. No action was taken.

Victim Of a Train

WELLAND, Ont., April 16 (CP) Mike Sydor, 67, died in Welland County General Hospital early today from injuries caused when he was apparently struck by a train while walking along the Canadian National Railways right-of-way early Monday.

Sydor suffered a skull fracture and multiple lacerations.

He was found by C.N.R. men lying on the side of the tracks, unconscious and with his head in a pool of blood. A preliminary inquest will be held today.

An Eastern Wall

Berlin, April 16 (AP)

FRITZ TODT, minister of munitions, who built the German westwall, has gone to Poland with three of his closest collaborators for extensive inspection of Germany's eastern fortifications.

The trip will take Todt along the German-Russian frontier from Ostroleka to Prezemysl. Thousands of German workers have been digging this eastwall ever since the new border between Germany and Russia was agreed upon.

Sweep Ticket Clears A Slum

Negro Uses Winnings To Open 50 Apartments

PHILADELPHIA, April 16—(AP) —A $2.50 investment in the Irish Sweepstakes by a negro family on relief made possible the opening today of a $150,000 slum clearance project, first of its kind to be privately financed in the United States.

Pearl and Benjamin Mason held a ticket on the victorious Workman in 1939 and with their winnings built the Frances Plaza apartments for members of their race, naming the development after the daughter who drew the top horse.

Happy to share their good fortune, the couple was on hand to welcome first occupants selected from more than 300 applicants for the 50 South Philadelphia dwellings.

Nearly $100,000 of the Masons' $150,000 prize went into the project, loans from the reconstruction financing corporation and a bank accounting for the remainder.

Modern in every respect, the apartments are equipped with air conditioning, playground, lawns and a fountain, playrooms in the basement for children, a gymnasium and bowling alley, reception hall for social affairs and chapel for religious services.

Rents of $30 a month for three-room units and $39 for five rooms are the lowest possible to meet construction investment and upkeep.

"I'm glad to be able to do something for my people," declared Mosan, who drew $11.50 weekly relief for his family of four before his horse came in.

Tribute Is Paid Dean O'Sullivan On His Elevation To Monsignor

Under the heading of "Father Franks—Gets the Purple" the editor of the Canadian Freeman pays glowing tribute to Monsignor O'Sullivan of the Church of the Immaculate Conception on his elevation to the rank of domestic prelate by His Holiness the Pope. The editorial says:

"Father Frank, 'The Gleaner,' the Dean—and now it is the Right Reverend Monsignor.

"Down the vista of the years I look back to my first meeting with 'Father Frank.' In those distant days, when the heart was young and muscles supple, and I had just been commissioned to preach the Gospel, Saturday afternoon found me throwing a few things in a bag and taking a train from Peterborough to Bowmanville and Newcastle. The Sunday schedule called for Mass in both towns. Greatly to my discomfiture, the railway schedule took no account of my ardent desire to return to the home base Sunday afternoon. So there was nothing left for the young and—believe it or not—shy sacerdos to do but get as far as Port Hope, ring the bell of the presbytery, and invite myself to be 'Father Frank's' guest until Monday afternoon. And—maybe he never guessed it—you can take it from me that I didn't like that part of the day's work at all. You see I then regarded 'Father Frank' as quite an old priest who wouldn't want to be bothered entertaining a youngster just given his wings.

"Funny how one's idea of 'years' change with the years! 'Father Frank' was then young enough to be a hockey player, although as a matter of fact he took his exercise on the bowling green.

"I found I was crossing a lot of unnecessary bridges. The pastor of St. Mary's, Port Hope, allayed all my fears from the first, took me to his heart in true priestly fraternity, and from that day to this we have been what the army calls 'buddies.' My visits to Port Hope are still remembered as among the bright spots of years that are now turning to autumnal shade. An ideal host, 'Father Frank' entertained without giving you the impression that you were a guest. And isn't that the highest compliment that can be paid to any host? Ideal priest, perfect gentleman, cultured to a fine degree, a lover of books and a connoisseur of literature—that was 'Father Frank' thirty-one years ago. And that is the Monsignor of today. And proud and happy am I to be privileged to extend congratulations to as worthy a priest as ever was honored by the Roman purple.

"Right Reverend Monsignor F. J. O'Sullivan, present pastor of the Immaculate Conception Church, Peterborough City, has contributed in no little degree to the cause of Canadian Catholic letters. As 'The Gleaner' he has enriched the pages of this paper as well as the 'Catholic Record' of London. For the Catholic Truth Society, of which he is a past president, he has written several valuable pamphlets. But perhaps Monsignor O'Sullivan will be best remembered for his delightful 'Chronicles of Crofton,' a volume dealing with the light and shade, the ups and downs, of a parish in rural Ontario. As he says in 'A Foreword' to this book, so it may be said of him: 'We have managed to hold the standard aloft, and to keep the fires of faith burning around the old altar...It is dicouraging work, this merely holding of a fort ...There is the consolation, however, that one is at his appointed post, and doing what he can.' All these years Monsignor O'Sullivan has been at his appointed post, doing what he can. Than this there is no greater tribute to a priest of God."

At the conclusion of the business, dainty refreshments were served by the hostess, Mrs. Hill.

Dog Loses $2,000

PHILADELPHIA, April 16—(AP) —Tiny, 11-year-old French poodle, lost a $2,000 law suit in Judge Charles Sinkler's court. Mrs. Matilda Boyle made the claim for the dog under the will of Mrs. Lizzie Van Dusen Cameron, who bequeathed the amount in trust "for the care of any pet dogs which I may own at the time of my decease." Judge Sinkler held evidence indicated Tiny belonged to Mrs. Boyle, who had been Mrs. Cameron's maid.

WAKE UP YOUR LIVER BILE—

And You'll Jump Out of Bed in the Morning Rarin' to Go

The liver should pour out two pounds of liquid bile into your bowels daily. If this bile is not flowing freely, your food doesn't digest. It just decays in the bowels. Gas bloats up your stomach. You get constipated. Harmful poisons go into the body, and you feel sour, sunk and the world looks punk.

A mere bowel movement doesn't always get at the cause. You need something that works on the liver as well. It takes those good, old Carter's Little Liver Pills to get these two pounds of bile flowing freely and make you feel "up and up". Harmless and gentle, they make the bile flow freely. They do the work of calomel but have no calomel or mercury in them. Ask for Carter's Little Liver Pills by name! Stubbornly refuse anything else. 25c.

Dodgers Repurchase Pitcher Kimball

BROOKLYN, April 16.—(AP)—The Dodgers today repurchased Pitcher Newell Kimball whom they sent to St. Louis Cardinals last year in the deal for Joe Medwick.

At the same time the Dodgers announced that Pitcher Howard Mills had been returned to St. Louis Browns. Mills was obtained conditionally during the winter.

Tex Carleton, veteran hurler who pitched a no-hit, no-run game for Brooklyn against Cincinnati Reds last April, was not in uniform for yesterday's opening game with New York Giants and it was believed the Dodgers intend to dispose of his services also.

Remember When—

(By The Canadian Press).

George (Twinkletoes) Selkirk, picked to succeed baseball's mightiest hitter, Babe Ruth, made his debut with New York Yankees an auspicious one by slashing out a clean single in his first time at bat at New York six years ago today. Selkirk, who comes from Huntsville, Ont., still is with the Yankees.

SPORTS – DAY BY DAY

By FRED D. CRAIG

Baseball really got under way yesterday when seven games were played, three in the American League and four in the National loop. As usual there were a number of first day surprises and upsets and some of the games greatest pitchers got off on the wrong foot, the victims including the famous Bob Feller of the Cleveland Indians, Paul Derringer, Cincinnati Reds' ace and Red Ruffing, one of the mainstays of the Yanks' pitching staff. The day was remarkable indeed for the number of fancied clubs who took the small end of the score. Of course there is little in that for their supporters to worry over but as John J. McGraw once wisely said: "The games you win in April you don't have to win in September" and if there are the expected photo finishes in the two leagues then the losses sustained by the favorites yesterday may loom up a lot larger later on.

* * * * * *

In the American loop one game, the Detroit-St. Louis affair was rained out. Philadelphia Athletics spoiled the Yanks' opening by beating the McCarthyites 3 to 1 with Red Ruffing the losing pitcher. Chubby Dean held the Yanks to five hits, starting where he left off last season and if the New Yorkers had to face him every day they would have a tough time getting out of the cellar. Bobbie Feller who pitched a no-hit game against the Chicago White Sox on opening day last year, was wild and failed to go the route against the Dykes entry yesterday losing a 4 to 3 decision. Dietrich pitched steady ball for the winners. Boston Red Sox did not uncover much pitching having to use Wilson, Hash and Johnston against Washington but they had plenty of power including homers by Joe Cronin and Bobby Doer to beat the Senators, staging a three run rally in the ninth to grab off the win. The Sox will make runs galore and if they can get any gunning worthy of the name will be always dangerous.

* * * * * *

Starting out to defend their National League pennant the Cincinnati Reds ran into heavy weather when the St. Louis Cardinals with Lon Warneke doing the throwing drove Paul Derringer out of the box and won 7 to 3, aided by three home runs. New York Giants had the first laugh of the season at the expense of their neighbors, the Brooklyn Dodgers winning 6 to 4 against the pitching of Wyatt, one of Brooklyn's aces. Chicago Cubs had too much oomph for the Pittsburg Pirates, getting good pitching from Passau to win 7 to 4. Meanwhile the Phillies were getting away in proper style by outscoring the Bees 6 to 5. In short, the National League favorites all led with their chin with the usual result. Today of course the script may be entirely different.

Softball Meeting Soon

It is expected that the annual meeting of the City Softball League will be called in the near future. Just what will be doing in men's softball this summer is by no means clear and so far there has been no rush on the part of managers to sign up players, as is usually the case at this season of the year. The champion Quakers have so far made no move to organize for the season and while there is talk of a Westclox team, because of the number of softballers now employed at the big plant near the liftlock, nothing in the way of organization has been done there either. Things will begin to move in Hastings shortly as Dit Clapper, fresh from his triumphs in the Stanley Cup series, will be back and his enthusiasm and drive will soon get the game under way in Hastings. It is expected that the Hastings outfit will be back in the local loop again this season. They added a lot of color to the league last summer.

* * * * * *

We like this tribute written by Bob Murphy in the Detroit News, first, because it is a nice gesture from an enemy sheet and second because it confirms our impression that the selectors slipped badly when Milt Schmidt of the Bruins failed to get a look in on either of the All-Star lineups. Says Murphy: "First of all, I want them to tell me why they keep calling Syl Apps of Toronto the best center and the greatest player in hockey. Seems to me I saw a guy named Milt Schmidt of the famed Boston Kraut line out there last night. He does everything in the book, and does it almost letter perfect. He is smooth and fast and graceful. He is a great playmaker, a deadly shot, and he can bounce you around with as much physical shocking as you would care to take. If hockey has a greater player than Schmidt, then I know his name. It's Frankie Brimsek, goalie of the Bruins. I'd vote against Brimsek, though. He isn't human, and his name shouldn't be included in human conversation. He's part tiger, part acrobat, part elephant and part fox. Throw in a few dashes of the Dies committee, the FBI, Harvey Campbell and the new 1948 airplane and you have Frankie Brimsek."

They Have What It Takes

While we have always had a warm spot in our hearts for Tracy Shaw and the Oshawa Generals we must confess that the 7 to 4 victory scored by the Montreal Royals in the fifth and decisive game of the Eastern junior finals last night hasn't caused us any grief. The Royals got an awful ride from the C.A.H.A. in the playoff arrangements which required them to play all five games at Maple Leaf Gardens, almost home ice for Oshawa and the fact that they were able to overcome that handicap and the worse one of having to fly from Montreal for the final game because four of the players had to write examinations at McGill yesterday shows that the Easterners have plenty of what it takes to make a championship team. For the first time in the history of hockey Quebec has produced a junior club strong enough to take the Eastern Canadian honors and the Montrealers deserve all kinds of credit for their cleverness and gameness. They were badly beaten in the fourth game but bounced back off the ropes to score a knockout.

* * * * * *

The Boston Bruins have taken nearly all the hockey honors. Not content with winning the National Hockey League championship and the Stanley Cup the Boston outfit have grabbed off most of the individual glory as well. The Vezina trophy, of course, went to Turk Broda of the Leafs but Bill Cowley of the Bruins won the indivdual scoring championship and now comes the announcement that in addition to that feat he has also been awarded the Dr. David A. Hart trophy as the most valuable player to his club. Cowleys claim to that award is a strong one. He set up a modern scoring record and his total of assists showed how much he contributed to the offensive punch of the Bruins. So powerful are the Bruins in all departments that if Cowley had not won the Hart award it would have gone to a team mate, for Dit Clapper was right behind the Boston centre ice star in the voting for the award. And along comes Bobby Bauer, sturdy little right-winger of the Kraut line to grab off another individual honor for the Bruins. To him has been awarded for the second year the Lady Byng trophy for being the most sportsmanlike player in the N.H.L. Bauer made a lot of friends in Peterborough when he appeared here several times with Dit Clapper's hockey softballers and local fans will be delighted to see him land the Byng trophy again.

Sporting Chili Con Carne: Rick Hepburn of the Kingston Combines has graduated as an engineer at Queen's University and will join the Canadian navy almost immediately....C.A.H.A. has appointed a committee to prepare a history of hockey. They might entitle it "The Rise and Fall of Amateur Hockey"....Bud Farmer of the Montreal Royals goes in for crops of scoring points; he figured in five goals last night....Royals had to buck a 65-mile head wind in a three-hour ride from Montreal to Toronto last evening. But even air-sickness could not cheat them out of the Eastern title....Phil Marchildon, Penetang product, is staying with the A's for the time being....Lodigiani who did not exactly set the Toronto bay on fire when he performed for the Leafs last season grabbed off three hits off the delivery of Bobby Feller yesterday as White Sox trimmed Cleveland.

Coaches To Be Suspended For Going On The Ice

CALGARY, April 16 — (CP) — Hockey coaches or managers who go on the ice during a game without permission of the referee or strike a referee will be automatically suspended and the case referred to the branch executive for action, it was decided at the annual convention of the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association here.

This was the chief of several amendments calculated to clarify rules and embodied in the report of the rules committee which was adopted by the convention yesterday. There were no changes in playing rules.

Other amendments make clear that a playing-coach cannot act in the capacity of a captain and provide that goalies can be changed at any time during a game.

The committee also recommended that high-sticking and boarding rules be rigidly enforced by referees and that in Juvenile, Midget and Bantam hockey no body-checking be allowed in centre ice.

One amendment said that when play is in a defence zone, an attacking player outside the blue line may reach across the blue line and play the puck without causing an offside.

Customers To Pay

KANSAS CITY, April 16—(AP)—The two per cent. Missouri sales tax won't be on the house at Kansas City taverns after this week. O. M. Smith, Tavern Owners' Association president, said "It's hard to argue with a fellow who has a few drinks about that little two per cent.—but the tax has run into big money, some of us owe $5,000 to $6,000."

What counts in a bicycle!

SMART appearance—strength—long life—easy pedalling—sure-acting coaster brake—all of these and a dozen other things that you get in a C.C.M. Bicycle are important. But the most important of them all is the Accuracy with which C.C.M. bicycles are built.

A C.C.M. is a beautiful piece of precision-built machinery down to the smallest detail. Particularly is this true of the main moving parts—the front hub, the rear hub, and the hanger to which the main sprocket, cranks and pedals are attached. These parts are carefully machined by precision tools and are closely tested for accuracy.

Thus the fast moving parts fit so accurately together and work with such sweet harmony that very little leg-power is required to make the C.C.M. move swiftly along the road. It's this amazing accuracy that is the secret of the C.C.M.'s smooth, quiet running, and the long life of its main working parts.

Even a small imperfection in the machining of a fast-working part, or a bearing that is not quite true, can set up a surprising amount of internal friction, which, if continued day after day, will shorten the life of the bicycle and make it harder to pedal. C.C.M.'s extreme accuracy in manufacture safe-guards against this.

Therefore, when you go to buy your bicycle look for the things that count. First for C.C.M. Accuracy. Then for C.C.M.'s Chromium plate over 20-year nickel; C.C.M. Frames of steel tubing; C.C.M.'s free-running Coaster Brake; C.C.M. Hanger; Dunlop Tires; and other famous C.C.M. features. Choose a bicycle that comes from the plant where Accuracy is the watchword of the institution. It's your assurance of long years of riding satisfaction.

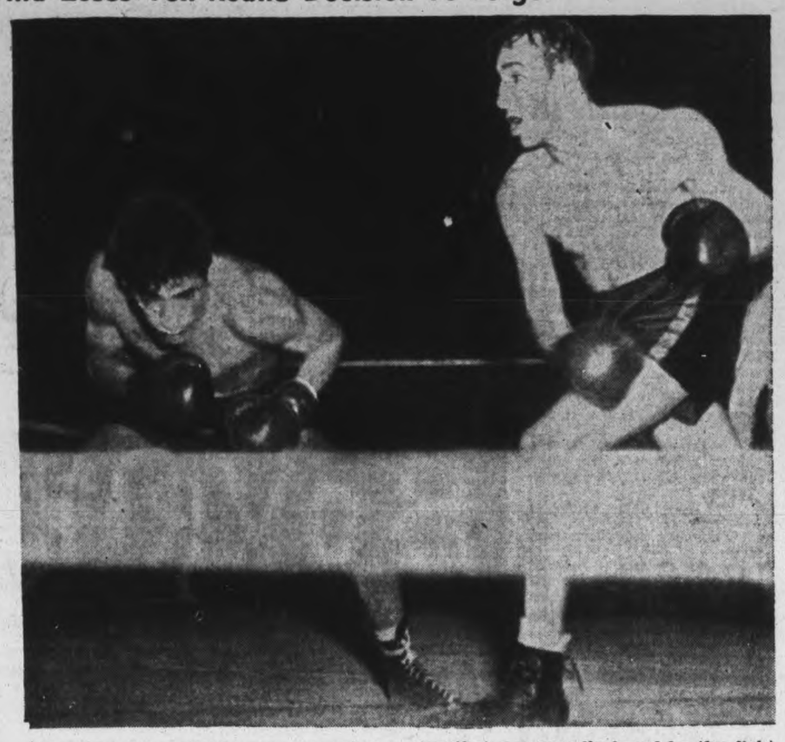
MONTREAL JUNIORS ELIMINATE OSHAWA FOR EASTERN LAURELS

Villa Loses Ten-Round Decision To Berger



Mauling Manuel Villa extended Maxie Berger, highly-favored Montreal welter star, when they met at Toronto. Berger had to go full out to win a 10-round decision that was roundly booed by the fight fans, although the official verdict was unanimous with the two judges and referee. Villa is shown as he ducked a fast one from Berger.

Generals Fade By 7 to 4 In Final Game

TORONTO, April 16 (CP)—Unless all the signs have been switched to point in the wrong direction, it seemed logiccal today to tie the tag—"team of destiny"—to Montreal Royals as a tribute to their ability in overcoming a bagful of handicaps to win the Eastern Canadian Junior hockey itle.

One of their first qualifications is that with a 7-4 victory here last night over Oshawa Generals they became the first team from Quebec province ever to reach the final for the Memorial Cup, which went into play in 1919. On top of that, however, they brushed aside sickness and injuries and the fact that they had to play all five games of their best-of-five series with the Generals on foreign ice.

The player who did the most to take the steam out of the Generals, winners of the Memorial Cup for the past two seasons, was goalie Ross Ritchie. The 17-year-old netminder wasn't beaten by an easy goal in the entire series and last night he rose to the heights to hold the Generals to four goals.

Two of those goals went to defenceman Frankie Eddolls of the Generals. Eddolls also helped in his team's other two scores by Ron Wilson and Stan Rooke and ran a close second to Ritchie for star honors. For Royals, Farmer and Carragher each scored two while Grant Morrison, Bill Southwick and Ken Mosdell got the others.

Ward Goes Out

Royals had piled up a 4-0 lead by the five-minute mark in the second period when seeming disaster struck. Defenceman Bruce Ward caught his skate in a rut just as Jim Conacher of the Generals crashed through the Royals' defence and limped off the ice with a badly sprained ankle. Ward's loss—he made only two brief appearances after that—disorganized Royals and the Generals ran in four straight goals to tie the score.

The Montrealers pulled themselves together late in the period to score while the Generals were shorthanded, and then put the game away in the final session when Farmer got his second tally halfway through the frame and Carragher marked up his second score in the final minute.

Royals arrived in Toronto by plane from Montreal only an hour and a half before game time. Coach Lorne White revealed that the trip took an hour longer than expected because the plane bucked a 65-mile-an-hour head wind. He said that only Farmer and Ward did not suffer from "air sickness" due to the "bumpy" trip. Royals took the same plane back to Montreal a few hours after the game.

Phil Marchildon Will Stay With Athletics

NEW YORK, April 16.—Phil Marchildon, a product of Ontario sandlots, will be given a thorough trial by the Philadelphia Athletics and there seems little chance that he will be returned to the Toronto Maple Leafs of the International League.

Connie Mack, venerable boss of the A's, figures on using Marchildon chiefly in "lost causes" this season, and there probably will be many of those with a team that's rated about the poorest in the league.

Brought up to Philadelphia after the close of the International League campaign last year, Marchildon is expected to survive the customary mid-May personnel pruning and remain with the A's throughout the season.

Mack said Marchildon, a right-hander, "has speed, but no control or finesse," but nevertheless has possibilities. He says he plans "using him in lost causes for experience."

Born in Penetanguishene, Ont., the 25-year-old hurler played his first ball there. He moved to Sudbury where he attracted the attention of scouts and was signed by the Leafs in 1939. He played part of that season with Cornwall in the Canadian-American League, but finished the season with the Leafs.

With Carl Fischer, Marchildon was the mainstay of the Toronto mound staff last year, a poor season for the Leafs who finished up in the cellar. He pitched in forty-one games for the Leafs and was credited in the records with winning ten and losing thirteen games.

He had an earned-run average of 3.16 and was third in the league in strikeouts, with 135. Indicative of his occasional lack of control, Marchildon gave the most bases on balls, 116.

Waner Is Out At The Plate

CAHA Revamps Speeds Up Transfer Rules

CALGARY, April 16—(CP).—The men who manage Canada's amateur hockey—now a major business with an annual turnover of more than $1,000,000—have reviewed the administration for the past year and laid plans for next year's operation.

The 27th annual convention of the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association which concluded yesterday made no radical changes, but it handled in the past four days numerous matters calculated to improve the administration of the Dominion's largest sport.

Major items decided by the convention included revision of regulations to speed up and clarify transfer of players and to provide that replacement of players lost through enlistments are made within certain time limits.

The most controversial debate of the open sessions arose out of a resolution that Jack Forsey, a Calgary product, should reimburse the Baltimore club of the Eastern United States Amateur League for $84 spent by the club in scouting and signing him.

Forsey signed an agreement last Fall to play for Baltimore, but soon after signed with the Cornwall (Ont.) Flyers. After many protests and counter-protests he was allowed to play with Cornwall this season. All the delegates agreed with the testimony that Forsey had not received any advances from Baltimore, but the club had incurred expenses in signing him.

The convention finally adopted a motion that Forsey should be forced to pay the nominal sum of $25 to the Baltimore club.

The Profit Split

Other important decision of the convention were that:

Profits made through playoffs in excess of the $30,000 budget should be split up with 75 per cent going to Senior and Junior clubs on a basis of the number of games each played in the playoffs and 25 per cent to war charities.

Managers or coaches who go on the ice without permission of the referee or strike an official will be automatically suspended and the case decided by branch officials. Officials are authorized to rule that such suspended managers or coaches cannot enter rinks.

Nearly $3,000 is to be divided among Senior, Junior, Juvenile, Midget and Bantam clubs according to their share in developing 20 players signed by professional clubs in the last year.

The Finance committee will study a request that travelling and hotel allowances for teams in playoffs be increased and that special grants be given to both visiting and home teams for each playoff game in which they participate.

For the 1941-42 season the 53-inch maximum for length of sticks would be continued.

There were no changes in the playing rules, but the C.A.H.A. will refer to the National Hockey League suggestions for new markings on ice surfaces.

Cards Beat Reds, Yanks, Indians Lose In Openers

By JUDSON BAILEY
(Associated Press Sports Writer.)

Opening day in the big leagues couldn't have been any more surprising if Judge Landis had shown up at one of the games in a high silk hat.

By now everybody ought to be ready to expect the unexpected from their baseball favorites the first few times out, but it's demanding a lot to ask anyone to foresee such wholesale carnage as seven games produced for 195,339 fans yesterday.

The world champion Cincinnati Reds were whipped 7-3 and Paul Derringer, their ace pitcher, knocked out of tht box by St. Louis Cardinals.

Bob Feller, whose no-hitter was the sensation of opening day last year, lasted only six innings against Chicago White Sox this time and Cleveland Indians were edged out 4-3.

New York Yankees, after getting a flying start at Washington Monday, were subdued 3-1 by Philadelphia Athletics with Lovill (Chubby) Dean pitching five-hit ball.

Brooklyn's cocky Dodgers were caught by New York Giants, who hopped on Whitlow Wyatt for a four-run rally in the eighth inning and won 6-4.

Phils Trounce Bees

Even the lowly Philadelphia Phillies participated in the surprise party, beating Boston Bees 6-5 on the four-hit hurling of Cy Blanton, an exile from Pittsburg.

The nearest approaches to form in the entire day were Chicago Cubs conquering Pittsburg 7-4 and Boston Red Sox squeezing past Washington Senators 7-6. And even these had their elements of surprise, as did the postponement of Detroit's opening at St. Louis because of rain after many fans already had gathered at the ball park.

With three exceptions pitching was not up to par yesterday and batters reaped a harvest of 133 hits including 14 home runs.

The day's best mound job was Chubby Dean's, who allowed only five hits and didn't let a Yankee get past second until the A's had the game in the bag in the ninth. He was helped considerably by a two-run homer by Sam Chapman.

Bill Dietrich gave a steady performance opposite Feller, allowing only seven hits and never being behind. Feller, however, was touched for five safeties in his six innings besides walking seven and hitting two batters.

34,940 See Reds Beaten

Gathering of 34,940 at Crosley Field watched the Reds raided by the Cardinals—who turned the trick with veterans instead of with the rookies they had ballyhooed all spring.

Johnny Mize, Enos Slaughter and Ernie Koy hit home runs, 32-year-old Lon Warneke, veteran of 10 years in the National League, pitched the whole route and spaced 10 hits, and Gus Mancuso, 35-year-old survivor of 11 big league seasons and five world series, caught for eight innings. The only fault showed by Warneke was serving up two home run balls to Frank McCormick, Cincinnati first baseman.

Brooklyn gave its 31,604 followers a premature thrill by taking a 4-0 lead in the first four innings when Hal Schumacher lost control and walked eight men. But young John Rucker put the Giants back in the running with a triple that scored two mates in the fifth and then in the eighth the Giants bunched five hits, two of them doubles, for the victory.

Cowley Awarded Harte Trophy

BOSTON, April 16 —(CP)—Bill Cowley, Boston Bruins' centre, last night was awarded the Dr. David A. Hart trophy for the most valuable player to his club. The Lady Byng trophy, awarded to the most sportsmanlike player, was given for the second year to Boston wingman Bobby Bauer.

Frank Calder, president of the National Hockey League, announced the awards at a Bruins' victory dinner at which the Stanley Cup was presented to the champions.

Calder said Aubrey (Dit) Clapper, Bruins captain, and Sylvanus Apps, Toronto centre, were close second and third, respectively, for the Hart trophy.

Cowley this year was named to The Canadian Pres all-star N.H.L. team while Bauer made the alternate team.

Sydney Champs Steaming West

MONTREAL, April 16 (CP)—For the first time since 1935 the banner of the Maritimes rode into the final for the Dominion's senior hockey crown—born proudly by a fighting band of Sydney Millionaires who grew better as the going got tougher.

The Millionaires won their way into the Allan Cup final against Regina Rangers, Western champions, by overpowering Montreal Royals, 8-3, here Monday night in the deciding game of their Eastern playoff. The victory climaxed a bitter series in which Sydney was always the underdog.

Stamping themselves worthy successors to the Martimes' great Moncton Hawks and Halifax Wolverines, who monopolized the Allan Cup from 1933-35, the Millionaires were once within a game of elimination in the best-of-five series. A great rally squared the series with an 8-5 victory Saturday night over the Quebec champions, however, and set the stage for last night's conclusive triumph before a crowd of about 9,000.

Jubilant over their victory, Sydney left yesterday for the West in their title quest that has kept them weeks away from home. The first game of their best-of-five final with Regina, who eliminated Lethbridge Maple Leafs to win the Western title, is scheduled for Saturday in Calgary.

Key figures in their concluding triumph over the Royals were four players trying for their second cup victory in two years. They were Defenseman Mel Snowden, back in action after a long injury siege, and the slim forward trio of Bobby Walton, Dick Kowcinak and Johnny McCreedy, all members of the champion Kirkland Lake Blue Devils of last season.

Canuck Hospital Kept Busy In Bomb Area

SOMEWHERE IN ENGLAND, April 16 (CP).—The newest Canadian hospital in England is firmly established in its area, caring for Canadian and British troops and civilian casualties from bombed industrial centres.

Manned by a Royal Canadian Army Medical Corps unit recruited in Montreal, it ranks with the finest military hospitals in the country. Already it has had its baptism of fire. Sunday, it was disclosed, it escaped without even a broken window when German night raiders viciously pounded a nearby urban district although 26 bombs fell in the immediate vicinity.

The staff of the hospital carried on smoothly through the raid. Half a dozen times bomb explosions rocked the hospital buildings. Many casualties were brought to the hospital from the city area.

The hospital is not as large or as elaborite as other Canadian hospitals in England but its work frequently is more varied and it is ready to look after nearly any kind of wounded war might bring to its doors.

The unit is unique in the R.C.A.M.C. in that it has organized a team of doctors, ready at all times to dash off to bombed towns in a certain area to give medical aid on the spot. Medical and surgical supplies for such expeditions are always in "blitz hampers."

The present team consists of Maj. Campbell Gardner of Montreal, Capt. Rocke Robertson of Vancouver and Capt. George Raymond of Charlottetown.

In rows of neat wood and metal buildings, medical officers and nurses, helped by other ranks, keep busy in the wards with the ordinary run of soldiers and civilian casualties. If invasion comes, it will be one of the most active base hospitals, and if Canadian troops move to foreign soil this unit stands a good chance of being chosen to follow troops.

Montreal Colonel in Charge.

The officer commanding is a Montreal colonel who served in the last war and who organized the unit from scratch. Matron Dorothy MacRae of Gould, Que., who was working in Iroquois Falls, Ont., before she joined the R.C.A.M.C., directs the nurses, aided by Nursing Sister N. B. Kennedy-Reid of Montreal.

The busy registrar is Maj. J. P. Laplante of Granby, Que., the quartermaster is Capt. D. A. Wanklyn of Montreal, the dispenser Lieut. H. H. Clark of Montreal, and the paymaster Capt. L. P. Beaubien of Montreal. Doctor-officers and nurses have been gathered from many parts of Canada.

Pride of the unit is its operating room in charge of the surgical chief, a Montreal colonel, assisted by Maj. S. J. Martin of Montreal and Maj. Gardner. In the room are four operating tables. Nearby is enough surgical equipment and dressings to keep this part of the hospital going day and night for weeks.

Much of the equipment is Canadian but one of the tables was salvaged by Maj. Gardner from the ruins of a manufacturing plant. The Canadian Red Cross has given thousands of dollars to the hospital and one single item is 20,000 surgical towels.

A colonel also is head of the medical division and his chief aide is Maj. H. S. Mitchell of Montreal. The ear, nose and throat patients receive attention from Maj. Jack Gerrie of Edmonton, brother of Fraser Gerrie, managing editor of the Edmonton Journal, and the eye specialist is Lieut. Bert Craig of Vancouver.

Maj. Andrew Turnbull of Victoria is the radiologist and other prominent young doctors are Capt. Phil Hill and Capt. Palmer Howard, both of Montreal; Maj. W. H. Mathews of Winnipeg, and Capt. James Shannon of Montreal.

Mexico contributed $468,502 of the $1,368,361 worth of silver received into the United States in a recent week.

Full Axis Army.

LONDON, April 16—(CP Cable).—British and Imperial forces in Libya are facing a "full size Nazi-Fascist army" with a total strength of between "60,000 and 80,000" men, a Daily Express military reporter wrote today.

He said an "authentic estimate" of enemy strength was two Panzer divisions of 800 tanks and 1,200 other vehicles with tractor-mounted guns, one German motorized infantry division, probably 200 Italian tanks, an Italian motorized division, numerous supply units, and from 800 to 1,000 airplanes.

The Daily Telegraph even suggested that Axis strength is "not less than three, and possibly more, armored divisions."

Egptian Cities Prepare

CAIRO, April 16—(AP). — The Axis plunge across North Africa, placing enemy bombers within striking distance of the Nile, has prompted Egypt's principal cities to speed air raids precaution works.

Cairo will undergo a full blackout and a raid rehearsal on April 19, it was announced today.

The city possibly escaped damage while the Italians were in Cyrenaica because Moslem authorities declared it sacred to all Islam, containing as it does many of Islam's most important and most sacred buildings and monuments. Mussolini at the time was calling himself the "Protector of Islam."

Workmen have labored day and night to complete 1,250 public shelters recently ordered by the Government.

Egyptians generally have recovered from the first anxiety caused by the sudden Axis drive across their border and a feeling of confidence prevails. Local stock exchanges, an accurate barometer of public feeling, recovered sharply yesterday.

(The master of the United States steamship West Munargo reported by wireless that his ship, when off Manzanillo, had been shaken by the 'quake and that a tremendous cloud of dust was seen to mushroom from the land).

First reports from Colima said numerous smaller towns around the city had been razed and that the forests in the area were "a roaring mass of flames." A radio message from an operator who identified himself as an amateur sending from Colima said at least 30 persons were dead.

President Manuel Avila Camacho ordered a group of doctors and nurses to leave for Colima by automobile during the night. Three squadrons of military planes were loaded with medical supplies and food for a dawn take-off.

No fatalities and only a few injuries were reported in Mexico City, where the quake lasted only 30 seconds. Most of the 1,7540,000 residents poured into the streets where pedestrians already knelt on the sidewalks to pray while windows shattered and bricks rained around them.

The five-storey Excelsior Building, where The Associated Press office is located, swayed so wildly that water sloshed into the streets from the storage tanks on its roof.

Volcano Ashes Shower City

GUADALAJARA, Mexico, April 16—(AP).—Railway passengers from the quake-stricken city of Colima reported today a considerable number of persons died in ruins of buildings in that city; many were injured, and lack of medical treatment would increase the death toll.

Ashes from erupting Colima volcano were showering the city, they said.

The passengers arrived here early this morning after a slow trip over damaged tracks from Colima, some 125 miles away.

Obituary

MARY CHARLOTTE THOMPSON

MILLBROOK, April 16—(ENS).—The death of Mary Charlotte Thomson, which took place at the Western Division of the Montreal General Hospital, on April 10, following a comparatively brief period of ill health, came as a great shock to her many friends of this community. Miss Thompson having, for several years, been a highly-respected resident of Millbrook.

Her father, Henry Huddlestone Thompson, was a captain in the English army, and one of the several English officers given grants of land in the vicinity of Rice Lake, Ontario, on condition that they would come to Canada, settle on the land and clear it for cultivation purposes. Captain Thompson married after arrival in this country, and the family consisted of four daughters, only one of whom, Mrs. Eva Young, of Montreal, still survives, and one son, Charles Thompson, who was well known in Millbrook, and for a number of years had charge of the local telephone office and switchboard.

The Thompson homestead, during residence here, was on Main street, and is now occupied by Delbert Sanderson. Previous to coming to Millbrook, Miss Thompson and her brother lived in Haliburton county, and after leaving this community they moved to Toronto, where Charlie Thompson's death took place. Later ,owing to failing health, Miss Mary Thompson went to Montreal, and made her home with her sister, Mrs. Young, continuing to reside there until her death last Thursday.

A lifelong Anglican, Miss Thompson was outstanding in devotion to her church and its organizations and undertakings; during the time that her home was in Haliburton county, in a sparsely-settled district, the Anglican church service was held in the large driving-shed of the farm, seats being improvised to accommodate the worshippers, until such time as finances and other considerations made it possible for a regular place of worship to be built.

Strong in her personality, well-read, and well-educated, Mary Thompson, by her outstanding spirit of neighborliness and helpfulness to others, made for herself a wide circle of friends, many of whom were to be found in the far corners of the globe. In her passing, a link with genuine pioneers days was broken, since it is probably well on to a century, perhaps a little over the 100-year's mark, since Captain Thompson settled at Rice Lake.

The funeral took place at 11 a.m. on Saturday, from the Comstock Funeral Parlors, Peterborough; interment being in the family burial-plot at Little Lake Cemetery.

Valentia Youth Shot Hunting

LINDSAY, April 16.—Victor Lane, 19-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Lane of Valentia, was rushed to the Ross Memorial Hospital yesterday afternoon, suffering from accidental gunshot wounds in his stomach.

Young Lane, who was hunting groundhogs, some distance from the house, spied one in an adjoining field, too far away to get a good shot. He started to climb over the fence, with the gun cocked, when his foot slipped.

The gun fell, and was discharged. Dr. Hall of Little Britain was called and found the lad bleeding profusely. His condition is serious.

MAIN STREET TOPICS

AIR FORCE

The Mobile Recruiting Unit of the Royal Canadian Air Force will be in Peterborough on Thursday, and applicants will be interviewed at the city hall, as in the past two months. Recruits to undergo radio mechanics' courses are desired, as well as others in the various specialized fields.

LOON LAKE CLEAR OF ICE

Dr. J. C. Smith of Apsley who was in town this morning reported that the ice has gone out of Loon Lake, one of the earliest break-ups on record in that district. Stoney and Rice Lakes, as well as Chemong, are also all free from their winter bondage.

NOT AT THAT ADDRESS

In a recent paragraph concerning a traffic accident it was stated that one of the drivers involved lived at 275 Reid street, the police report on the accident having that address. We have since learned that the driver does not live at 275 Reid street, but elsewhere in the city.

SNOW FENCE WHEAT

Farmers say that for the first time in their observations snow fencing has set back strips of fall wheat. Snow blowing over the fence during the winter formed drifts which remained after the rest of the wheat fields were clear and the frost gone from the ground. Growth of these strips of wheat has been only retarded. The crop as a whole is looking "splendid."

WOULD BUILD AT ONCE

A group of contractors estimated Tuesday night that they had prospective orders for fifteen houses costing from $3,000 to $3,500 if funds were available as they had been under the federal government's housing loans. Nearly all these equiries are from present employees of the Canadian General Electric Company.

FARMERS INVITED

Quoting departmental statement that pasturage is the most neglected crop in Ontario, F. C. Paterson, agricultural representative, is hoping that farmers will take Thursday evening off for an illustrated lecture on pasture improvement. He has received a new set of sides that tell the story of the importance of new pasturage, and the mistake of grass fields that are worn out and have become nothing more than "exercise fields." This meeting is for 8 o'clock standard time, Thursday night.

COMPLETING APPROACH

Completion of the western approach to the London street footbridge is on the way. Half of the work on the west side of the river is finished. It is likely that the final appearance of both approaches will be improved by the planting of trees. However, that is an after-thought.

NEED NEW "PRO"

Directors of the Peterborough Golf Club have to engage a new "pro." The annual meeting of the shareholders will be held this evening. A letter from the professional of last year brought the news that he would not be with the Peterborough club this season.

GRENFELL MISSION APPEAL

Again the Grenfell Mission appeals for funds to carry on this well known and heart-stirring work among the fisherfolk of Labrador and Newfoundland. These people are of the same British stock as Canadians and many of them have answered the call of the Motherland and are serving with the Royal Navy and the merchant marine. Their dependants need help and this can only come through the Grenfell Mission. Contributions may be sent to the treasurer, Mrs. G. R. Langley, 299 Burnham street or left at the Examiner office.

STURGEON LAKE OPEN

Reports from the Lindsay area indicate that the ice has gone out of Sturgeon Lake, much earlier than usual.

BICYCLE IS FOUND

Hidden under a bough near the southern edge of Jackson Park a small bicycle was discovered this morning and turned over to the police. The owner can claim the machine at the police station.

A NUDIST COMPLEX

Police at noon today arrested a couple of transients who apparently had been indulging in a rubbing alcohol debauch. A third member of the party who was said to have turned Dinsdale's wood yard into a nudist colony by taking off his clothes was being sought by the officers.

INVESTIGATION.

D. H. Seville, of the office of the Ontario Fire Marshal, has been in Peterborough investigating a fire of what has been described as "incendiary origin." Nothing has been reported upon the findings, but it is expected that a further announcement will be forthcoming.

ROBERT JAMES McCAMUS

Peacefully and serenely, on Good Friday, April 11, Robert J. McCamus, late of Keene, passed away, in his 90th year.

He was born in the township of Hope, February 14, 1852, the son of the late John McCamus and Elizabeth Armstrong. He moved to Keene when eight years of age.

Quickly learning the art of carpentry he followed that occupation, and he had much to do with the erection of many of the buildings in Otonabee, over a long span of years.

The opening of the Canadian West called to his self-reliant spirit and he spent a number of years in Winnipeg and other fast-growing Western towns.

Returning to Keene in 1899 he followed his occupation until the time of his death.

Mr. McCamus always was intensely interested in everything relating to his home locality. A good tenor singer he was a great help in his church choir. He trained and conducted a very pleasing light opera presentation which gave a very creditable performance. He was a member of the United Church of Canada.

The curling club can count him as one of their oldest members, and he played many a good and rousing game.

One of his great interests was Freemasonry, in which he was a prominent and well regarded member. He was initiated into Freemasonry in Keene Lodge No. 374 within a year of the founding of that lodge. He was elected Master of the Lodge in 1890, and re-elected on six subsequent occasions. The Masons of Peterborough district elected him to the office of District Deputy Grand Master, which office he filled with great dignity and distinction. He was also a member of Corinthian Chapter, Royal Arch Masons of Peterborough. He was well known throughout Peterborough district and will be missed by many.

The late Mr. McCamus never married, and he was the last remaining of four brothers and five sisters.

Gas Mask Check-Up In London

Regular checkups on gas masks are the order of the day in London. These office workers line up to pass through a gas chamber on a mobile gas van. British expect that Nazi planes may unloose gas bombs in a prelude to attempted invasion.

Saw German And Italian Internees Fighting To Get On Rescue Ship

With more experiences to relate than the average person has in a life-time, A. B. Joseph A. McDonnell, RCN, arrived home yesterday for a "spot of leave" after spending the past nine months on convoy duty around the British Isles.

McDonnell was aboard one of the first ships to reach the scene of the torpedoing of the S.S. Arandora Star; he passed through the English Channel during a rain of shells from the French coast; he saw a tanker with a cargo of gasoline on fire; on one occasion tock into tow a ship that had had its stern blown away and has seen many German planes brought down by the RAF or by ships.

About five hours after the sinking of the Arandora Star, McDonnell's ship arrived at the scene to find the Italian and German internees "fighting like cats and dogs in an effort to be rescued."

850 Men Saved

"When we arrived at the spot the sea was dotted with men," McDonnell related. "They were clinging to lifeboats, rafts and bits of wreckage, while others bobbed about in lifebelts. It was a gigantic task of rescue work, nearly 850 men being saved from a watery grave. Many were crazed with fear and numb with cold and could not have held out much longer."

"While the prisoners were grateful for being rescued, the animosity between the Germans and Italians was clearly apparent and numerous fights broke out among the two groups," he recounted.

During a trip through "the channel" McDonnell, who celebrated his 21st birthday last Thursday, related that they had been fired on by heavy guns from the French coast. "Our ships returned the fire immediately and for a time I was kept busy at the guns. Glancing up occasionally I could see shells hitting the water 30 or 40 yards away. But the Nazis were poor marksmen," he added.

One day they came across a torpedoed Blue Star ship, a small vessel containing a cargo and about 40 Chinese who were clinging to the wreckage. They were all saved and brought aboard.

Grateful Lot

"They were certainly a grateful lot," he said. "They showed their appreciation by doing a very thorough job of scrubbing aboard ship. They were the cleanest bunch I ever saw, they scrubbed everything spotlessly clean—and kept it that way."

He said that convoys his ship was guarding had not been attacked by enemy planes but on several occasions he had seen Nazi planes dropping from the skies the prey of RAF or guns from other ships in the vicinity.

After leaving St. Peter's High School he went to Halifax and joined as a seaman when he was 17 years of age. "It sure is good to be home again with my family and renew old acquaintances," McDonnell said. "I haven't been home since February, 1940, and I am going to have a good time before reporting back for duty next month."

Johnson Motors To Double Space

Outboard Marine & Manufacturing Company (Johnson Motors) has let the contract for the projected addition to their plant to Chestnut-McGregor Company, Toronto.

"The new building will be 100 feet by 112 feet," Hy Wood, plant superintendent, told the Examiner to-day. "It will just about double our factory floor space."

The contractors are expected to begin work within the next two weeks.

General Is Captured

NAIROBI, Kenya Colony, April 16—(AP).—The capture of Gen. Santini "who commanded the troops in Southern Juba," was announced today in a British communique. A Brigadier also was taken prisoner.

The communique said British troops had reached the Omo River, 106 miles southwest of Addis Ababa, while another column which bridged the Awash River moved south from Dama and occupied Aselli.

Material seized in Addis Ababa included about £10,000 ($44,500) worth of surveying equipment, the communique said.

2,500,000 Across Canada Soon Get Their Jobless Insurance Cards

Within the next two months nearly two-and-a-half million Canadian workmen earning $2,000 a year or less will be pasting a stamp each pay day in their jobless insurance books. Ottawa has given orders for the printing of 80,000,000 stamps required for the first year of operation under the unemployment insurance scheme.

The employer will buy the stamps from the government, then deduct from the employee's pay somewhat less than half the cost of the stamps. The books will be in the employer's keeping, but an employee may examine his book when he chooses, and when he leaves one place of employment he will take the book with him, and turn it in to his new employer. Thus there will be a continuous record of the employee's payments into the fund.

All workers earning $2,000 a year or less will come under the scheme except those engaged in agriculture, domestic service, logging, fishing, lumbering, air or water transportation, or stevedoring. Persons under 16 and workers earning less than 90 cents a day will not draw benefits, and will make no contribution, but their employers must contribute nine cents on their behalf, which is to be used to build up a fund against the day they earn more, or pass 16. Employees are divided into seven classes.

Weekly contrubition and benefit rates are as follows:

Earnings.	Employer.	Employee.	Benefit Single.	Benefit Married.
Under 16, or less than 90 cents daily	.09	..	.....	.....

Hastings, Warkworth And Campbellford Report $2,000 In War Services Drive

CAMPBELLFORD, April 16. — (ENS). — Officials of the War Services Fund drive in this vicinity reported the returns to be $2,000 at the beginning of the week. The objective was placed at $3,500, which includes Hastings, Warkworth, and Campbelford. It is thought the canvassers and team captains will put the returns well over the top before the drive closes.

Reports from the Industrial Committee totalled $1,000. "This proves the local factories have greatly supported the campaign," stated Adjutant K. Graham who is in charge of the drive here. Warkworth has contributed to the campaign $379.25.

Returns here have been fairly satisfactory in comparison with the short time canvassers have had in canvassing. Here the drive was assisted by the Salvation Army, the Canadian Legion, and the I.O.D.E. who organized to carry on the campaign work.

2,500 Persons Play Bingo At Armouries

As more than 2,500 Bingo players jammed the Peterborough Armoury on Tuesday night officers and men of the 4th Field Battery and the Prince of Wales Rangers attended to tables, their faces wreathed in smiles of gratification. The affair was a great success and more than 160 prizes were distributed in addition to the draw prizes. The winners of the grand prizes were as follows: The first prize, outboard motor, George Bishop, R.R. 5, Peterborough; second, a man's suit George Raynor, 284 Roger street; third, a carpet, K. Hetherington, Jackson avenue; and fourth, an electric mixer J. R. Chalmers, Douro street.

With the game scheduled for 8.00 p.m. the large armoury was crowded to capacity much before the alloted time, and as the evening wore on, the more faint-hearted left, new players poured in through the doors to take thir places. His Worship Mayor James Hamilton drew the winning tickets for the draw prizes at 11.00 p.m. and remarked that his duty was a pleasant one, especially as it was his birthday.

The Bingo prizes were varied, and many a laugh was afforded as chance placed ill-suited ones in the laps of players; Postmaster Charles Lacheur was the brunt of friendly jibes when he won a permanent wave, and Lieut. Alex Elliott won a set of ladies' undies.

Loud speakers had been installed and the voice of B.Q.M.S. Bob Hotrum could be heard throughout the building as he called out the numbers in the games. Tables had been placed on both balconies and in all of the company rooms until not another person could have been accommdated. Lt.-Col. M. H. Park of the Prince of Wales Rangers, and Capt. Bill Ackhurst of the 4th Field Battery were in charge of the distribution of the prizes from the platform.

The officers commanding both units expressed their gratification, on Tuesday night, at the response given the enterprise by both the public and merchants who had donated prizes. As all of the Bingo prizes were donated, and acknowledgement was made from the stand as they were presented. Col. J. A. Dewart, M.C., E.D. of the Prince of Wales Rangers, and Lt-Col. D. J. Lawrie of the 4th Field Battery, spoke words of thanks, and apologized to the merchants, who through lack of time had not been approached.

Roads Require Gravel Bed

While country roads are blowing up with the time bombs of winter, how is it that the roads in the city escape that kind of damage and expense to the municipality?

That question was asked of City Engineer Parsons this morning.

"We have several samples of bad roads that will compare with anything you find in the country," Mr. Parsons said. "One of them is the road north from Downer's Corners to Maria street, and the other is Albertus street, a boundary road from Charlotte street north to Weller street. Most of its upkeep is in the hands of North Monaghan. We put some oil on it, but that is about all. We haven't much road trouble, but what we have is just about tops.

The reason our roads in the city do not break up from the outgoing frost is simply that most of the city has a gravel base, and that means good natural drainage. That seems to me to be the entire explanation. It is not like clay and other soil types where the frost takes hold and does violence in most springs.

Moisture seeps through our gravel base, and it is dry when Spring is leaving us. That is why drainage is so important a consideration in the building of new roads."

Isolation Hospital Has 20 Patients

The number of patients in Queen Mary Hospital today is twenty, Dr. L. A. Clarke, M.O.H., informed the Examiner.

"We have some whooping cough, measles, scarlet fever and some German measles, and also one case of meningitis," he said.

Two meningitis patients have left the hospital, and Dr. Clarke added that in a few weeks these persons should be able to resume their usual affairs.

The death of a North Monaghan woman from meningitis was reported yesterday, followed by funeral today. Dr. Clarke said this was not the type of epidemic meningitis which was diagnosed in the several cases recently treated at the isolation hospital.

8,000 Prisoners

LONDON, April 16—(CP).—Five thousand Italian and 3,000 native African troops have been captured in Ethiopia since the fall of Addis Ababa, Reuters news agency reported today from the Ethiopian capital. An Italian General named Pesanti was listed among the prisoners.

War—25 Years Ago

Houses Built In Depression Now Worth More

The folks who built $2,500 houses for themselves with the Dominion Government's loan assistance during the last four years are owners today of properties which have acquired an increase in value of approximately $500. Unearned increment on various types of those post-depression period houses probably extends from $500 up to $1,000, according to their original costs. And the owners can shake hands with themselves any day on both their foresight and their promptness of decision. As might be said along the street, they knew a good thing when they saw it.

Since the government discontinued its housing loans, facing the Hunnish threat to strangle the British Empire, the average citizen with some money in his hands and a desire to build himself a house does not find the way to possession so smooth as did his neighbors who were alert to opportunity back in the years from 1936 to 1940.

From some enquiries about the meeting of builders and real estate men at the city hall tonight to obtain their opinions as to what course Peterborough should take in the present housing emergency, it seems to be a general opinion that if the Federal Government could restore the funding scheme there would probably be no need of setting up rows of cheap and temporary prefabricated dwellings.

Alderman Bradburn said today that it may be suggested to Gordon K. Fraser, M.P., that he urge upon the government the advisability of offering new building agreements increasing the $2,500 investment limits up to $3,500.

No $2,500 Houses

"Under the former plan, you could buy a lot from the city for $50 and borrow $2,500 from the government, getting 90 per cent of that loan in immediate funds, arrange to pay it back in twenty years, and in no time at all a man had a roof over his head and comfort around him," Alderman Bradburn said. "An important part of that plan was that a man could get up to 90 per cent of the loan to go ahead with at once. If he had three or four hundred dollars of his own money he had nothing to worry about.

From enquiries I have made it seems to me a man would need from $3,100 to $3,500 to undertake the building of a house today. That is not an exact figure, but it may be close enough to changed conditions to indicate what would be needed if the government would consider financial assistance in a new scheme that would provide permanent homes in centres like Peterborough where the demand has become acute."

Not only did some of those homebuilders of recent years get funds on exceedingly moderate terms, but they also received the further help from the government's additional contribution of assuming three years' municipal taxes.

Looking back at this opportunity which incidentally provided Peterborough with some hundreds of new dwellings, it seems that a lot of others missed the boat, like a certain gentleman at the city hall who is just realizing now that while advising a lot of citizens in how to apply for loans and get property he might just as well have helped himself to the same kind of cake.

Huntziger In Africa

VICHY, France, April 16—(AP) After two days, censorship permitted disclosure today that General Charles Huntziger, Minister of Defence, has gone to North Africa to confer with Gen. Maxime Weygand on "military questions."

Woman Is Guilty Of Forging Morphia Orders

Pleading guilty to two charges of having obtained morphia on forged prescriptions the wife of a Smith township farmer was allowed by Magistrate E. A. Gee in police court this morning to go on suspended sentence on paying the costs which amounted to $42.

The charges were laid by Constable K. M. Lockwood of the Cobourg detachment of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police who was called to give evidence after the woman who was defended by T. J. Carley, K.C., had entered a plea of guilty.

Constable Lockwood said in making the usual checkup of the sale of narcotics in Peterborough drug stores Constable Fred Morris of the Cobourg detachment, R.C.M.P., had discovered prescriptions in two different local drug stores that had obviously been altered in regard to the quantity of morphia prescribed.

On interviewing Dr. J. C. Smith of Apsley, the doctor in question, it had been discovered that the prescriptions had originally been for 25 tablets and the quantity in each case had been raised to 36 tablets. Subsequently the woman had admitted changing the figure on the prescriptions.

Probed Last Summer

Constable Lockwood said that an investigation had been made last summer as to the purchase of narcotics by the accused and it had been discovered that while the law forbade the procuring of drugs from more than one doctor during the same period, the woman had purchased drugs during the time investigated from Dr. J. C. Smith, Dr. Moore of Lakefield and Dr. Morgan of Peterborough.

"She was given a strict warning in September last," said Constable Lockwood, "that this practice must cease and I believe that she obeyed that warning. However in November we find these raised prescriptions."

Dr. Smith testified that the accused had been a patient of his for seven or eight years and was suffering severely from asthma. Morphia was one of the remedies that had been tried in her case, Dr. Smith stated. The prescriptions he had given her last November had obviously been altered, witness said. The additional Roman numerals added to change the total from 25 to 36 had been written in different ink and with another pen.

Mr. Carley in a plea for leniency said that the woman and her husband were decent farm folk with nothing against them. He pointed out that Dr. Smith who had been the woman's doctor for years and had formerly lived in Lakefield, close to her home had moved to Apsley and it was therefore more difficult for her to secure the prescriptions necessary for the purchase of the tablets. She had made the mistake of increasing the amount prescribed.

"The matter of suspended sentence is within Your Worship's jurisdiction," said Crown Attorney V. J. McElderry, K.C. "If you should see fit to make that disposition of the case I will not oppose it."

Magistrate Gee suspended sentence and the accused was ordered to pay the costs in the case.

Gadabout

By PRUNELLA WOOD

PERFECT for town or travel wear is this well-bred ensemble of smooth gray woollen coat and turban worn with a dress of gray and white printed silk. The slim, perfectly tailored coat has the important deeper armhole that marks most of this season's fashions, fastens at the waistline with a huge hook and eye, and is trimmed with a band of brown velvet on the pocket. The turban, made of the same material as the coat, is trimmed with a tailored brown velvet bow. Handbag and shoes also are brown.

Parents' Scout Auxiliary Meets

Mrs. C. Ashby, vice-president, was in the chair Tuesday evening for a meeting in All Saints' Parish Hall of the Parents' Auxiliary to the 5th Troop Boy Scouts, which opened with "O Canada" and The Lord's Prayer. A letter was read from Mrs. Adjutant N. Buckley inviting all members of the Auxiliary to a social evening to be held in the Salvation Army Hall on April 24 at eight o'clock, at which Mrs. Colonel J. Peacock of Toronto, president of the Canadian Red Shield Auxiliaries, will give first-hand information regarding the needs of the people of Britain. Her husband, Colonel Peacock, has just returned from an investigation of army needs overseas.

The May meeting is to take the form of a Parents' Night. A blackboard is being purchased for the use of the Boy Scouts and Cubs. Hostess teas for the past month have been held at the homes of Mrs. H. Graham, Mrs. W. Wiliford, Mrs. J. Adams, Mrs. W. Magee.

During the business meeting the chair was taken by Mrs. G. Webb for a short social program opening with the reading of the 46th Psalm by Mrs. O. W. Hurle. A vocal solo was given by Robert Hurrle, with piano accompaniment by Norman Hurrle; a reading on the life of Fanny Crosby, who, although blind from birth, wrote many of our best known hymns, was given by Mrs. Webb. Two well rendered piano solos were presented by Norman Hurrle; a reading was given on the ideals of the Union Jack in comparison with the symbols of the Nazi flag. Refreshments were served after the meeting by Mrs. G. Webb and Mrs. Mrs. O. W. Hurrle.

Elizabeth Parker Group To Sponsor Organ Recital

The Elizabeth Parker Auxiliary May meeting opened with the call to worship and the Easter Poem, "Thirty-three Years," quoted by Mrs. Roy Brown. The devotional period was followed by the Easter Thankoffering, which was consecrated by prayer led by Mrs. Wilma Frost. Mrs. A. B. Cunningham gave an interesting report of the annual Ontario Temperance Federation held in London, Ont., in March.

The life and work of Mary Slessor during her noble thirty-nine years as a missionary in Africa was presented by Miss Anne Jamieson. An appropriate Easter solo was sung by Miss Greta Giles. Final plans were made for the organ recital which Kathleen Stokes of Toronto is presenting in Trinity church on Wednesday evening, April 23rd. Three handsome afghans made by the members of the Auxiliary were on display, and enough blocks to make two more were brought in. Tea was served after the meeting.

Peterboro Welsh Folk Attend Toronto Festival

A outstanding event in the life of the Welsh Society was held on Good Friday, when members of the Peterborough group journeyed by bus to Toronto to take part in the "Gymanfa Ganu," the "Festival for Sacred Song." This is a Welsh institution, and is expressive of the soul of the Welsh people. It is four-part congregational singing of hymns and anthems that are published in book form especially for use at the Gymanfa Ganu.

The Sant Dewi Welsh Church in Toronto where the event took place was crowded to the doors with Welsh folk from Niagara Falls, Welland, Buffalo, St. Catharines and Peterborough, as well as the Toronto group who arranged the affair. Never were the old Welsh hymns sung with a deeper fervor, and it was one of the most thrilling musical events in which local Welsh folk have taken part in for some time. The ladies of the Toronto group served supper to upward of two hundred persons in the church basement at five o'clock, and the Gymanfa was held in the church at seven-thirty p.m.

Lakefield Girl Wed In Toronto

Rev. David A. MacLennan officiated at Timothy Eaton Memorial Chapel for the quiet marriage of Miss Thelma Louise Hendren, second daughter of Mrs. Hendren and the late A. Hendren of Lakefield, to Mr. Lloyd S. Johnson, son of Mrs. Johnson and the late Robert Gilmour Johnson of Enniskillen.

The bride was given in marriage by her brother, Mr. Gordon Hendren of Toronto. She wore a beige ensemble, with deep brown accessories and corsage of yellow roses. Mr. John Johnson was groomsman for his brother.

The reception was held at the home of the bride's aunt, Mrs. John Stokes, Metcalfe street, formerly of Kirkland Lake. Mr. Johnson and his bride will live in Toronto.

Unusual Display Highlights Antique Tea

A cavalry officers' uniform once worn in India, complete with plumed dress hat and the Bengal's staff corps cane, and a lovely wedding dress with matching slippers worn in the 1600's by an ancestor of the hostess, were highlights of the display of antiques shown Tuesday afternoon at a tea held by the Senior W.A. of St. John's Church at the home of Mrs. H. C. Sootheran, 455 Gilmour street. Included also in the group of heirlooms were lovely Sheffield china pieces, interesting jewelry, several lustre jugs grown even more precious since the process of manufacture has become lost, silk and wool samplers, and a collection of antique silverware.

Mrs. W. M. Cruthers, W.A. president, received with Mrs. Sootheran, and living room hostesses, Mrs. A. E. Kelsey, Mrs. A. Townsend, Mrs. F. Ford and Mrs. W. Turner, were in quaint old-fashioned costumes, two of which were worn in England over a century ago.

Mrs. G. S. Cameron and Miss M. English poured tea, and guests were shown to the tea room by Mrs. B. Wardle and Mrs. J. Knight. Mrs. D. J. Eldred was in charge of refreshments, assisted by Mrs. E. Nicholls, Mrs. R. Cooper and Mrs. E. Graham. Silver candelabra and an old-fashioned silver comport filled with fruit were effective on the tea table. Mrs. G. Groombridge and Mrs. J. H. Gamble were in charge of the home-cooking table, and Mrs. D. W. Falkner was treasurer for the afternoon.

Vera May Plant Weds W. Frank Hatcher

WARKWORTH, April 16—(ENS).—A pretty wedding took place on Monday, April 14, at twelve o'clock noon, at the United Church parsonage, Norham, in the presence of 20 guests when Vera May Plant, daughter of Rev. The ceremony was performed in the living-room under an arch decorated in white. Her father, Rev. James A. Plant, officiated. He was assisted by Rev. F. Horton of Peterborough.

Miss Muriel Arkles of Colborne played the wedding music.

The bridesmaid was Miss Doris Horton of Peterborough. She wore a dress of rust crepe with a corsage of roses. The best man was Mr. Gerald McAllister, Norham.

Following the ceremony the guests repaired to the dining-room where a dainty buffet luncheon was served. The table was attractive with pink candles in silver holders and centre of pink carnations.

Mrs. John Diamond was hostess. The waitresses were Misses Jeanne Diamond, Velma Peterson, and Dorothy Laver.

Later the happy couple left by motor for Toronto and other Western points. For travelling the bride wore a dusty pink dress and hat, with navy coat and matching accessories.

For Thursday, April 17 ... .

Under planetary positions of force and energy this should be a day of initiative and enterprise in which there may be a very direct attack upon new projects as well as static situations. The mind will be keyed to high purpose with quick insight as to the most dynamic methods for putting over important projects, and with personal skill and determination rather than through co-operation of others.

Those whose birthday it is may be confronted by a year in which there will be energy, purpose and resolution for pushing important matters to high goals of accomplishment. The forces and spirit of initiative will be spurred to direct and dynamic action, with the mentality quickened to grasp most progressive and effective ways and means for attaining cherished ends.

A child born on this day should be bold, audacious and ambitious, with an unconquerable and determined spirit of enterprise. This should manifest in a cultural, professional or emotional direction.

PLAIN LITTLE "MRS. SMITH" IS GREATEST OF ALL WOMEN

History May Have Recorded Many Glamorous Women, but None of Them Surpasses the Unsung Homemakers of Today.

A group of high school girls asks me who is my favorite heroine. Ah, that's a hard question to answer. There have been so many great women through all the ages who are to be revered for so many different reasons that I have never known which one I admired most. There are, just to name a few, Boadicea and Semiramis fighting to defend their countries and leading their armies to victory; Cleopatra, the glamor girl of all time; Elizabeth and Victoria, the stateswomen under whose reigns England reached its peaks of glory; Joan of Arc, with her dreams and her martyrdom; Mollie Pitcher firing her gun against the Red Coats; Florence Nightingale, the ministering angel of modern nursing; Clara Barton, who founded the Red Cross; Frances Willard, who fought the demon rum to a standstill; Carrie Chapman Catt and Anna Shaw and Susan B. Anthony, who gave suffrage to women; Madam Curie, who with her husband discovered radium; scores of women writers and artists and musicians who have added to the sweetness and light of the world. Great gals, all, I take off my hat to each and every one of them, and thank them for benefits received. But, aside from these great ones, there are three smaller heroines who get little acclaim from the world at large, but who are the object of my own particular, private reverence. The first of these is Eve who, it seems to me, has got her just deserts because of that apple-eating episode. True, she got fired out of Eden, but think of the compensations she brought us! Consider her record of achievements. She was the first human being ever to crave knowledge. She was the first person on earth ever to rise above the fatuous complacency of wanting to know more than they knew. She was the first original investigator, and so she was the pioneer of all the scientists and inventors and adventurers who, like her, have risked Paradise to find out what made the wheels go round.

Eve Had Her Good Points

Eve also bestowed two other benefactions on her sons and daughters. To women she gave clothes, which from their greatest-grandmother's time down to the present minute has been their chief preoccupation, an excitement whose thrill never staled, a pursuit in which they never wearied, a consolation that never failed in times of trouble and a topic of conversation that never wore out.

And to men she gave the one perfect, unassailable alibi for all of their sins of omission and commission: the woman thou gavest me, SHE did it.

My second dearly beloved heroine is Scheherazade, who discovered the one unfailing recipe for holding a husband and keeping him eating out of your hand.

Plain Little Mrs. Smith

It is to keep him guessing. To keep him wondering what's coming next. To keep him interested and amused, for no man ever wearies of the woman who always has a good story on her lips and a new trick up her sleeve to pull on him. Scheherazade deserves to be the patron saint of all wives.

But, in reality, and all jesting aside, my favorite heroine and the woman I honor above all other women is plain little Mrs. Smith who lives just around the corner and who is doing nothing more spectacular than just making a home and bringing up a family.

She is a frail little creature who toils beyond her strength every day in cooking and washing and sewing and patching and caring for her husband and children and a fretful old invalided mother.

I don't suppose she knows what it is not to be tired, but she never sits down to rest. She never has a nice dress, for all the money goes to buy the children fancy sweaters and coats and hats, such as the other children have. Besides, she is pinching and saving and scraping to send Johnny off to college and give Mamie music lessons.

When holidays come and his husband and children go off to picnics and excursions, she works twice as hard pressing dresses and putting up lunches and getting them off, but she stays at home to take care of mother.

Always On the Job

Mrs. Smith never complains. She is always cheerful and thinks herself lucky to have such a good husband and such fine children to slave for. If you told her she was a saint and a martyr, she would laugh and say that she only did her duty. She doesn't even know that it takes more courage to fight the daily battle of life with adverse circumstances than it does to lead a charge on a battlefield.

Mrs. Smith is just the ordinary woman, but she is my heroine. And I hope she will be yours, girls.

ANTHONY'S BIG IDEA

CHAPTER XVIII

"I didn't know she bought her boy-friend polo ponies," Bee said in a low voice. "Who told you that?"

Anthony's eyes avoided hers. His lips tightened, and he answered hurriedly, "Oh, I heard it somewhere."

But Beatrice wasn't satisfied. "Where would you possibly have heard it?" she persisted. "It isn't the sort of thing that would be mentioned in the papers. At least—" she caught herself—"at least, I didn't see it in any gossip column, or anything like that."

Anthony said uncomfortable, "I don't remember where I heard it. Maybe she didn't buy him polo ponies. What earthly difference does it make to us?"

"None, of course." She lifted her coffee cup. "What time do you have to be in class?"

"Eight-thirty. We still have an hour." He leaned across the table, and the fleeting uneasiness between them was gone. "Listen, Bee, I had a brainstorm today. It was so busy, I kept hearing the girls saying 'I wish she'd make up her mind!' and suddenly, out of the blue, I got this idea."

"What idea?"

"Well, you remember those things you said about helping customers choose the proper clothes? Today, one after another, I heard women

Joe, Paris Crow Tops Thieving With False Teeth

PARIS, Ont., April 16—(CP). — Joe, a year-old Paris crow, really felt he had something to crow about today after getting away with his most spectacular theft to date—a set of false teeth.

His particular specialty—until yesterday—was stealing windshield wipers from parked cars.

Yesterday he really outdid himself and stole the set of teeth, owned by a workman, from a tumbler in the Penman's Mill here. After nabbing his loot Joe headed for the Grand River, where, it is presumed, he dropped the teeth.

Joe has only been trapped once, and then by himself. One day he got into the laboratory at the High School and knocked himself out with chemical fumes. He was found, taken into the air and was his usual self before long.

Joe might have been overseas with his owner, Sgt.-Gnr. Art Shaw of the Royal Canadian Air Force, but for the fact he is such a thief. Shaw couldn't take a chance with Joe up to his tricks.

Turk-Red Parley

Istanbul, Turkey, April 14 (Delayed)—(AP)

POLITICAL talks of an undisclosed nature were reported under way tonight between Soviet Russia and Turkey.

The talks were understood to be in progress at Ankara, Turkey's capital.

Turkish reaction to the new Japanese - Soviet neutrality pact meanwhile was that "it is of direct concern to Germany."

With the Balkan war beating at Turkey's door, foreign circles heard that a delegation would arrive from Iraq shortly to discuss relations of that country's new government with its Turkish allies.

Ship Launching Costs Girl Life

SHELBURNE, N.S., April 16.—(CP)—One person was killed and several injured when a fishing schooner toppled from her cradle during launching ceremonies here yesterday.

Vanetta Atkins, 13-year-old Shelburne girl, died of a fractured skull while being taken to hospital at Bridgewater in an ambulance. She was struck by a falling eight-inch timber upright.

The 132-foot banker had just begun to move down the skidways when she crunched through her cradle and toppled on her side. More than half a dozen of the 100 persons who lined her decks were tossed over her side into the water as scores clung to the rail after sliding down the angled deck.

Terror-stricken spectators and workmen scrambled for safety as the vessel fell. A sand bank prevented her from falling further and crushing several persons.

Edward Johnson, 19, plunged fully clothed into the water between the schooner and wharf to rescue 5-year-old Terry Young. The child was one of those thrown over the rail when the vessel fell.

Many other persons suffered minor cuts and bruises.

The vessel had been christened Eileen C. Macdonald by Senator William Duff of Lunenburg just before the accident. She was built as an addition to the Lunenburg fishing fleet.

Forerunner Of Mighty U. S. Tank Fleet

Forerunners of might tank fleets soon to roll from production lines, 'pilot models' of the U.S. army's new M3 medium and M3 light tanks roared across Aberdeen proving grounds. The formidable monsters were shown off before more than 100 members on to the rearmament scene in a demonstration. The tanks are capable of a sustained speed of more than 25 miles per hour, mount one cannon and five machine-guns. Weight of the M3 medium is 25 tons and the light M3 weighs 13½ tons. Wales Was Ready When Nazis Dropped Flames

By DOUGLAS AMARON
(Canadian Press Staff Writer.)

CARDIFF, March 16 (By Mail) — (CP). — Wise in the ways of German bombers, the people of South Wales went the limit in preparing to meet the menace of air raids.

The busy Bristol Channel ports of Cardiff and Swansea, where great ocean liners still load and unload and factories turn out munitions for Britain's war effort, suffered much from bombing, but damage might have been far greater had it not been for the way in which people were able to counter each attack as it came.

Cardiff's civil defence services, which officials here term the finest in the country, are the result of careful planning and constant training. They typify the way the people, not only in South Wales, but everywhere in Britain, are combatting effect of air raids. The first bombs fell in Cardiff last June 20, and until September when the big attacks began on London, there were more alerts here than in any other city in the United Kingdom.

Fire services, a major part of every civil defence organization, received their first real test in mid-September when a big blaze started in a cold storage plant. Firemen were on duty more than 12 hours and saved 90 per cent. of £500,000 ($2,225,000) worth of food. The greatest task for the services came on March 3 when bombers subjected Cardiff to the fiercest incendiary bomb attack any city outside London has received. More than 140 blazes started, a score of major proportion, but all were under control before the blackout ended.

Fire Services.

To combat fire, Cardiff has 50 men in the regular brigade, 250 paid Auxiliary Fire Service men, and 600 volunteers who give their services three night a week and put in as much as 100 hours a month. More than 300 volunteers turned out on March 3.

Chief Constable James Wilson, who also heads the fire services, is proud of his men's work and of the organization he developed during 20 years in office. A policeman for 42 years, Wilson wanted to retire to the quieter occupation of a criminal lawyer, but when war came he decided his place was with the police and firemen and postponed his legal plans.

Much of Cardiff's fire-prevention organization was his idea. He started the system, since adopted by most British cities, of placing sandbags for incendiaries at the foot of every lamp-post. Cardiff, too, was the first city to equip its buses and trams with fire-fighting equipment.

The fire service has its own wireless system, which Wilson says has been instrumental in saving lives and lessening damage. Extra equipment and ambulances can be summoned without delay and much valuable time is gained.

Air Raid Precautions work in Cardiff is almost entirely voluntary and there are more ARP workers per capita here than in any other British city. The Home Office authorized establishment of 2,180 men and 545 women wardens of which 400 may be paid, but Cardiff has 6,500 wardens and only 23 receive remuneration.

Every street is organized for ARP work and a thorough fire-fighting system has been evolved, making it almost impossible for a fire-bomb to land unnoticed. "There are usually a half-dozen people ready to hop on every incendiary," the chief said.

Give Their Lives.

Firemen and ARP workers have given their lives in service at home and in neighboring Welsh towns, but there are always a dozen volunteers ready to fill a vacant place.

Typical of these civilian heroes was Frank Gaccon, motor-engineer and insurance assessor, who sacrificed his business to join the fire-fighting services. Commandant of the AFS, he was killed by a high-explosive bomb on his way to fight his sixth blaze of the night. "We can ill afford to lose workers like Gaccon, as brave a man as ever fought a battle," Wilson said. "But I can assure you no matter how many men we lose, there are others eager to take their place, and if Hitler hopes to break us down this way he's a goner."

saying, 'But I don't know if it'll go with my hat!'—things like that. I never really paid a great deal of attention to the selling angle before, but since that talking-to you gave me about customers benefiting by a salesgirl's opinion . . . "

"You're just trying to ring me in on this idea of yours. You're trying to give me some credit for it, beforehand, if it's good."

"No, I'm not. I'm trying to get some help from you. Because we'll both have to work on this."

"Tell me about it, quickly."

"The departments upstairs—the College Shops and Young Sophisticate and the Little Shop and even the Salon have a stylist, don't they? That sort of service comes much too high for a basement department. But suppose, Bee—here's the big idea, so listen—suppose in Budget Fashions we had ready-assembled costumes?

"I don't mean simply displaying a hat, some gloves and a handbag together, near a dress, the way things are displayed in show windows. I mean that we could have a regular accessory section. Each item would be keyed to a dress, or to several dresses, in stock.

"Instead of a salesgirl advising the customer, as you tried to do, all sales would be co-ordinated. In other words, automatically, as a matter of policy, a salesgirl would show hat, bag, extra belts, collars —whatever it happened to be — every time she showed a dress. There could be some line about, 'Of course you're not obliged to buy these, but it does give you an idea of how much you can do with this one dress.'

"I think it would make sales easier to close, and certainly the customer who isn't good on seeing the possibilities of a dress would find shopping easier."

He was talking rapidly and enthusiastically, his whole face animated.

"From the merchandising angle, we'd turn over double or triple the accessory goods we do now. Of course, we'd have to see that items from different manufacturers were all keyed in color and style to harmonize or complement each other. We'd have to co-ordinate our buying in some way to have every item fit in with every other as far as style, quality and finish go.

"And the prices, too. You can't sell a $5 hat to match a $4 dress. But all that's pure mechanics. The idea of ensembled sales, ensembled showing, ensembled fitting and an ensembled technique throughout Budget Fashions is the thing. Bee, I'm sure, if they'd let us experiment in a small way, we could prove the idea's valuable!"

"Anthony, it sounds wonderful!"

She remembered all the fretful customers whom she hadn't been able to convince simply by telling them about the collars and belts that would liven up a basically good dress.

"It's so practical, too, because it's simple. You show a woman a dress. You get the hat, the belt, the collar and show her that. That's demonstration. She can see the effect for herself. Why, it's marvellous! I'm sure sales will simply soar.

"And you know what else, Anthony? All those 'busy' little numbers, with cheap clips, too many buttons, extra ruffles that give me the creeps, will go right out the window. When a girl sees that a dress like that can't be varied — when she's got it right up against another dress that's perfectly ensembled with accessories—she'll drop it like a hot cake. We won't have to educate the customers. They'll educate themselves, just by using their eyes."

"You've got it in for Dane," he laughed. "Those dressed up dresses are the pride of her life. She thinks she's giving the customers extra value with every extra paste clip."

Beatrice had no time for Dane now. "Who do you speak to about this magnificent idea? Oh, Anthony, I can just see it! The special ads—'Good Taste Guaranteed at Huntington's. No matter how little you spend, you can look a million in Huntington's co-ordinated clothes.'"

"You should be writing ads," said Anthony. "There's more money in that."

"Whom do you speak to about this? The merchandise manager, or is this a matter for Bruce Sheldrake himself?"

"Sheldrake? He doesn't interest himself in stuff like this! Sheldrake manages the big money, after the sales are made. He appears at luncheons, too, of course."

"But I thought a general superintendent had his fingers on every pulse of a store."

"This is no pulse. It's only an impulse."

Beatrice wrinkled her nose at him. "Very poor, Mr. Bradley, very poor."

The idea had taken hold of her. "You must assemble some samples, first, Anthony. Telling about a thing is never as convincing as showing it, concretely." She glared at him. "And don't tell me the merchandise is rayon, not cement! For instance, tomorrow morning you should get hold of a navy blue crepe with a high neck. I noticed today. It's $3.89. Almost any accessories at all from the main floor would go with that. A chunky gold necklace, maybe a navy blue calf bag —I've seen one with a little gilt clasp that's only a dollar—"

"Gosh, Bee, you really sound as if you like the idea. Will you help me? It's right up your alley. You have such perfect taste. I might make a mess of what I picked and the whole thing would flop. You know, I'm no fashion expert.

"It's the idea of selling more things, more quickly, with more service to the customer that I dreamed up. But actual details of what particular dresses—" He spread his hands, helplessly.

Beatrice said dryly, "You have all the equipment for a first class executive, Anthony. Let the other fellow do the work. But—" Her eyes shone, "I'd love to. Now you run along to school, and I'll make a tour of show windows on Fifth Avenue."

Children's Aid Society Official Finds Children Alone At Night

With the coming of Spring and long evenings, both adults and children are answering the call to out-of-doors, with a resultant increase in responsibility for the staff of the Children's Aid Society. Twice during the past week there have been reports of children having been left alone, and visits at ten-thirty and eleven-thirty at night to these homes revealed the complaints to be justified. "Is the case of children necessitating parents remaining at home many evenings becoming a drudgery, or why are we facing what appears to be an increasing number who seem to be looking for thrills outside their own home, and leaving their children to care for themselves?" was a question asked by Miss Rachael Young at the monthly Board meeting Tuesday afternoon during the presentation of the March report.

Problems presented during the month were in connection with immorality, poor housing, poor budgeting, illegitimacy, drinking, insufficient income, theft, children without supervision, and lack of training. Twenty-eight families were referred to the society during the month by the Dependents' Allowance Board, relatives, other societies, friends, minister, employer, police, neighbors, the V.O.N., and by the people themselves.

47 Additional Families

Insistence by the society that a child who came to its attention during the month receive medical care has revealed a very serious condition which will need intense and long-time care. The parents, aware of some condition for a considerable time, had made no effort to see that the child got medical attention. One boy received special boots and braces through the Rotary Club. These situations are in connection with two out of the 172 families in which the society is interested—an increase of 47 over March, 1940. One child was brought before the magistrate under the Children's Protection Act, but returned to his parents by the Magistrate, who felt that the evidence did not justify wardship.

One child was placed for adoption and five adoptions completed during the month. "It is a source of satisfaction that every ward but one, who is in another county, had the opportunity for a physical examination," Miss Young stated. All but three availed themselves of this opportunity, and the doctor's recommendations were carried out. Although it is not easy to arrange for dental care in the country, nine children received the care of a dentist and all necessary work was done.

110 In Care of Society

Of the 110 children in the care of the society, 5 are in the Shelter; 30 in boarding homes; 33, of which 16 are working, in free homes; 25 on adoption probation; 9 in other institutions, and 8 are British war guests. There is a decrease of 3 in all under the care of the Society as compared with March, 1940, and 3 less in pay care than one year ago. Four were referred to the C.A.S under the Unmarried Parents' section, 3 having been unknown to the society before. The society has now an interest in 69 cases as compared with 59 in March, 1940.

Appreciation of the confidence placed in Children's Aid Societies by the Dominion Government in being asked to do certain war work was expressed by the local superintendent. "We may again face the planning for British child guests," she said. "This is all in addition to our regular work. Our shoulders will be broad enough for the task only if each one of us is willing to "go the second mile."

Chicago Editor Shot To Death

CHICAGO, April 16 — (AP). — John F. Arena, 43, editor of an Italian language newspaper, was shot to death on a northside street last night after leaving a movie with a girl companion.

Police Capt. Patrick O'Connell expressed the belief to-day that Arena was killed because of his "publishing activities."

He was editor and publisher of La Tribuna, a newspaper he founded after serving as editor of L'Italia, a tri-weekly.

Arena, who claimed noble birth, recently conducted an editorial campaign against what he termed "fifth column" activities of persons in official Italian circles here.

His wife, Dorothy, 32, told the police that he had received numerous telephone threats from anonymous callers who warned him to 'change the tone of his editorials."

The slayer accosted Arena as he was about to enter his parked car with Miss Eleanor Herrmeyer, 17. The assassin called attention to a flat tire and when Arena stepped to the front of the car he was shot twice with a pistol. The slayer escaped in an automobile driven by an accomplice.

Miss Herrmeyer, a dramatic soprano, described herself as a protege of the slain man. She said that he had helped her with music and voice studies.

Miss Herrmeyer told the police that she was in Arena's office two months ago when he received a telephone call from New York. When he hung up, she said, he commented: "I'll have to get a bullet-proof vest, I guess."

Arena explained, she said, that the call was from an Italian official who told him to stop writing certain articles in his paper.

Arena became an American citizen six months ago. At that time he announced he was relinquishing his title of Marchese.

Fun to Learn the Piano in This Short-Cut Way

Please With Favorite Airs

What a change in a girl's social life when she teaches herself to play the piano! Instead of being just "one of those present," she's the star of the party—delighting old friends and winning new ones.

And you can teach yourself to play, by a short-cut method which makes it easy to read music and master the piano keyboard.

You have a "life-size" chart of the part of the piano most frequently used. With each pictured key is the note which is its symbol on the music staff. When you place this chart behind your keyboard, you see at a glance which key to strike for each note.

You see too that, huge though the keyboard may look, the same 12 black and white keys are repeated throughout its length. Our diagram shows you these 12 keys, starting at Middle C and continuing to the next C in what is called an octave. Learn this simple octave, both keys and notes, and you've taken the first big step in playing the piano.

Other steps are as simple; in no time you are playing your favorite pieces. Our 24-page instruction book includes the keyboard chart; explains chords and elements of music; gives the music of popular tunes for practice.

Send 15c in coins or stamps for your copy of QUICK COURSE IN PIANO PLAYING to Home Service, the Examiner, Peterborough. Be sure to write plainly your NAME ADDRESS, and the NAME of instruction book.

"The Authority on Authorities"

AN EARLY TRUMP COUP

WHEN YOU don't possess enough trumps in one hand to lead them often enough through a defender's tenace holding toward your own tenace, you can sometimes capture his honor or honors by finishing the hand with a lead of some other suit through him. If he has to ruff before you, whatever he plays can be covered by your trumps. That is what is usually called a "trump coup." It is rare enough at best, but when it does come it is nearly always right at the end of the hand, when no other suit cards remain in his hand and your own master hand. But it can come earlier.

West's double was based more on the bidding than anything else on the fact that the opponents tried to pass it out at just 2-Spades and later went higher. The deal may be played several ways, but what actually happened was worth seeing. Hard put for a good lead, West led the 4 of the diamonds which East had supported. North played the 6, East the 8 and South the 9 to make it clear to West he had the two higher ones. That might make West read him for a club singleton, which he did when the 3 was led, as he came in with his A, then returned the heart 7 to the A and East fired back the heart 2 to the K.

Then South really went to work. He led the spade 2 to the K, club 6 to the Q, heart 4 to East's Q and took the returned spade 8 with dummy's Q. Notice now that dummy still holds two small spades, the diamond Q and the club K-8. South his two highest spades, heart 6 and diamond A-J. West has the diamond K-10 and three clubs, and East the spade J-9, heart 9 and diamond 8-5.

If declarer leads a trump from dummy, he can never get rid of both of his red losers. But he led the club K. East was cooked. If he ruffed, South would over-ruff, then ruff the heart in dummy, return to the diamond A, ruff the diamond J in dummy and have the high trump for the last trick. If he trashed a heart, so would South, who would then take the trump finesse, lead to the diamond A, ruff the J and have the spade A for the last trick. So East threw a diamond. South did likewise, took the trump finesse, cashed the diamond A, ruffed the heart and had the trump A for the final trick. It was a fancy trump coup on the ninth trick.

If South gets into 5-Spades, is doubled by East and then redoubles, how should he play this deal after West leads the heart 10?

BC Club Canteen Serves 5,000 Meals Weekly

LONDON, April 16 (CP)—From Snack Bar to full-sized restaurant in a year is the story of the British Columbia Services Club Canteen.

W. A. McAdam, British Columbia's acting agent-general in London, thought he was on the right track when he started the B. C. Club in December, 1939. It was to be a rendezvous for servicemen, where they could get a snack, read the papers and maybe play a game of billiards or ping pong.

The clientele increased, however, British soldiers, sailors and airmen started dropping in now and then, after the Germans swept into the low countries and France, men from the Allied forces, especially the Free French, made it their meeting place too.

Started as a £5 venture, the club had to expand and most of the expansion was in the snack bar. The staff of volunteer women grew to 86, snacks changed to full course meals and now the servicemen are being served at the rate of 5,000 a week.

It wasn't all as easy as that, however. Soldiers don't get high pay and a shilling usually is all they can afford for a meal. Mr. McAdam started with no financial backing and it was a little while before the people back home heard of the club and started sending contributions.

None Go To Hungary.

That was when the women volunteers, led by Mrs. Ena Anderson, of Victoria, B.C., started on the warpath. Many of these women were Canadians and they decided no man who came over here to fight for his country should go hungry for lack of a cheap canteen.

In their on words they "begged, borrowed and scrounged" to get enough supplies to keep the larder full. There were no limits to their "scrounging" and the record of the club of never having closed down is proof of their success.

Mr. McAdam and his staff give most of the credit for the success of the canteen to Mrs. Anderson, a graduate nurse who came to England a year ago hoping to go to France with the forces.

She's always on the job at least 10 hours a day and sometimes longer if air raids are bad and she decides to stay open at night to feed civil defence workers, who drop in for a cup of coffee and a sandwich between bombs.

During the worst bombing last autumn, Mrs. Anderson thought of spending 12 hours in the kitchen in the daytime and then staying on duty all night to treat casualties and shock victims brought in from the street.

Supervises Trades Training Policy

Army Tradesmen Go To School

By EDWIN S. JOHNSON
(Canadian Press Military Correspondent.)

OTTAWA, April 16 — (CP). — Approximately 12,000 skilled trade "rookies," drafted from the active forces, will go back to school this year to learn what makes the wheels go round in the various branches of Canada's modern mechanized army.

Already about 4,000 men have either entered upon studies or have been nominated by their commanding officers to undergo training in specialized trades inseparable from present-day warfare. Under this system the army hopes eventually to become self-sufficient insofar as skilled and semi-skilled workmen are concerned by increasing the quota of graduates to meet the demands of a progressively expanding mechanized force.

This policy has been largely dictated by necessity as the floating supply of skilled craftsmen dried up in Canada long ago. It has been said that upwards of 30,000 skilled and semi-skilled Canadian workmen migrated to the British Isles before the outbreak of war to accept high-paying jobs as the Motherland stepped up her rearmament program to meet Germany's war preparations.

With the outbreak of hostilities, demands of the armed forces upon the various civil trades mounted at a rapid rate. A large number of specialists already had been absorbed by the services during the past decade and thousands more were urgently required.

Provincial Co-operation.

As production of highly technical weapons and other war equipment was accelerated the call upon experienced workmen became more acute. To meet this condition new sources of supply had to be found. The problem was tackled by institution of a Federal emergency training program in co-operation with the provinces and the armed forces.

According to latest statistics Canada's demands on the labor market during 1941 for industrial workers alone have been estimated at approximately 200,000, including women as well as men. Of this total the armed forces will require about 20,000 with the largest quota needed by the army.

Responsible for directing the program of training army tradesmen is Lt.-Col. Spencer Ball of Halifax. Assisting him as Dr. O. E. Ault of Ottawa, in the role of educational co-ordinator.

Before his appointment to his post Col. Ball was Professor of Civil Engineering at the Nova Scotia Technical College. For years he has been keenly interested in the development of a system which would enable the army to train its own skilled and semi-skilled workmen and the present organization within the army is largely of his making.

Every craft known to peacetime and others which have an exclusive function in warfare are being taught these men of Canada's new army. The heaviest demand, however, has been for experts in the mechanical trades.

Army tradesmen's courses, extending over periods ranging from three to six months, are divided into elementary and advanced phases. Following graduation from the primary classes, conducted at youth training centres, technical schools or vocational institutions, the candidates will advance to the army trade school to be opened in Hamilton early in May. Here the soldier begin the military application of his trade.

Trainers in Training.

The Hamilton school is being designed to give instruction to 2,000 men at one time in a large number of trades. Selected officers, N.C.O.'s and men are at the Royal Ordnance Corps training centre at Barriefield, Ont., undergoing special training. From this personnel will be chosen the staff of about 240 instructors for the army trade school.

On completion of their training the soldiers will either be sent back to their units or posted to a tradesmen's holding pool to be despatched overseas or detailed to home defence formations.

A large number of the graduates ultimately will be assigned to army field workshops which constitute the mobile industrial plants of the modern army. Others will be attached to light aid detachments, responsible for the maintenance and efficient operation of motorized vehicles in camps, on the road, or in the field of action.

"Unite For Victory" Is Rally Call Of Grand Black Chapter Session

BELLEVILLE, April 11.—(CP)—With one of the largest representations from Eastern Ontario in years attending, the Grand Black Chapter of Eastern Ontario opened its sessions in Belleville with Grand Master Murney C. Reynolds of Foxboro presiding.

Many prominent officials of the Order were present as the sessions got under way with the Grand Chapter being graced by the presence of Grand Master of British America, James Black of Winnipeg, and also by Grand Registrar of British America, H. P. Leslie, of Ottawa. The second oldest living Grand Past Master of Ontario East, William McMeechan of Queensboro, was present, also Past Grand Master Robert White, of Alberta, now representing the Orange insurance department.

Business transacted during the opening session reflected the sympathy of the delegates toward the present international affairs and towards the war situation.

In his address to the officers and members of the Grand Black Chapter of Eastern Ontario, Grand Master Murney Reynolds urged that members keep in mind that popular son, "We'll Never Let the Old Flag Fall," and do all in their power, both materially and financially, to assist the Motherland in relieving the suffering of the innocent and to help prosecute a decisive victory.

All Hand Together

"Remember the words of Benjamin Franklin in 1776, 'We must all hang together or we will hang separately'," he said.

In reference to the war situation, Grand Master Mr. Reynolds said: "Today we are at war with as powerful and treacherous an enemy as the world has ever known. Their murderous attacks on innocent people, women and children, upon hospitals and their great slaughter of humanity under the pretext of wanting to protect them, has stunned right-thinking humanity the world over. Our principles of knighthood stand for the highest ideals of British citizenship. In this war, British ideals and British standards of freedom and liberty are attacked and are in danger. When the home government declared war every part of the British Empire every territory over which the British flags flew, responded, ready to play their part. We have thousands of young men who have already gone overseas and thousands more in uniform preparing and getting ready for the great and terrible ordeal that they will be called upon in the future to go through."

Mr. Reynolds stated that we in Canada seem so far removed from the war that we have not yet grasped properly the seriousness of the situation and the danger of civilization. He forecast that although we in Canada are trying to do our share in the sending of troops and in the preparation of others, before this war is brought to a successful conclusion we will be called upon to make much greater sacrifices than we have been asked to make at any time previous in the history of the nation.

Mr. Reynolds paid tribute to the memory of the members of the organization who had passed on during the past year, claiming that such recognition and the expression of reverence for the departed members asserted its priority over business.

The Grand Master came to the support of the Union Jack, stating that what this flag means to us today must reflect seriously on the minds of certain small factions in the Dominion who at different times have sought by parliamentary procedure to have it substituted for another flag to represent us.

"The flag has given us protection and careful guidance in life as part of our Empire, that flag which flutters from the masthead above the mother of parliaments, the flag that represents the Great Britain Commonwealth of nations, today is flying that democracy may be sustained, and it would be a woeful day for our fair Dominion of Canada and our Grand Black Chapter should that barbarous cult of Europe cause it to be torn down from the masthead.

Australia Sees Pact Red Gain

SYDNEY, Australia, April 16. — (CP). — Tatsuo Kawai, First Japanese Minister to Australia, said to-day that Japan's attitude to Australia remains one of "absolute peacefulness."

"The signing of the neutrality pact (between Russia and Japan) carries with it no threat of a southward drive," he said in a speech reported by the Australian Broadcasting Corporation.

There was still no official comment on the neutrality pact signed by Japan and Russia on Sunday and Australian newspapers were restrained in their comments.

The Melbourne Argus said, however, the pact was more of a gain for Russia than for Japan or the Rome-Berlin Axis to which Japan is linked. It added that it was too early yet to say what use Japan would make of the treaty, "but it seems clear that its use will be largely determined by Russia's estimate of her own interests in Eastern Asia."

THE custodian of enemy property now is out of the circus business and, while officials were unwilling to make any official statement today, it seemed obvious that department authorities were relieved at no longer having to worry about performing animals.

Some animals, including two lions, seven trained dogs and a performing donkey, have been established at new training grounds, under a new owner, at Owen Sound, Ont.

Offices of the custodian of enemy property said final sale of the circus animals — originally the property of Capt. William Schultz, an Austrian who has been interned—was completed last week.

They were unwilling to discuss their period of responsibility for the animals but it is known that a bear escaped, an elephant died and the show went in debt while the custodian of enemy property and his officials were ex-officio circus operators.

Fleet Wipes Out Axis Convoy 5 Steamers, 3 Destroyers In Great Mare Nostrum Coup

Troops Believed Aboard 2 Of The Freighters Trucks, Tanks On 2, Munitions On 5th Trapped Off Tripoli—British Destroyer Lost

LONDON, April 17—(CP).—Striking hard on the North African front, where an Axis army menaces Egypt, the Royal Navy has been shelling German and Italian troops near Salum while 800 miles west a blockading squadron sought to choke off the vital supply line between Sicily and Tripoli.

The Admiralty announced last night the blockading squadron had "intercepted and annihilated" an entire convoy of three Italian destroyers and five cargo ships carrying mechanized equipment, munitions and possibly troops across the 90 mile stretch of water.

Other warships, cruising off the coast near the Egyptian-Libyan frontier, were credited yesterday with "constantly and successfully" bombarding German and Italian troops fighting with Imperial forces at Salum, Fort Capuzzo and Tobruk.

Great emphasis was placed today on the success of the convoy raiders off Sicily. Two of the ships announced as destroyed were 5,000-ton vessels laden with motorized equipment, the Admiralty said; two others of 3,000 tons, "probably transports," were blown up; and the fifth, a 4,000-ton ammunition carrier, "blew up with a terrific explosion."

Th. Italian destroyer escort included the 1,628-ton Luca Tarico, ar two smaller destroyers not mentioned by name.

During the action, which occurred Tuesday night, the 1,870-ton British destroyer Mohawk was sunk by torpedoes, but the majority of the crew

U.S. Production Chiefs Ready To "Turn It On"

NEW YORK, April 17—(AP). — Nearly 17,000 manufacturers have reported, in a survey completed today, that they are prepared to expand the United States' defence production by several billion dollars annually over anything previously predicted.

The survey, made by the National Industrial Council of the National Association of Manufacturers, shows that the nation's factories have ready for this expansion the machinery and the floor space; that they will need thousands of new employees; that they are seeking—and getting—government orders with which to put their facilities to complete use.

Further they are expected to employ mass productive methods through a revolutionary plan of communal pooling, already embracing 184 communities and predicted for operation in more than 1,000 communities within the year.

These facts, still in progress of detailed compilation, will be presented next week to William S. Knudsen, head of the office of Production Management ,as a contribution toward speeding defence industries to an efficiency level unequalled in history.

They are the outstanding conclusions drawn by officials of the National Association of Manufacturers from a three-months' census of factory facilities.

Last Minute News

LONDON (CP)—Serious talk that a German invasion attempt may be imminent gained increasing attention tonight as a result of the heavy blow by German bombers against London last night. In the minds of some well-informed observers the eight-hour pounding was just the kind that might be expected as the opening manoeuvre of any invasion.

Watching The Coast

FOLKESTONE, England, April 17—(CP).—Heavy explosions on the German-occupied side of the English Channel which reverberated through the mist to the Dover coast indicated today that the Royal Air Force had renewed its assaults on German objectives.

The R.A.F. had made two other attacks on the Channel coast area of France in the past 24 hours.

Bombs were heard exploding in the region early this morning.

It was thought Nazi airdromes near the French coast were being hammered.

Dominion Rally Puts Fire In Motherland

OTTAWA, April 17 — (CP). — Nothing has touched the people of Britain more deeply in the last 18 months than the spontaneous way in which the Dominions sprang instantly to the side of the Motherland, Rt. Hon. Malcolm MacDonald, told the Ottawa Canadian Club today.

The new British High Commissioner spoke to the club at luncheon and said:

"You and the others have offered all you possess in the common struggle...It is an awe-inspiring and lovely and encouraging episode in the human story, this spontaneous gathering together of the family of the British Commonwealth to overthrow the enemy of mankind."

Canada was playing a worthy part. There was the mustering of the Dominion's manhood in the fighting forces—Canada's sailors fighting in the Battle of the Atlantic; the Canadian army in Britain whose turn would eventually come to meet the enemy; and the Canadian airmen, many of whom had helped hold off the invasion of Britain "at Britain's weakest moment."

"To that select company of superb young (air) men and their comrades from every part of the British Commonwealth many of us in Britain owe our lives and all of us here owe our liberties," he said.

If Hitler could not defeat the Canadians in Britain where they were standing guard against invasion, he could not win the war.

"Well," added the High Commis-

400 Bombers Fill Night Sky Above Capital In "All-Out" Attack, Worst Of War That Kills Scores, Inflicts Enormous Loss

R.A.F. Blasts Bremen Through Fog; Bombs Heligoland

LONDON, April 17 (CP)—Royal Air Force bombers singled out Bremen for their heaviest assaults last night, and also attacked Wilhelmshaven, Cuxhaven and Wesermunde, the air ministry anounced today.

The Nazi base at Brest, on the occupied French coast, also was bombed again.

"Though haze made it difficult to observe the full effect of the bombing, fires were seen to be spreading in many parts of Bremen," a communique said.

In daylight yesterday, the ministry added, the island of Heligoland was attacked by bombers.

One bomber and three fighters were reported missing after the night's operations and one plane was reported missing from patrol yesterday.

Reprisal Says Berlin

BERLIN, April 17.—(AP)—The German High Command today described last night's air attack on London as a "reprisal for the English destruction of the cultural and historic centre of Berlin on April 9."

(During the night of April 9-10 Berlin underwent its heaviest raid of the war. Bombs falling along Unter den Linden destroyed the German State Opera House and started a damaging blaze in the attic of the Prussian State Library Also damaged were Bellevue Castle, where Hitler houses distinguished guests on state visits, and the modern art gallery which formerly was the Crown Prince's residence.)

A special Nazi communique said: "As reprisal for destructions inflicted by the British Air Force the night of April 9 on the Berlin and Postdam residential and cultural centres, numerous German fighting squadrons assaulted the British capital in a 10-hour rolling attack. The port and industrial areas were heavily hit."

An Indian Rescue

Toronto, April 17 (CP)

DOCTORS worked today to save the eyesight of Charles Warren, six-year-old Indian boy, brought to hospital here after a dangerous journey across the heaving ice of Lake Simcoe.

The boy suffered a wound near the eye with the pitchfork in some unkown manner while playing near his home on Georgina Island out in Lake Simcoe Tuesday. Next day his mother, Mrs. Fred Warren, and two other Indians, Leslie McCue and William Scelbe, started out in a rowboat and made the four-mile journey to the mainland in five hours.

When they struck huge ice floes, the two men carried the boat shoulder-high with the mother and the boy in it.

ISTANBUL, Turkey, April 16 — (Delayed) — (AP). — Turkish newspapers reported today that Germany and Turkey are on the verge of concluding a new trade agreement involving the shipment of Turkish tobacco to Germany.

It also was reported from Ankara that Italy and Turkey had renewed a "commerce and navigation treaty which expired in January.

States To Raise $3,500,000,000 In New Taxation

WASHINGTON, April 17—(AP). —Treasury Secretary Henry Morgenthau announced today that the United States administration and both Democratic and Republican Congressional leaders had agreed to ask $3,500,000,000 of new taxes to be raised in the next year.

He told reporters after conferring with the leaders that President Roosevelt had approved the program and would, at an early date, discuss the program with the American people.

No details of how the money would be raised were disclosed, but Morgenthau indicated the Government would tap every possible means of raising a dollar in taxes. He indicated that such drastic means as a general sales tax, payroll taxes and other heavy money-raising ideas were under consideration.

"We reached this figure," Morgenthau said, "on the basis that we ought to raise at least two-thirds of our expenditures by taxation and one-third by borrowing.

"We figure expenditures in the coming fiscal year, beginning July 1, will be about $19,000,000,000."

Night Fighters Down Three, Guns Two; All Areas Suffer

LONDON, April 17 —(CP)—Wave upon wave of Nazi warplanes poured bombs on London for eight hours last night and early today, taking a heavy toll of lives, starting countless fires and inflicting enormous property damage.

Four hours after the all-clear sounded at 5:30 a.m. (12:30 a.m. EDT), the wail of ambulance sirens carrying victims to hospitals and the hoarse shouts of firemen and rescuers still echoed through smoke-shrouded, debris-filled streets.

Londoners, seasoned by eight months of bombing, called the attack the most savage since the "all-out" raids began last August and accepted it as Hitler's revenge for the Royal Air Force's devastating attack on Berlin a week ago.

A government communique this morning said the raid was "very heavy and sustained" and added that "early reports show that casualties were heavy and that considerable damage was done."

Bombers and combat planes—observers said there were 400 of them—participated in the attack, dropping thousands of bombs from the smallest incendiaries to delayed action explosives and missiles of the "super-bomb" type.

Every Plane Possible, There

Official sources said the Germans had all the bombers in the air over London that it was possible to have there.

"They just wouldn't have had fields to fly from or room to fly if there had been any more over London," one said.

No Ties On News

WASHINGTON, April 17 —(AP).—President Roosevelt told editors of the United States today that as far as he is concerned "there will be no government control of news unless it be of vital military information."

In a letter to the American Society of Newspaper Editors, read to the organization's 19th annual convention by President Tom Wallace of Louisville, Ky., the President declared free speech is in "undisputed possession" of the press, magazines, motion pictures, and the radio and so far as he is concerned "it will remain for that is where it belongs. It is important that it should remain for suppression of opinion and news are among the mortal weapons that distatorships direct against their own peoples and direct against the world."

New Tobruk Raid Costs Axis 992 Killed, Captured

CAIRO, Egypt, April 17.—(AP).—British troops defending Tobruk, Libya, yesterday captured 25 Axis officers and 767 men and killed more than 200 in bitter fighting, British General Headquarters announced to-day.

Officers said 20 tanks were destroyed.

Sir Miles Lampson, British ambassador, communicated the news to the Egyptian premier.

Authorities said German casualties in dead, wounded and prisoners are now more than 1,500 in the desert campaign, while the total number of tanks destroyed is about 35. British losses were reported to be light.

The first German prisoners have reached the Nile Valley and have been sent to camps.

The communique said a British patrol "successfully penetrated an enemy position outside the defences of Tobruk" and captured seven Italian officers and 139 men in one phase of the operations.

An attack on Tobruk was repulsed with artillery fire, it said.

There was still considerable patrol activity in the area around Salum, Egypt, the communique added. It reported further advances

NEW YORK, April 17.—(AP)—A British Broadcasting Corporation broadcast heard today by the Columbia Broadcasting System said that "the Germans have been heavily reinforced, but the enemy advance has been slowed down" in Northern Greece.

"Greek troops and British Empire forces, fighting under General Papagos, are now in contact with the enemy along the whole front line in Northern Greece," the broadcast said.

Despite terrific losses the Germans were attacking ceaselessly, this observed said. He declared that the invaderss were "throwing men away by the thousands" in an attempt to crash into the Thessaly Plain.

Mercy Gold Tops 2 Million

Staff Of 50 Needed For Bomb Victim Fund From Canada

LONDON, April 17.— (CP).— A Canadian flood of mercy gold has poured more than $2,000,000 into Britain to aid bomb-battered civilians and help build airplanes to return the Nazi air blows.

Though concentrating on their country's own war effort Canadians have sent large and small donations to two great British funds—that established by Sir George Wilkinson, Lord Mayor of London, for raid victims, and Lord Beaverbrook's Spitfire Fund.

From Canada has come $752,621 of $10,404,000 sent from many sources to the Lord Mayor up to March 31, and Canadians donated $1,630,-681 of the $47,963,092 in the aircraft purchase fund at that date.

Donations to the Lord Mayor's Fund are pouring in from Canada every day and it takes a staff of from 30 to 50 in Mansion House to handle contributions. Countless thousands of raid victims have been helped by the fund which lends aid immediately a town has been raided.

The Toronto Telegram British War Victims' Fund has contributed approximately $450,000 to top the list of Canadian contributors. It is a list reading like a Canadian geography table, with the chain of good samaritans stretching from coast to coast. The largest anonymous donation was $49,500 from "A Canadian."

The Fund has received about 650 distinct contributions from Canada but those sent by city authorities include collections from individuals so the total is really larger than that.

Here are some (based on approximate conversion from sterling: Guelph Mercury, $9,058; St. Catharines and district, $6,039; Hamilton, $8,900; Peterborough, $8,100, and Ottawa, $13,072.

J. W. McConnell, publisher of the Montreal Star, led the list of Canadian contributors to the Aircraft Fund with $1,000,000. Lord Beaverbrook announced the planes bought would constitute "McConnell's Squadron."

Greek Women Doing Big Bit

Nurse, Man Canteens, Help Guns Firing

By ALMA DE LUCE
(Wife of A. P. Foreign Correspondent)

ATHENS, April 17.—(AP).—This is no powderpuff war, but from the bomb-scarred army hospitals of Macedonia to the crowded refugee camps of Attica Greek women are doing their bit—and more.

When hundreds of wounded soldiers were safely removed from Corizza while Italian tanks were driving in, it was a handful of young volunteer nurses who finished up the job neatly and casually.

Forced to forsake the canteen she had operated through months of air raids on the Northern Albania front, 63-year-old Mrs. Anastasius Adossides jolted to the war in an

Canuck Troops In Raid Blitz

Many Killed In and Around London In Long Night Of Horror

LONDON, April 17 (CP Cable)—Some Canadian soldiers were killed and others injured in the night-long terror of the worst raid this teeming capital of the Empire has yet endured.

One was killed in London and others in the outskirts of the sprawling town while subjected to an almost endless pounding from dusk to dawn.

Names of the Canadian victims were not disclosed because next of kin have yet to be advised by the Department of National Defence in Ottawa.

At least one Canadian soldier was injured in a Service Club where a number of overseas troops were sheltering from the storm of bombs. The club suffered a direct hit. Rescuers have been digging for hours in the debris to release some believed trapped. It is not known if any of them are Canadians.

The bomb tore across the side of the building and sent the occupants, some of whom were sleeping, hurtling into the basement. A Canadian soldier fell 40 feet but escaped with bruises. Others more badly injured were treated by first-aid workers.

Another Canadian who escaped by the skin of his teeth from the Club declined to disclose his name "because I don't want my mother to worry."

But a Canadian pal of his, who was sleeping nearby, is missing.

When the soldier who escaped went to bed he folded his clothes beside him and slept in his underclothing. The whine of a bomb awakened him. When it hit the building he ran bare-foot through the streets and wound up at a Ministry building where he was outfitted with a pair of oversize air raids precautions overalls and a private's great coat.

Then he met Douglas Amaron, of the Canadian Press London staff, who took him to his home, gave

Exile For French Premiers

Hint Vichy Move To Dodge Trying Leaders

VICHY, France, April 17—(AP).—Marcel Deat, writing in the Paris newspaper L'Oeuvre yesterday, said the Vichy Government is planning to cancel the "war responsibility" trials of four former high officials of the pre-armistice government and instead will banish them from France by decree.

The four, who have been held for trial before the Supreme Court at Riom, are former Premiers Edouard Daladier and Paul Reynaud, Gen. Marie-Gustave Gamelin, and the former Minister of the Interior, Georges Mandel.

They would be exiled, Deat said, not because of the present war guilt charges, but for "betraying their

Try To Flank British At Olympus

Allied Gunners Take Terrific Toll In Mountain Passes

ATHENS, April 17.—(AP)—Heavy forces of German dive bombers and tanks hammered in successive waves today against Allied troops defending Northern Greeee.

Field artillery and machine guns, thickly distributed through the hilly terrain occupied by the British-Greek defence lines, met the attacks with a murderous fire. German losses were described as severe.

The Nazis were reported hurling one mechanized column at the centre of the Allied line and another at the right flank based on the slopes of fabled Mt. Olympus.

The Greek Command announced that the first column had entered the upper valley of the Aliakmon River near Grevena, some 60 miles south of the Yugoslav frontier, and was trying to advance toward Kalabaka, on the threshold of the plains of Thessaly.

The second column, pushing forward from Kozane, 25 miles northeast of Grevena, also crossed the curving Aliakmon, the Greek High Command said, in a drive apparently aimed at encircling the Mt. Olympus fortifications.

Reinforcements Move Up

British sources said heavy fighting was in progress in several sectors of the new defence line thrown

Theirs is a typical wartime Greek family, for one son is in the air force and the other in the army.

Of 3,200 military nurses, 3,000 are volunteers since the war started.

While some have been bombed and machine-gunned on land and others have gone down with hospital ships at sea, not one has asked to be relieved of duty since Greece was invaded nearly six months ago.

Princess Catherine is a Red Cross volunteer and youthful Princess Alexandria supervises hospital linen distribution.

But it was the sandaled, black-veiled peasant mothers and girls who were hailed by the nation last November.

Their achievement was the carrying of munitions on thir backs up the steep Pindus trails to the guns which smashed the Italian divisions driving for the heart of Greece.

Tens of thousands of peasant women have worked from dawn to dusk ever since, carrying rocks and wielding picks and shovels in the building of roads.

Despite icy storms of winter, whole villages turned out to repair bridges and fill in bomb craters so army trucks and wagons could reach the Albanian front with badly needed supplies. In less spectacular assignments, women operate soup kitchens, re-house refugees, nurse disables veterans, roll bandages, knit socks, make pajamas and plan means to bolster home-front morale.

sioner, "he can't defeat the Canadians in Britain. But if the Canadians don't get a chance to beat him up there (in Britain), they will no doubt in due course go and beat him up somewhere else."

And on the other side of Canada's war effort was the contribution of the producers and taxpayers.

The war, he said, is a conflict between two policial conceptions—democracy and dictatorship.

"It is in solemn truth a combat, fateful for mankind, between good and evil," said Mr. MacDonald. "If you think that description overdrawn, reflect on the one example of the latest conduct of Nazi authorities which is consistent with so much of their action in the past—their prosecution of the heroic Polish people in their native land."

"It is against the reign of such things in Europe and in the world beyond that we have taken up the sword and stand forth as the champions of tolerance, freedom, compassion, love of truth and beauty, and all those other human qualities which are essential to the progress of man."

The British High Commissioner said he believed the British Commonwealth Air Training Plan in Canada would be one of the decisive factors of the war, and of the Empire at war, he said:

"We are making history. On what we now do depends the outcome of this story. Let us show ourselves equal to the twin tasks that are set us; first to conquer the Nazi forces who seek to plunge men and women back into a dark age and then afterwards to lead humanity to a great stride forwards into a broader, fuller and happier life."

him hot drinks and food, and put him to bed.

British military law prohibits disclosure of the exact number of deaths in such instances, but the number was small.

Seen from the top of a tall west end apartment building the whole of London appeared to be involved in the raid. Against the background of a star-lit sky the high buildings of London's skyline stood out in silhouette blotched with orange and red patches of flame.

Scene of Hell

Heavy billows of smoke rose and fell as fierce flames shot towards the sky. It could have been a picture of hell. For many it was hell or worse.

Long after daylight weary A.R.P. workers in grim overalls toiled to free the trapped victims. It was a scene being repeated in many parts of battered London town, with groups of women standing by and weeping while waiting for news of relatives.

One of the most heart-breaking scenes in the vicinity of tragedy was around the debris of a big workers' apartment block where many were burned to death. A unknown number were trapped when flames engulfed the building after a direct hit.

Here were many mothers and wives waiting, waiting and hoping.

Women cried and men bowed their heads when two bodies were carried out from a church basement where eight persons were still trapped. A pensioner aged 101 was among those buried under the debris of the wrecked institution.

The west end was bombed, blasted and burned. Daylight revealed here as well as in other sections an indescribable sight of shattered shops, scattered debris, glass-littered roads and pavements, some of them blocked by hundreds of tons of masonry.

Lanes of Destruction

It was not unusual to look up streets and narrow lanes blanketed from end to end with splintered frames of buildings, broken bricks, and oceans of shattered glass, some of it crushed to snowy powder under the tired feet of pedestrians who were forced to detour owing to obstructions. Some people found it quicker to walk to work because transportation was uncertain and taxis were all engaged.

Hundreds of workers paused to inspect the damage as if they had not seen anything like it before. It was difficult to appreciate fully the violence of the raid because the damage was so heavy and widespread.

There was little left of many shop fronts and window displays which were the pride of the west end. For blocks and blocks along one important thoroughfare sales girls came out from behind counters, removed remnants of the broken windows and swept them to the already glass-covered roads.

She Worked Anyway

On her hands and knees outside a theatre that had already been a bomb victim, a charwoman, cigaret in mouth, busily scrubbed away oblivious of the destruction around her. The back of the theatre had been neatly sliced away by a bomb.

Stenographers queued up outside offices no longer inhabitable. They chewed gum, chatted, and watched streams of water pour through windows and doorways of buildings damaged by fire.

At least one ingenious employer set up an office on the sidewalk and conducted business over a borrowed desk. It attracted a throng which stood by and watched and joked.

Numerous stories were told of women operating groups to aid the heroic firefighters in their night-long task. Women worked pluckily in streets and gardens and even broke into unoccupied buildings to tackle fire bombs.

In one basement shelter buried beneath the wreckage of a building where a number of trapped persons were still alive, hot drinks and cakes were passed through a hole in the debris.

A man and wife sleeping when a bomb dropped were blown to the street. They were still in bed when they landed on the sidewalk and were taken to hospital suffering from shock.

Across it all it is still the Fleet Street newsie who exemplifies the typical spirit of this battered city. Outside his bombed shop one newsie displayed the following: "Navy skins Nazi convoy but we ain't sunk yet—Hitler and his mob can't do it."

Bombs Get Rescuers

Death struck air raid service men in all parts of the city. Members of a rescue squad were killed by a bomb which exploded directly in front of their truck as they sped to the scene of a previous blast.

Firemen high on a ladder pouring water into a blazing building were killed when a bomb hit the foot of the ladder. Five fire watchers were killed by a hit on a church.

There was no sleep even in the soundest air raid shelters as the whole city vibrated. In one big hotel shelter the wardens spoke sharply every time a bomb hit nearby.

"No panic please — keep your seats," they said.

Elderly women looked haggard for lack of sleep. One men stared moodily at the floor. Outside this shelter a voice kept crying in the darkness: "Taxi! Taxi!" without results.

The smell of smoke and dust drifted in and the sky was ruddy. The sirens of speeding fire engines wailed through the night. Some buses still ran. And still the steady thump-thump of bombs continued.

LONDON, April 17 (CP Cable)—Find us a bed—a nice soft one in a sound-proof room.

Like most of London's millions, the Canadian Press staff went to work today red-eyed due to sleep lost in the noisiest and fiercest night of air raids in this war.

Sleep was impossible due to the vibration and eternal roar of the German planes and the booming of anti-aircraft barrage. The ground quivered too often with falling bombs. If there was a lull, it was broken by air raid wardens whistling and wisecracking in a station below our window while waiting a call.

My flatmates, D. E. Burritt and Louis Hunter, however, did their best to seek slumber so they could make an early damage survey and gave the old sheep-counting game a new slant by tallying the number of bombs heard falling. When it reached 100 we were still unable to sleep, so we had tea for the second time in three hours.

Everyone in our big block was equally restless after a long respite from heavy raids. The top-floor roof-spotters who generally keep a lonely vigil watching for fire. But none stayed long as the bombs kept coming nearer.

When a big blaze started in our district Hunter decided to investigate and the last words I heard before dozing were: "Boy, if you want to see a fire go outside."

What bed? It's our turn to roof-spot tonight.

THE WAR TO-DAY

By GUY RHOADES
Canadian Press Staff Writer

The worst air raid of the war has left London and Britain generally angrier, more grief-stricken, more thoroughly wrecked, but no more inclined to give in to the Nazis than hitherto.

A number of Canadian troops were included in last night's air raid casualties and Lord and Lady Stamp were listed as killed. Lord Stamp, a familiar figure in Canada where he had served as chairman of investigating committees, was economic adviser to the government.

Cab drivers, the men who see and guage most street phenomena, agreed that the raid was more vigorous and more consistently sustained than they had seen before.

For eight hours German aircraft gave London its worst taste of the war in a raid which the Germans claimed was a "reprisal for the English destruction of the cultural and historic centre of Berlin on April 9."

Casualties in the raid were believed high, but not as high as they might have been, for the first bombs started to fall on theatrical districts and other places of public resort close to, or after, normal closing hours.

At least one legitimate theatre and two movies houses in the London area were wrecked, but the patrons in each case had left and the number of casualties in the immediate vicinity was not disclosed.

The great air raid and its consequences tended to distract public attention from a smashing naval victory in the Mediterranean which sent eight Axis ships of a convoy out of Sicilian ports for Africa down to the bottom. It was not anounced immediately if the craft carried troops.

On the African front which the transports obviously were intended to bolster some success in their stubborn defence of Salum and Capuzza, actions in which they were aided by naval vessels lying off-shore. It was not indicated if the troops were fighting offensive or defensive actions.

In the south Balkan sector Greek and British troops fought hard to check the advance of German troops, apparently seeking to outflank the Allied defence by skirting them at border points where Yugoslav forces had been overwhelmed or where the Axis military had a pushover due to defection among the Yugoslavs.

Fighting was sharp on the Greek-Albanian-Yugoslav front, but appeared likely to develop into a really major battle along the sector the British hold in the vicinity of Mount Olympus.

The Italians, as usual, claimed success around Scutari where they declared they had breached Yugoslav defences and advanced "many kilometres" up the Adriatic coast.

lied defence lines are holding steady, but reliable informants made no effort to minimize the seriousness of the situation.

They did, however, urge Greeks to close their ears to ominous rumors and to "await the outcome of the struggle."

Well to the northeast, Australian troops were reported by British sources to be holding their lines intact against furious German assaults in the vicinity of Servia, northwest of Mount Olympus.

A vicious battle was raging at the entrance of Sarandaporon Pass, near Servia, with the Australians reported inflicting heavy losses on the Germans.

Five German dive bombers were reported shot down by the Bren guns of a tank company.

These divers had hammered at the mountainous British-Greek line with the power of long-range artillery to clear the way for the battle of Kalabaka.

Pounding Back Door

The Germans also were pounding at the eastern entrance to Metsovo Pass, which leads westward through the mountains by a backdoor route to Ioannina, capital of Epirus, from which the Italians were turned back in their first attacks last November.

(A British communique said German pressure was increasing all along the British front.)

The Germans already were some 70 miles deep in northern Greece, and were driving toward Kalabaka in the centre, in an effort to reach the important railway centre of Larisa to the southeast, and to flank the British forces from their Mount Olympus positions on the Gulf of Salonika.

Allied artillery and machine guns, thicking studdy the steep slopes, threw murderous fire into German infantry and tanks, which surged forward beneath the waves of Stukas. German casualties were severe.

Greek newspapers reported that the bayonet-skilled Greeks were able to cheok the Germans in any hand-to-hand combat that developed in the war of machines.

For the first time in a week Athens had 24 hours without an air raid alarm as the Nazis brought all their air power to bear on the battle zone.

ROME, April 17—(AP).—Italians claimed today to be fighting on Greek soil after crossing the Albanian border at several points.

Il Giornale d'Italia's correspondent claimed both the 9th and 11th Armies had crossed into Greece.

The High Command asserted that Cetinje in Yugoslavia, about 10 miles from Kotor, had been occupied and that another column was pushing toward Dubrovnik.

duties of office."

The move was interpreted by informed sources here as a device to sidestep the long delayed trial. There observers expressed the opinion that the Government was dissatisfied with the original charge—"responsibility for the passage from peace to war"—because it implied French war guilt.

The Vichy censors on April 14 forbade the press in unoccupied France to print the accusation against the former leaders, or regime, of war responsibility— allowing only mention of "responsibility for defeat."

Lord, Lady Stamp Among Dead In London Raid

LONDON, April 17—(CP).—Lord and Lady Stamp were killed "by enemy action" during the night as London underwent its worst air raid of the war, it was reported today.

Lord Stamp was the government's economic adviser as head of a committee co-ordinating the work of several ministries.

Lord Stamp, widely known economist, was raised to the peerage as the first Baron Stamp in 1938. He would have been 61 years old June 21.

Lord Stamp was well-known in Canada. He held honorary degrees from McGill University, the University of Toronto, University of Western Ontario, and McMaster University, and in 1931 headed the Canadian grain futures inquiry.

He was chairman of the London, Midland and Scottish Railway, Britain's largest transport organization, and was a director of the Bank of England.

Before his elevation to the peerage he was known as Sir Josiah Stamp.

Lady Stamp was president of the National Free Church Women's Council and governor of University College, Aberystwyth, Wales. She was married to Lord Stamp in 1903.

Lord Stamp's body was recovered but rescuers still were searching for that of Lady Stamp.

Lord Stamp's heir, Hon. W. Carlyle Stamp, who had been staying with his parents, is also feared to have lost his life.

Three or four members of the household staff also are believed to have been killed.

Carlyle Stamp's wife and children are living in Cornwall.

Known In Canada.

OTTAWA, April 17—(CP).—Lord Stamp, killed in London during a night air attack, was well-known to Canadians from coast to coast and particularly those engaged in the grain business.

As Sir Josiah Stamp he came to Canada in 1931 and was chairman of a Royal Commission that heard evidence at various points in the Dominion in the course of an inquiry into the grain trading business.

Long before he undertook the Royal Commission chairmanship — for which he accepted no salary—he had been described by news correspondents as "the busiest man in London."

He came to Canada to investigate the grain business at the request of the then Prime Minister, Rt. Hon .R. B. Bennett.

Lord Stamp was recognized as one of the world's great economists, who entered the British Civil Service when a mere youth.

He was an ardent advocate of increasing individual independence based on individual savings.

output of coal dwindled away to a trickle from a few independently-operated mines in the region. Only maintenance men entered a dozen major pits in the Glace Bay, New Waterford and North Cape Breton areas to keep them in working trim.

As the strike entered its second day, the miners found that the provisions of a Wage Board report on which they were demanding a referendum already had been embodied into contracts signed with the companies by the district executive of the United Mine workers of America. The strike had been called yesterday in an attempt to force the executive to submit the report to a vote of the District 26—Nova Scotia and New Brunswick—membership.

Late last night, after the strike had been in full effect more than 12 hours, the executive announced the signing. Its statement said the one-year contracts with Dominion Coal Company and Nova Scotia Steel and Coal Company, the two companies hit by the stoppage, and with two other companies already were "in full force."

In North Africa

The situation in North Africa continues to hold attention because it was something which had not been anticipated. There was no word or warning to the general public in advance that the Germans had been able to land in force in Libya, and no intimation that it had been possible to take so many tanks and other equipment.

That is how the advance was made possible, and it was in sufficient strength to make progress. We are inclined to dislike news which appears unfavorable; we generally cast about then to find some individual on whom to lay the blame, and we grow impatient because there is not more action of the aggressive and successful sort.

Admittedly there is no prophet working on this paper, but just the same there is a feeling which is hard to suppress that the rush of Germans and Italians is not going to carry the enemy to the distance which many had feared possible. Fighting in the desert is something which the British generals understand and so do their seasoned troops. For some reason which it might be difficult to explain in a satisfactory way we feel the situation there, while dangerous, is quite well removed from what can be called desperate. We believe the British command is quite well aware of what it is doing.

Not The Right Topic

It may not seem far from 1938 to the present, but in that year Norman Angell was the Nobel Prize winner. He was addressing the Boston City Club the other day and his general theory was that the present war is on because Britain during the past ten years had failed to aid the victims of aggression.

The speaker could see a close connection between Britain's failure to go to the assistance of China and the present bombing of British cities. If it had been shown at the start that ruthlessness would not be permitted, then that would have been the end of ruthlessness.

It would appear that Mr. Angell believes Britain is called upon to be the policeman of the world, a function which at one time was assigned to the League of Nations. The idea went as well as any good pancake because nations were not willing to take united action to enforce disciplinary measures.

It would be interesting enough to make a study of this sort in the critical month of April in 1941, and it may be more interesting as well for those who may listen. But after it was all over, after the vote of thanks had been moved and extended to the distinguished speaker, what had it all amounted to? What had been accomplished?

When a house is on fire the fire brigade members do not take time out to say that if there had been a slate roof on the premises there might not have been a fire. Their business is to go to work right there and right then and there that they can to stop the fire as quickly as possible. If there is discussion to be brought on then the time for it is after the fire has been brought under control and entirely subdued.

The only thing that matters at the moment is the winning of this war, and the polished and clever though Sir Norman Angell may be, his analysis of the years and his delineation of what should have been done are adding nothing at all to the strength of the arm which will strike the present blow for freedom.

Important To Go Out

Mrs. Mabel Young, superintendent of Children's Aid Society, finds yet another problem, that of parents who go out the evening and leave the children home. Some of them have been known to stay out until 10.30 and 11.30, and Miss Young has moved to ask if the parents think it necessary to go outside the home for thrills or some such reason. Frankly that is what they are doing.

There are those who expect sympathy because there are children in the home, and worry constantly about being unable to go out like they did before motherhood they see bonds and sacred responsibility. Miss Young is advocating that they be realistic and simply stating a plain truth: that while there are children in the home they are living through the years of their greatest opportunity; they are facing a privilege and not a responsibility.

Soon enough they will come to the stage in life where the home will be empty, where the noise of which they once complained would sound as music to expectant ears and lonely hearts. We do not believe that is too high a standard to set before people in any walk of life because it is merely the plain truth of human relationships.

Finding The Error

In 1920 there was a ruling in Toronto which made it impossible for any person living outside the municipality to secure a job in the civic administration. Right now Toronto is looking for a new Commissioner of Finance, a position which carries along with it a salary of $12,000 a year. There is no certainty that the man needed to fill that post is presently a resident of Toronto. Therefore, according to Mayor Conboy, that regulation will have to go by the boards, because it is desired to have the best man available regardless of where he lives.

And that of course is getting down to something like common sense. We can hardly believe that any employer in Toronto would adopt the rule that "if you are going to work for me you must be in Toronto and of Toronto." He would probably find that the men he desired were not in Toronto, and he would go outside the city to get them.

Admittedly that feeling of parochialism makes its rounds and lights on various municipalities in turns. It is much in favor of outsiders coming in to spend their money, but it goes into deep grief at the thought of an outsider being called to take over a municipal position of any sort.

It would look much better for Toronto to officially draw the the pencil through that regulation, because Toronto above any other city in Ontario depends on the rest of Ontario for its existence.

The Method Seems Fair

There was something in the papers a few days ago about a moving picture celebrity in Hollywood quitting the business to enter the United States army. His salary had been greater than the President of the United States, but in the army he will receive just $21 per month, plus uniform, meals and bed.

Then there's the case of William McChesney Martin, chairman of the board of the New York Stock Exchange. His salary is $4,000 per month and he is regarded as one of the up-and-coming young business executives of the financial district. His number has come to the top of the list and he will become a buck private in the army, and his Uncle Sam at the end of each month will pay him not $4,000 for his services, but exactly $21.

There is actually a good deal to be said for the draft system of taking young men into the army. The power of decision is not left to the men but it is exercised by centralized authority, and a man's earnings or his own feeling of importance do not enter the picture.

At Least It's Interesting

During one of the debates at Washington Senator Carter Glass of Virginia said: "We are more British than we know. I did not realize it myself until the Nazis started blasting down London and the British towns, and I began to get mad about it."

Raymond G. Carroll, writing from Washington to the St. Thomas Times-Journal, admits he was interested by that remark. There appeared to be more in it than might appear on the surface, and it started him looking into records and examining family trees, including his own.

Mr. Carroll thumbed over books and records until he found the spot where John Adams, second president of United States (but the first president to live in the White House) said one-third of the people in the 13 original states in 1776 were Loyalists or Tories, names given to the colonists who were loyal to Britain during the war of Independence. The population at that time was less than 2,000,000, so of loyalists there were approximately 600,000.

Mr. Carroll says trustworthy records show that between the years 1775 and 1787 about 60,000 of these loyalists went to what are now known as Nova Scotia, New Brunswick and Ontario, and to the Bahamas or West Indies.

That would leave 540,000 loyalists in the new republic. They were not able to depart, so they remained, and as Mr. Carroll says, "took it on the chin." So it does seem quite probable that was the foundation for the remark of Senator Carter Glass in 1941: "We are more British than we know."

It is about as plausible explanation as we have seen for the remarkable reversal in public opinion in United States in the last six months or so. It was as though there was a force there lying dormant, waiting for something to touch it into vocative action. The Senator who said "We are more British than we know" was unconsciously pointing a finger back some 165 years to the 540,000 Loyalists in the new republic who were unable to pick up and leave.

The Man's Big Idea

Benjamin Mason, negro, was living in Philadelphia in 1939, and he was finding the going rough. There was his wife and a family of four children and there was no work. The next best thing was the $11.50 per week which he drew by way of relief.

If one had been going through an inventory of the mental attainments or the desires or ambitions of the people of Philadelphia at that time we doubt whether Benjamin Mason would have been seriously considered; he would be just another Negro who couldn't make it go, and there might have been a note about him being willing to live on relief.

But Benjamin Mason and his wife Pearl managed to gather together $2.50 and with that sum they purchased a ticket in the Irish Sweepstakes, and their ticket turned out to be worth $150,000. Now when you take a man who has been living on relief and place in his hands a fortune it is apt to be dissipated. That's what generally happens when there has been no training for financial responsibility.

But let's go on with Benjamin Mason. He and his family had lived in the slums and he didn't like it, and he was sure the others who had to live the same way felt as he did. So he put up $100,000 of his own money, then secured loans from the Reconstruction Finance Corporation and began building a modern apartment for 50 families, and to get the land he cleared out slum homes.

These new apartments are modern; they have air conditioning, playground, lawns and a fountain, recreation rooms, reception room and a chapel for religious services, and they are being rented to Negro families at a charge which represents only the construction investment and upkeep.

The development has naturally attracted a good deal of attention, but the only statement ever made by Benjamin Mason was "I'm glad to be able to do something for my people." So there it is, concrete evidence that the man had within him the genius of stewardship of that wholesome variety which wanted to make things better for other people.

NOTE AND COMMENT

On a recent Saturday Toronto fire department answered 51 fire alarms. Toronto has some sections where a good fire might help matters.

A land of happy homes? Perhaps. But in 1912 there were only 35 divorces granted in Canada, and in 1940 there were 921.

Soldier in London, Ont., planned to get married, but instead he has been sent down for six months. Otherwise he would have been in for a life sentence.

How informative is the news these days! From Cairo comes this one: "The Egyptian government announced that an agreement had been reached with British authorities, but did not disclose its nature."

Charlie Chaplin has received notice that he is being sued for $5,000,000 because it is charged the plot of his latest picture, "The Great Dictator," belonged to another man. We have a feeling that Adolf Hitler would be pleased to sue him for even a larger amount.

PINK SEDAN

(By A.R.K.)

¶ My Pink Sedan was fairly clean, the grass along the way looked green, and birds were on the wing; I thought I'd sniff the country air, and of the scenery get my share, for surely this was Spring.

¶ I stayed on pavements for a while, and rolled along mile after mile, for Winter's marks had gone; the breeze was gentle as it came, might bring a little needed rain, I hummed a happy song.

¶ But nature called me as I went, and I was on exploring bent, of pavements I was bored; I should turn off upon some road, where Spring had stored her choicest load, with newest treasures stored.

¶ And so I turned my Pink Sedan, unto a little road that ran, and pointed toward a stream; the pussy willows were in bloom, the full leaf would be coming soon, great trees in newest green.

¶ I thought 'twas such a pleasant spot and drove on farther than I ought, for joy engulfed me there; far off from any crowded street, no sound of busy scuffling feet, and everything was fair.

¶ I gazed upon each little bud, nor did I notice then the mud, for joy I felt I'd shout; right there I sank in mud to stay, and later on I had to pay—three bones to get pulled out.

CAP and BELLS . .

By SAMUEL MARCHBANKS

ONE of the most extraordinary of all human passions is that of acquisitiveness. Most of us have a more or less strongly developed desire to own things, but it is rarely that we have either the time or the income to indulge ourselves immoderately. We have to be content with what we can get.

C & B

Of course, there are those who deny that they have any desire to own anything. They are often adherents of Eastern faiths, who feel that possessions trammel the soul, and prevent it from achieving its highest development. I have known such people, and although I should not like to accuse them of insincerity, I have noticed that they are usually not very clever at dealing with such possessions as they have. In fact, it almost seems that their desire to escape from the burden of possessions springs from their unwillingness to undertake the considerable task of housekeeping. I should respect their beliefs more if they were not so strongly allied to dirt and discomfort. It may be all very well to escape from the burden of possessions in India, where the weather is warm and the standard of living low, but it is impractical in Canada, where, in winter at least, one must either be comfortable or die.

C & B

But although we all enjoy ownership (or the majority of us do) there is reason in all things. We usually want only enough to satisfy our personal desires, and our accumulations of possessions are rarely of any great interest. It is only once in a long while that a person appears who has both the money and the time to satisfy his inordinate desire for possessions.

C & B

Such a man is William Randolph Hearst, the American newspaper magnate. For many years he has had an income which made it possible for him to acquire anything that took his fancy. He had a castle, San Simeon, in California and a castle in Wales, both enormous and both furnished in the most fancifully luxurious manner, and he employed buyers in every quarter of the globe whose work it was to find and buy new treasures for Mr. Hearst. It was not always possible to find room in his various homes for everything which was bought and sent to him, and much of it was simply stored in New York and left there until Mr. Hearst could find time to look at it and decide what he wanted and where it was to be put. Apparently he never found that time, for this spring Mr. Hearst decided to sell the contents of his warehouses; it seems curious that Mr. Hearst, who is strongly anti-Semitic, should have chosen the apartment store of the Jewish Gimbel Brothers to handle the sale for him.

C & B

WHAT Mr. Hearst had to sell must have been a surprise even to himself. The catalogue of his sale lists paintings and sculpture, which includes works by the greatest masters, and Greek and Roman figures of extraordinary age and interest. The tapestries which he had to sell were mostly pieces of Flemish work which would make the reputation of a museum. The gold and silversmiths' work was made up of exquisite church ornamentation, and included an agate bowl mounted with gold and gems by Benvenuto Cellini. There was a magnificent collection of antique furniture, and whole panelled rooms from great houses, as well as a Venetian council chamber decorated with frescoes. Mr. Hearst even had a Spanish monastery, which he had caused to be moved to America, stone by stone. His collection of stained glass fills twenty pages of his catalogue. He had a priceless collection of Chinese and European china and glass, and a vast accumulation of armour. Rugs, Americans, and books and manuscripts made up a bulky but not predominant part of the sale at Gimbel's.

C & B

People whose religious or political views make them unsympathetic to the idea of private property will regard Mr. Hearst either as a villain or a madman for having allowed himself to acquire so much, but I think that most of us will have a sneaking fellow-feeling with him. It was a pity that he had to keep his possessions locked up in a storehouse, but after all, they were his, bought with his own money, and it was his right to do as he liked with them. In a world which is rapidly becoming socialized, or communized, such collections will soon be impossibilities. Things of beauty will be owned by the state, and we can only hope, with some misgiving, that the state will know what to do with them. People like Mr. Hearst will no longer be able to let loose their craving for possessions, and in some respects it will be a pity.

NOISY TOWN

GROUPS of young people, returning home from parties, etc., late at night or in the early hours of the morning, should use a little discretion for local citizens who are asleep. Recently a guest at the local hotel said to the proprietor on Sunday morning: "In a civilized country like Canada, I didn't believe it was possible for a group of boys to make as much noise after midnight, as was the case last night—I couldn't get to sleep for hours, owing to the racket they created beneath my window."—Winchester Press.

NOT COMMON

"Now, your sister Emily, she's different. She's not the sort they give away with a magazine, as you might say."

—London Daily Herald.

• Huns Control Paris Press

From the London Sunday Chronicle

HAVING vanquished France physically, the Nazis are now trying to conquer her spiritually.

Somehow, France must be absorbed into the German Lebensraum! To this end, Dr. Goebbels propaganda machine is running full blast, with renegade Frenchmen aiding the process.

Paris newspapers, radio stations, and movies have been mobilized to compel Parisians to think as Hitler wants them to think.

Indubitably, today's German-controlled Press of Paris is the lowest form of journalism that ever existed.

Written in part by Germans and in bastard French, it is technically a mediocre job, barren of news, and filled with clumsy, inept propaganda.

Parisians read it only because of the official announcements it publishes (police regulations, food restrictions, changes in transport services, etc.).

Every day, Paris newspapers exhort Parisians to hatred of the Jew, contempt of the Freemason, mistrust of the Catholic, and antagonism toward Democracy.

With the Catholics, bold frontal attacks are seldom employed; instead, they are assailed by indirection, satire, and innuendo.

When the Bishop of Marseilles, in a sermon, advised patriotic, wholehearted co-operation with the Vichy Government, he was promptly rapped on the knuckles as follows:

We are not impressed by such eloquence, and this mixture of holy water with Vichy water is not to our taste.

Any prelate who dares assert that the present moment in French history is not eternal becomes the victim of sarcasm, mockery and ridicule.

VIVID Fifth column anecdotes are told about the Herr Direktor of Germany's French-language Press in Paris.

He is a German army captain with a Ph.D. degree from Leipzig.

Despite his aristocratic background, he formerly held down the subaltern job of elevator man in the principal Paris newspaper, Paris-Soir.

For five years he played the role of the dumb elevator man, asking dumb questions and doing dumb things in a dumb way. Nobody suspected his true identity.

All the while, with patience and tenacity, he was organizing a crew of compositors and pressmen, of reporters and editors, to be used when and if....

When the Nazis reached Paris, he doffed his elevator man's uniform and donned that of a German army captain.

The transition was speedy :11 a.m., elevator man; 3 p.m., business manager and editor-in-chief combined.

In his new post, he worked with zeal and dispatch.

Exactly twelve hours after the German troops entered Paris, he published a special edition of Paris-Soir—one million copies—in which the Nazis told the Parisians, in unmistakable language, what was expected of them.

• Enough to Buy an Air Fleet

AMONG the statements which Canadians are going to hear rather frequently during the next few days while the national salvage campaign is getting into its stride are some which will produce a sense of shock. For example, at a time when everyone has learned something of the importance of conserving foreign exchange, it is not pleasant to be told that Canada has to pay out $15,000,000 annually to buy scrap steel, rags and waste paper from the United States. If we spent the $15,000,000 for fighter airplanes instead of for material which we ourselves waste, the sum would purchase five or six hundred of them—enough perhaps to be the deciding factor in the warfare now going on in Greece or in Libya.

According to authoritative estimates, the people of Canada waste each year some $22,000,000 worth of scrap metal, scrap textiles and scrap paper. Much of the paper and rags gets burned and the scrap metal is left in farmers' fence corners or in the scrap heaps of machine shops, garages or foundries. If we saved all this scrap material we could possibly export about $7,000,000 of it to the United States instead of having to import $15,000,000 worth.

Here is another way of looking at it. The difference in national efficiency between our present position where we have to buy $15,000,000 worth of scrap metal, textiles and paper and the position where we would be saving the $22,000,000 worth which we now waste can be expressed by adding the two figures together. The sum is $37,000,000. If we sent that amount of money to Lord Beaverbrook to pay for Spitfires, it would buy 1,609 planes. If we ourselves spent the same amount in the United States for some of the best fighter planes that country is producing it would buy between 900 and 1,000 Curtis P-40's or other similar models.

Still another important factor enters into the salvaging of waste materials. It is the factor of getting them speedily to the war materials manufacturers in this country who need them badly as raw materials. In the case of scrap steel especially there is every prospect of a shortage in the United States. The plants in that country which will be making tanks and guns at an ever increasing rate will need all the scrap steel they can get their hands on. We in Canada will have to supply ourselves.

The salvage campaign now under way in Kingston and all other cities in Canada is not consequently just another mere fad. It is a very vital section of the national war effort. It probably should have been begun many months ago. Now that it is under way, it deserves the support of the entire population of the Dominion.—Kingston Whig-Standard.

QUISLINGS MAKE HAY

TWO ITEMS just reported from Oslo give a certain idea of how corruption is flourishing within the "New Order" in Norway:

The wife of Nazi-appointed State Councillor Hustad bought, together with members of her family, 36 suits and coats plus a generous supply of underwear, in the space of three months. Under the clothing-rationing system this is the equivalent of 7,060 coupons, whereas the family was entitled to only 420 coupons for this period of time.

The 92 automobiles of the Norwegian Nazi party in Oslo now receive a total of 500 gallons of gasoline a month. Patriotic Norwegians can get no gas for their cars, so the only vehicles on Oslo streets are those of the German army, the Reichskommissariat and of Norwegian Nazis.—News of Norway.

UNTIL VICTORY

"IT'S just one campaign after another," a citizen complained the other day. "When are we going to come to an end of these money-raising campaigns?"

Never, brother, until victory is won. After all, the Canadian public as a whole hasn't got down to real financial sacrifice yet on behalf of crushing Hitler. If old Nasty should win, nothing would be worth anything. But he isn't going to win if Canada's utmost thrown in the pile is going to stop him. And he will be stopped. In the meantime the folks at home should count it a privilege to give, give, give.—St. Mary's Journal-Argus.

Be ye therefore followers of God, as dear children.... For ye were sometimes darkness, but now are ye light in the Lord; walk as children of light.... Waiting For Him

At the village church it was th... custom to wait until the squire arrived. But a visiting parson, unaware of this, began before the local ... thy was in his seat.

"When the wicked man—" he read, when the verger broke ... with a quite audible whisper:

"He hasn't coom yet!"

Right Or Wrong?

The prisoner was a very to... ghlooking customer. He was ... asked whether he could read or write.

"I can write but I cannot read," was the reply.

He was then asked to write ... his name and after he had scrawled huge letters over the page was asked what it meant.

"I dunno," said the man, "I told you I can't read."

ST. ANDREW'S, SCOTLAND, IS PLACE FOR GOLF'S HALL OF FAME

P.G.A. Idea Is Termed Out Of Place

(By GEORGE WHITTAKER.)

MONTREAL, April 17. — What right has the United States Professional Golfers' Association to create golf's Hall of Fame? This question has been bothering me ever since I read a dispatch from Chicago saying that the P.G.A. had adopted Fred Corcoran's idea and named Bobby Jones, Francis Ouimet, Walter Hagen and Gene Sarazen as the first stars to be honored with membership....Plans call for the erection of a shrine for the game at Augusta, Ga., similar to baseball's Hall of Fame at Cooperstown, N.Y.....The proper and only place for such a shrine is St. Andrew's, Scotland, recognized as the cradle of the Royal and Ancient pastime....Surely, the P.G.A. idea will not be taken seriously by golfers outside the United States unless the Royal and Ancient Club at St. Andrews has something to do with it....Jones, Ouimet, Hagen and Sarazen probably deserve being honored for their contributions to the welfare of the game in an outstanding manner....But what about such Old Country stars as Ted Ray, Harry Vardon, Abe Mitchell?....In their day they stood out as individual stars....There were other British players before them who deserve having their individual merits perpetuated such as Tom Morris, Jr., George S. Lyon, Canada's great amateur of a decade ago, is another whose name could be added to those already mentioned if the sponsors wanted to enlarge on their present idea....No Hall of Fame would be complete without the old-time stars, who made their individual feats stand out without the help of modern clubs and ball, and until the golfing greats of by-gone years are given their proper places along with Jones, Ouimet, Hagen and Sarazen, the movement by the U.S.P.G.A. will not prove popular with a majority of the masses that have made golf one of the most popular of sporting pastimes.

Women also will be eligible for election to membership....Two members will be selected each year by sports writers of the United States....Membership will also be open to those persons even though they were born in another country. ....It is the wish of the U.S.P.G.A. that the Hall of Fame be continued along the broadest possible lines, and that the selection committee and the sports writers of the U.S. have full and complete jurisdiction in naming persons selected.....It really looks as if is should be called the "United States Golf Hall of Fame"....We know the names of two women golfers who should have no difficulty in being given a place in a world-wide Hall of Fame.... Cecil Leith and the former Joyce Wethered....They carried the feminine golfing torch in the Old Country for years....There has been no woman comparable to Joyce, who proved more than a match for several low handicap male players during her reign as British Queen of the fairways.

Pan-American Belle

One of the more beautiful phases of the celebration marking Pan-American Day in Miami is Carolyn Wells, who makes her bow to the good neighbors to the south in an Ecuadorean hat and serape, ideal for beach lounging. The Pan-American influence will be dominant in beach fashions of the coming season, we're told.

SPORTS - DAY BY DAY

By FRED D. CRAIG

Apparently some one has forgotten to tell the Philadelphia Athletics that the Yanks have been given a 50-50 chance to win the American League pennant this year. Anyway Connie Mack's team who threw a gob or two of gloom into the Yanks' opening Tuesday went right back at the New Yorkers yesterday and trimmed them again, this time in a slugging fest. The score was 10 to 7 and the A's outhit Joe McCarthy's club 13 to 10 despite a home run by Joe DiMaggio. Potter did the heaving for the winners and Breuer started for the losers. Detroit also encountered trouble when they were beaten 8 to 1 by St. Louis with Elden Auker, submarine hurler and former Tiger getting a big kick out of beating his old clubmates and Buck Newsom. The Browns would have had a shutout if Rudy York hadn't kicked in with his first homer of the season.

* * * * * *

Although the National League pitching as a whole was decidedly more effective than the brand handed out by American League gunners the best individual hurling performance of the day was credited to an American loop heaver, Al Milnar of the Cleveland Indians holding the Chicago White Sox to two hits and shutting them out. The Indians only came through with six safe blows off Smith but one of them was a homer by Hal Trosky with two runners on and another, a four-sacker by Little Thunder Weatherly with one mate crossing the plate ahead of him. Boston Red Sox made their record two straight by defeating Washington 8 to 7 in twelve innings. Once again the Sox did not get any pitching but their bats were swinging merrily. Joe Cronin and Bobby Doer each repeated their opening day feat by crashing out homers and Tabor also banged one for the circuit. Boston scored three in the ninth to sew up the game and got the winning counter after three extra frames.

* * * * * *

In the National League the world champion Cincinnati Reds had again to say uncle for the St. Louis Cardinals who outscored Bill McKechnie's club 4 to 2 with Cooper holding the Reds to five hits. Vandermeer was the losing twirler. In the greater New York private war the Giants once more took the Brooklyn Dodgers into camp this time by 3 to 1. The New York club was outhit 6 to 5 but the slap-happy Dodgers came up with four errors that did not help their cause much. With Salvo pitching one of his super-fine games the Boston Bees defeated the Phillies 4 to 1, getting revenge for the opening day trouncing they received from the same club. Chicago and Pittsburg were rained out. The net result of the doings in both loops is that the Boston Red Sox and the New York Giants, neither of which figured largely in the pre-season guessing are leading their respective leagues.

Cricketers Meet Tonight

The fact that a meeting of the Peterborough Cricket Club has been called for tonight in the Chamber of Commerce prompts the statement that this is undoubtedly Peterborough's oldest sporting organization. The records show that the cricket club was functioning as far back as 1859 and has been operating almost continuously ever since, although there was a lapse during the years of the last war and the organization did not revive again until 1924. Two members of the 1913 cricket club were killed in action during the first Great War. It is worthy of note that when The Examiner moved out of its old quarters on George street into the building now occupied some ancient cricket score books dating back to the 60's were discovered and were deposited in the Public Library for safe-keeping. Whitaker's Cricket Club, the second of the two local organizations playing the grand old game was organized in 1933.

* * * * * *

Cricket enthusiasts realize that this will be a difficult season owing to the number of players who have already enlisted and also to the fact that many of the plants on war work will be busy Saturday afternoon. However, it is hoped to keep the game going here this summer by co-operation between the two clubs to make it possible to field one good team every Saturday, in spite of the difficulties in the way. Cricket too may get some reinforcements from former soccer players who also have played cricket. Apparently there will be little doing on the soccer front and if that proves to be the case some of the former footballers may be available to fill the gaps in the ranks of the cricket organization.

All church organizations interested in softball are asked to note that there will be a meeting of the Church Softball League at the Y.M.C.A. on Monday evening next at 7 o'clock and it is highly important that all clubs who intend to operate should be represented at this gathering. The church hockey league fell through this season largely due to the fact that church organizations failed to show any interest in meetings called to organize the campaign and as a result the final decision was not to operate the league at all. There is a danger that the softball league will suffer the same fate unless the churches who desire to enter teams in the various divisions this season will demonstrate their interest by having representatives present at the organization meeting Monday night. It is up to the various organizations to get busy if they want church softball this summer.

We Want The Dope

We are not quite sure whether or not we failed to mention some one's pet softball club in a paragraph on the pastime that appeared in last night's issue. Anyway some one rang this column's telephone early in the evening said "I see you dug out a couple of softball teams in tonight's paper," gave a sarcastic laugh and hung up. Apparently we overlooked a bet somewhere but we are not going to weep over that. The incident however affords an opportunity for saying something that might as well be said now and that is that while this column is open for legitimate news of all sport, we are not mind-readers or scientific investigators and if any of the clubs have secrets we cannot be expected to dig them out. In other words if clubs in any line of sport want publicity we expect co-operation from them. If there's anything doing in your favorite sport let's know about it. The column is at your disposal but you cannot expect us to guess the news.

Well they've finally given Montreal fans a chance, but only one, to see the Royal Juniors in action in the Memorial Cup finals against either Winnipeg Rangers or Saskatoon Quakers. The C.A.H.A. moguls who forced the Montreals to play all five of the Eastern finals against the Oshawa Generals in Toronto have opened their hearts and now announced that the second game of the final series will be staged in Montreal. The first and third games will be played at Maple Leaf Gardens and the fourth and fifth if they are needed will also be billed at the arena of which the C.A.H.A. registrar is manager. The argument in favor is that the magnates expect to pull bigger gates there than in Montreal and by this time the hockey public is convinced that gate receipts rather than any consideration for hockey as a sport actuate the decisions of the folk who govern amateur hockey. John Ross Robertson influence seems to have been completely eliminated from the management of hockey affairs today.

Sporting Chili Con Carne: In answer to an inquiry St. Louis had a club in the National Hockey League in the season of 1934-35. Bill Cowley and Syd Howe were members of the club....Brantford defeated Frank Black's Oshawa Bees last night 8 to 6....Farmer, who broke his cheekbone in the last game against Oshawa will likely be lost to the Royals in the Memorial Cup finals. He will be missed and how....International League was due to open this afternoon....Joe DiMaggio has started out in rare form for the Yanks. After getting two for four in his first two games DiMag came through yesterday with four hits, including a homer, out of five times at bat....Kirby Higbe gave up only give hits but lost his first start with the Brooklyn Dodgers.

No Ice Available For Montreal Game

MONTREAL, April 17 — (CP). — Tommy Gorman, general manager of the Canadian Arena Company, announced today that ice will not be available at The Forum here next Wednesday night, date of the one home game allotted Montreal Royals in the best-of-five Dominion Junior hockey final.

A meeting of the team's executive was called for later today to discuss whether Royals could ice a team for the final if held in Toronto as planned. Four of the players are writing exams at McGill University.

Inherits $9789 From Dog

PHILADELPHIA, April 17.—(AP) —Not that it was any surprise to Mrs. Elizabeth Shrouds but she's inherited $9,789.50 from a dog named Chico. For five years she cared for the canine. As a result Judge Charles Sinkler awarded her the sum on receiving proof of Chico's death. The money was set aside in trust at the direction of Mrs. Katherine B. Pearce to care for her pets after her death in 1934. Mrs. Shrouds was a niece.

TORONTO, April 17 — (CP). — Thornton Mustard, who died in the torpedoing of the steamship Athenia, September 3, 1939, will be honored for his work in assembling the new program of studies in Ontario schools when his portrait will be unveiled at the Normal School tomorrow night. The portrait was painted by Charles MacGregor, O.S.A.

JACK MINER'S ROBIN

KINSVILLE, Ont.—(CP).—Naturalist Jack Miner has word from Hillsboro, Alabama, of a robin banded at the Miner sanctuary here meeting death flying against a wire fence.

Hurst Is Given Big Chance To Take Title

MONTREAL, April 17.—"Dave Castilloux doesn't fight better against Harry Hurst next Tuesday night at the Forum than he did against Victor Troise in Toronto, Hurst will knock him out."

So predicts Promoter Jimmie McKimmie, who went to Toronto to look over the Monday night battles in which four Montrealers turned in victories. Castilloux scored on a technical knockout over Troise; Maxie Berger whipped Manuel Villa; Johnny Greco whipped Art Watson, and Douggie Marsh easily won a preliminary.

"Castilloux didn't really do as well against Troise as Hurst," asserted McKimmie. "The fight changed all my opinions that Hurst had a minor chance with Castilloux. Now I think he has a big chance to become the next Canadian light-champion, and replace Castilloux as the opponent for Sammy Angott in Louisville next month.

No Knockdowns.

"Castilloux won, but he didn't score a knockdown and if Troise hadn't suffered a severe eye-cut, it would have been tough for Castilloux. On the other hand, Hurst had Troise out in the first round, when they fought in New York. He caught Troise right on chin, dumped him down, and he was out, and carried to his corner. But Morrie Foreman threw away his chance for having another k.o. credited to Hurst by agreeing to let him fight all over again. Result was, Hurst got only a draw, instead of a k.o. win.

"This Troise is an awkward tough fellow. He forced a lot of the fighting, and made it tough for Castilloux, although Dave was a little too smart for him."

Both Hurst and Castilloux arrived in Montreal Wednesday. Hurst came in from New York where he has been working with a variety of high-class sparring partners, gaining experience and poise. Castilloux returned from Toronto. The "cut" Castilloux was reported to have suffered was nothing more than the scratch he sustained at the gloved hand of Johnny Greco, when in training here for the Troise match. It is merely a surface abrasion, and of no consequence.

Pleads Not Guilty

PORT ARTHUR, Ont., April 17 (CP)—Sylvester Downey, Horne-Payne, Ont., locomotive engineer, pleaded not guilty to a charge of manslaughter at his trial which opened before Mr. Justice J. Keiller Mackay in the Supreme Court of Ontario here yesterday.

The charge arose from the death of Lawrence R. Sullivan, locomotive fireman as a result of injuries suffered in a head-on collision between two Canadian National Railways trains at White Otter, Ont., last Dec. 23.

INDIANS' HAPPY MILNAR SHUTS OUT CHICAGO WHITE SOX BY 6-0

Red Beaten 4-2 By Cards; Giants Win 3-1

By JUDSON BAILEY
(Associated Press Sports Writer.)

For reasons that never have been clear, a lot of people in baseball do not think Albert Joseph (Happy) Milnar is a first rate pitcher, although he won 18 games for Cleveland Indians last year.

His critics have pointed out that although he was a tremendous success in the Southern Association, he was no great shakes with Milwaukee Association or with Cleveland in two seasons preceding 1940.

It looks now as if the 27-year-old southpaw may be able to convince the skeptics that his steady, effective effort last year was his real gait and that his two seasons with New Orleans, where he won a total of 46 games and lost 18, were no fluke.

Milnar shut out Chicago White Sox 6-0 on two singles yesterday. He was superb. The hits he gave came in succession in the fifth inning after two were out and only one other Chicago batter got on base in the whole game.

Other flag hopefuls in both leagues were treated as roughly yesterday as they had been on opening day.

Cincinnati Reds were cut down again by St. Louis Cardinals 4-2 with Mort Cooper besting Johnny Vander Meer. Cooper gave only five hits and fanned seven. Vander Meer gave seven and struck out eight, but also walked six.

Brooklyn Topples.

Brooklyn was bumped a second time by New York Giants 3-1 in another pitching duel between Harry Gumbert and Kirby Higbe.

Manuel Salvo held the Phillies to three hits as Boston Bees banged out a 4-1 triumph.

New York Yankees dropped a slugging session to Philadelphia Athletics 10-7. Five runs were bunched in a big sixth inning. Nelson Potter plodded the whole route for the A's, yielding 10 hits, including round-trippers by Twink Selkirk and Joe DiMaggio, who also had two doubles and a single.

Detroit's American League Champion Tigers made a delayed start at St. Louis and were beaten 8-1 by the Browns, just as they had been on opening day last year. Elden Auker muzzled the Tigers with four hits while the Browns tore into Buck Newsom and Dizzy Trout for 14 and crowded seven runs into the eighth inning.

Boston Red Sox took their second straight from Washington Senators 8-7, but had to go 12 innings to do it.

Yesterday's Stars

By The Associated Press.

Dick Siebert, Athletics—Hit two homers and a single to lead onslaught against Yankees.

Elden Auker, Browns—Held Tigers to four hits.

Pete Fox, Red Sox — Hit three singles, one of them driving home winning run in 12th inning against Senators.

Meet Mr. Freiburger

VERN FREIBURGER

Cleveland has taken many young stars off the sandlots and turned them into major league players. In Vernon Freiburger, southpaw first baseman, the Tribe comes up with another.

Freiburger, only 17 years old, is a product of the Detroit sandlots. Two years ago he was just another American Legion player. He moved along fast and played Class A ball last year.

The young infielder is a six-footer and weighs 170 pounds. He bats righthanded.

Billy Conn Frets At Delay In Louis' Battle

PITTSBURG, April 17.—(AP)—The maddest guy in the fistic world today is Billy Conn—mad because he figures the lush heavyweight title is right within his grasp and yet no word from Promoter Mike Jacobs that his fight with Joe Louis is "on."

Jacbos had said the scrap would be held in June but now, for reasons best known to himself, he wants it postponed to July.

Which rubbed the fur the wrong way on both Conn and his manager, Johnny Ray. Johnny says June would be the better month from the financial angle. Conn would be at his peak then and might suffer from the month's lay-over if the fight is postponed.

"Wouldn't you be sore?" declared Conn, pointing out he retired undefeated as light heavyweight champion and hasn't been beaten in the heavyweight division.

"This fight is all I've lived for, all I've ever wanted.

Many sport experts think the slim 175-pound dancing master of the ring would be mismatched against the 200-pound heavyweight champion, but Conn is among the group contending that a good man weighing 175 can take on anyone, no matter how big.

Royals Get Campbell

MONTREAL, April 17 — (CP).—Montreal Royals of the International Baseball League have acquired Paul Campbell, 24, on option from the Boston Red Sox and he will take over first-base duties to-day at the opening game at Newark, it was announced last night by Hector Racine, president of the Montreal Baseball Club.

Campbell played last season with Louisville of the American Association and led the league in fielding with an average of .992. He participated in 150 games and batted .284 including four home runs and seventeen three-base hits.

Leafs Step Out Today In Baltimore

NEW YORK, April 17 (AP)—If the heat wave which got the Major Leagues off to a good start Tuesday can hold out a little longer, the "Little Brothers" of the International League will break open their 58th consecutive season today.

As always, the "southern" clubs will do the entertaining first, with Jersey City welcoming Rochester, Newark playing host to Montreal, Baltimore receiving Toronto and Syracuse engaging Buffalo. Each of the four "northern" teams will make the rounds of the southern parks before they go back for their home openers on May 1.

Providing Old Sol co-operates, a total of about 90,000 spectators is anticipated by the club owners with more than half of them scheduled to look in at Roosevelt Stadium, the home of the Jersey Giants.

Mayor Frank Hague has declared the annual half-holiday for the occasion and a new minor league attendance record may be established. The present record of 50,529 paid admissions was set there last year.

Four new managers will make their debut. Tony Cuccinello has replaced Bert Niehoff at the helm of the Jersey Giants and will fill in at second base. Al Vincent, up from Beaumont of the Texas league directs the Buffalo Bisons, Benny Borgmann holds the reins on Syracuse Chiefs and Lena Blackburne will be in charge of Toronto Leafs, who finished in the cellar last year under Tony Lazzeri.

KEEP REGULAR WITHOUT "DOSING"

Try the "Better Way" for More Than Temporary Relief

LONDON, Canada: Doctors will tell you common constipation is caused often by lack of the right kind of "bulk" in the diet. "Dosing" constipation gives only temporary relief. KELLOGG'S ALL-BRAN gets at the cause and corrects it . . . naturally.

ALL-BRAN supplies the proper kind of "bulk" to help you keep regular. It's delicious, too. Eat it every day, as a cereal or in crisp muffins, and drink plenty of water. But remember, ALL-BRAN doesn't work like purgatives. It takes time. At your grocer's, in two convenient sizes. Or in individual serving packages at restaurants. Made by Kellogg's in London, Canada.

Quakers Tie Up Western Junior Finals

SASKATOON, April 17.—(AP).—A fast-skating Saskatoon junior hockey team is determined not to give up without a terrific struggle its bid for the western junior hockey title.

Quakers defied general opinion last night as they swamped Winnipeg Rangers 10-2 to deadlock the best-of-seven western final at three games each and force a sudden-death game at Winnipeg to-morrow. One of the smallest playoff crowds in modern Saskatoon hockey history, less than 2,000 saw the Quakers' final home appearance.

Penalties played a large part in Rangers' downfall as they sought to end the series in six games and qualify for the Dominion final with Montreal Royals. Six of Quakers' goals were scored while Rangers were a man short.

Mike Shabaga led Saskatoon goal-getters with three, while Laycoe, who missed the last game because of bronchial trouble, had two and Eddie Watson, Ken Ullyot, Tony Lewick, Harry Watson and Keith Allen one each. Defenceman Bill Schmidt and Winger Dave Livingstone had three assists each and Ed Watson, Ullyot and Bill Sloboda one each. Les Hickey scored both Winnipeg goals.

Outstanding performer in the Rangers' losing game was their tall goalie, Hal Thompson, whose work was of the sensational variety in every period.

Jockey Pulled Four Mounts But Fifth Went On To Win

LOS ANGELES, April 7—(AP).—Willis Ward, 9-year-old suspended jockey, told a Superior Court jury he pulled four mounts in one day of the 1939 Hollywood Park season, but his fifth horse won despite his efforts to make it lose.

Testifying in the trial of five men on jockey-bribery charges, Ward declared he received $200 for each race he kept his horse from winning. He said he was paid approximately $4,000 for fixing races at Hollywood Park and Del Mar Tracks in 1939.

In one seven-horse race at Del Mar on August 18, Ward testified, every rider but one was fixed, and the horse ridden by the unbribed jockey won.

On trial are Barnard and William Einstoss, Benjamin Chapman, L W. Kivel, and Sol Greenberg.

Miss Mary Gillman, who died in Dublin, Eire, bequeathed $4,000 to Harold H. Maxwell, an attorney, "as a memento."

Hitler To Tumble On His Load Halifax Assures

NEW YORK, April 17 (CP).—Hitler can be expected to make every effort, "by ruthless attacks on shipping and indiscriminate night bombing, to smash the centre of resistance," Viscount Halifax, British Ambassador to the United States, said here last night.

Axis successes in the Balkans and North Africa have caused "grave repercussions," Lord Halifax told a banquet given in his honor by the English Speaking Union, but they have thwarted Hitler's hopes for further conquest by diplomatic means and have prevented the concentration of striking power against Great Britain herself—"in the only theatre which could be decisive."

In the Balkans, he said, "the situation is still far from clear, but it is evident that the German forces, moving in overwhelming strength at a moment chosen by themselves, have had, as they were bound to have, a large measure of initial success."

He said British forces in Africa were "deliberately weakened" to rush aid to Yugoslavia and Greece, making it "necessary to withdraw in Libya to new positions, and though we have suffered loss in doing so, we have made the enemy pay dearly for his advance."

Now the Axis forces in Africa are facing the problem of extended supply lines, and "a stream of British reinforcements is steadily flowing into that theatre," he said.

Seen from the long view — "on large scale maps"—Hitler is faced with resistance he did not expect, Lord Halifax said, and also with "all the expenditure of effort and interruption of vital economic supplies that this involves."

The Axis must reckon finally, he said, with other vital forces: The "united and inexorable purpose" of democracies when finally set upon a course of action; the "hatred" of conquered populations; and the heavy hand of sea power, which like Samson, "in the end will play the largest part in bringing down the pillars of the Nazi temple."

Berthas Limber Up

The shelling began just before 1 o'clock and single shells landed in the Dover area at intervals of two minutes without doing much damage. Dover's shell fire warning did not sound.

Half an hour after the first guns opened up the attack continued spasmodically.

CANADIANS AT WAR

THE CANADIAN PRESS, Canada's national news service, covers them thoroughly whether they patrol the skies above Europe, stand ready on the Channel for invasion or fight the Battle of the Atlantic. A band of eight eager young CP men work tirelessly in embattled London, with the Canadian Corps and at sea to send Canadian newspaper readers a true picture of the glorious part the Dominion's sons are playing in this Second Great War. All Canadians, they sail with Canada's Navy on the Atlantic, live with the troops in England and keep night-long vigils at R.C.A.F. stations to write fast, accurate and intimate reports of the achievements of Canada's fighting men. Here you meet two of them.

SAM ROBERTSON,
who recently scooped the world on the torpedoing of several vessels in a convoy with which he sailed to Canada. Soon to resume his post as London Superintendent, Robertson will move to the front as a War Correspondent should Hitler attempt invasion. Thirty-five, Robertson is a veteran of 21 years newspaper work in Canada, the U.S. and England.

(CP)

The hallmark of news integrity.

ROSS MUNRO,
27-year-old CP War Correspondent, who lives with the Canadian Corps and writes daily stories on its activities, from invasion preparations to softball games. Scion of a distinguished newspaper family, Munro left his Ottawa post on a few hours notice last September to sail on a former U.S. destroyer to England and don a War Correspondent's uniform.

Besides these, The CP London staff includes six other young men who share the fortunes of the front line to bring you news of the bomb blitz, the changes war has brought in Britain's way of life, the stirring deeds of her navy, army and air force and the stories of those who have escaped death from German torpedoes.

They have been bombed in their homes, on the way to work and in their former office—later destroyed by incendiary bombs. One heard Nazi bombs thud nearby as he lay helpless in hospital. But none has been hurt; all are eager to stay in London for the duration.

2 Drunks Fined In Lindsay Court

LINDSAY, April 17 — (ENS). — Magistrate O. A. Langley, K.C., of Peterborough, held court here yesterday with three cases on the docket. Wilfred Moase of Mariposa was arrested in the early hours of the morning in an intoxicated condition and pleaded guilty. A fine of $14.00 was imposed. H. Hannah, town, while in an intoxicated condition, raised a disturbance in a local restaurant on Tuesday night. He pleaded guilty and was assessed $19.90. H. Webster of Fenelon Falls, who a week ago, granted a week's adjournment on the charge of having liquor illegally, presented a telegram from his solicitor, I. Strachan, in which he asked for a further adjournment until Friday, April 18. This aroused a protest from County Crown Attorney Anderson. Magistrate Langley granted a preemptory until April 18, the accused having to pay the adjournment fees.

Victor Lane, aged 19, of Valentia, who accidentally shot himself while hunting groundhogs on the farm of his father, Charles Lane, on Thursday, is resting as well as could be expected in the Ross Hospital. Hopes are held out for his recovery. He was climbing a fence carrying a .22 rifle when he lost his balance and fell on the weapon, the bullet lodging in the pit of his stomach. After the accident he crawled to the nearest farmhouse, 500 yards away, his father stated.

Fred Lodge, town, employed with the Bridge and Building Department of the C.N.R., is in the Ross Hospital as a result of an accident sustained at Madoc at midnight on Tuesday. He was assisting in unloading logs from a flat car when a nail in a log caught his glove. Before he was able to pull the glove off, the log hurled him to the ground, about fifteen feet. In falling Mr. Lodge alighted on his head. He was rushed to the hospital here and an X-ray examination revealed that Mr. Lodge had sustained three fractured ribs and badly strained neck muscles.

All Male Public School Teachers To Sign Minimum Salary Pledge Of $800 Yearly

TORONTO, April 17.—All male public school teachers in Ontario will be asked to sign a pledge that they will not accept a salary of less than $800 yearly, it was decided yesterday at the annual meeting of the Ontario Public School Men Teachers' Federation.

At the meeting a survey was presented showing that there are 525 men teachers in rural districts who are receiving less than $800. It was announced that male students in normal schools have been approached on the matter of an $800 minimum and have agreed in principle.

The survey also showed that a number of male public school teachers are planning to leave the profession and secure employment in other lines, where the remuneration is higher.

On the question of superannuation it was decided to ask the Superannuation Commission of the Department of Education for some allowance for the widows of teachers, in the form of partial pension for life. The federation also asked for the inclusion in the superannuation scheme of teachers who enlist for active service.

A resolution, addressed to the National Education Association of the United States, was passed expressing approval of the growing solidarity of the two countries as evidenced by the lease-lend bill.

Arrangements were made for a concerted membership drive, particularly in the outlying rural districts. Some of the urban centres are practically solid in federation membership.

The speakers at the annual luncheon were L. A. Campbell, secretary of the Trustees' Associations of Ontario; J. Noseworthy of J. W. Ansley of the Secondary School Teachers' Federation.

Major R. J. Bolton of Peterborough, 1940 president, presided. New officers elected were: President, W. Gordon Loney, Kitchener; first vice-president, Clare Fallis, Toronto; second vice-president, R. C. MacLean, Waubaushene; secretary-treasurer, J. W. Cawood, York Township; assistant secretary, V. J. Huggins, Toronto. The executive committee will be composed of one representative from each of the twenty districts in the Province.

A Pimple Covered Face Kills Many a Romance

The lives of many young people are made miserable by the breaking out of pimples, and you probably know of cases where a promising romance has been spoiled by those red, white, festering and pus filled sores on the face.

The trouble is not so much physical pain, but the mental suffering caused by the embarrassing disfigurement which very often makes the sufferer ashamed to go out in company.

The quickest way to get rid of pimples is to improve the general health by a thorough cleansing of the blood.

Burdock Blood Bitters helps to cleanse the blood and with the blood cleansed the complexion should clear up.

seemed to be following the lines of the Thames but later they spanned out to almost every section of the metropolis.

The whine and crunch of bombs and the crash of ground guns ruined any thought of sleep and there seldom was a quiet interval of more than two or three minutes.

Business and residential districts suffered alike. Observers at one post said they counted no fewer than 75 to 100 bomb bursts in their area alone. Many areas were roped off because of unexploded bombs.

(A slight interruption of communications between the Canadian Press office in London and New York indicated a time bomb forced evacuation temporarily of the London office. The staff had been in new quarters since the Associated Press building, in which the Canadian Press had offices, was destroyed by fire in the Dec. 29 attack.

(Both the National Broadcasting Company and the Columbia Broadcasting System announced in New York that their London offices had been wrecked by bombs. Their staffs escaped. It was the third time C. B.S. had been bombed out and the second for N.B.C.)

Scenes of Destruction.

At dawn, the streets — littered with broken glass, smashed masonry, furniture and clothing—were filled with dozens of families forced to flee by fires which had spread from building to building before fire-fighters brought them under control.

Five raiders were shot down, two by anti-aircraft fire and three by night fighters. Four German airmen captured and taken to a police station had to be hustled off to another station because of a time bomb near the first.

Four persons were reported killed in one direct hit on a London shelter and rescuers struggled to lift a huge concrete block trapping others inside. Hundreds in a subway shelter were shaken when a bomb fell nearby, interrupting train service.

A first aid post was hit in another area and a number of persons burned. One of the casualties was James M. Minifie, London correspondent of the New York Tribune, who was caught in a bomb blast. He suffered cuts on the face. Mr. Minifie is a graduate of the University of Saskatchewan.

Train Is Deserted.

Frank Backhouse, Canadian Press office boy, on his way to work during the overnight raid, telephoned the offices of The Canadian Press to say he had taken shelter in a subway and that he and hundreds of others were shaken when a bomb near the station caused a train to be evacuated.

A second blast "a lot nearer," he said, hurled some persons downstairs. No one was seriously injured, he reported.

Eddie Worth, Associated Press photographer, saw a plane hit and telephoned to say "it looked like a huge meteor coming down." People standing in the street and looking at the flash-illuminated sky cheered, he said.

Eddie Gilmore, A.P. staff writer, on his way home from the office, reported that "particularly heavy bombs were falling" and a house where he had dinner was "about the only one in the block with any windows letf in it."

7 Hospitals Damaged.

Firemen and rescue workers dug in the debris throughout the morning to bring out dead and injured. Among the places where casualties were believed heaviest was a hospital where a bomb hit a women's ward. At least seven other hospitals were damaged.

A London theatre was wrecked and two motion picture houses smashed, but the raid came after most patrons had left. In West Central London a bomb demolished an apartment house, pinning a number of tenants under concrete. Another high explosive bomb fell in a tenement courtyard, wrecking a surface shelter.

Traffic was delayed by debris in the streets and thousands had to walk to work this morning, over glass and stains which told a grim story.

One raiding plane brought down in the night exploded in a residential garden and set fire to three houses.

A big bomb plowed a 15-foot crater in a west-end square and the blast sent tons of masonry spilling across the thoroughfare. Two barmaids and the bartender in a nearby pub were killed. Another West-end street was torn up by four craters. Surrounding buildings were shaken lop-sided.

West-end cab drivers, tough veterans of many an air raid, said this undoubtedly was the worst of the lot, and everywhere on the streets could be heard the comment: "It was worse than last September."

The raid was jist as long as most last autumn and as intense as Coventry and the December 29 fire raid here. The autumn attacks were punctuated by lulls, but this one was practically continuous. There were more planes in the sky and observers agreed that more and heavier bombs were dropped.

Orange Leader Urges More Youth Training

BELLEVILLE, Ont., April 17.—(CP)—Concluding session of the 64th annual meeting of the Grand Black Chapter for Eastern Ontario featured yesterday by an address by Grand Master of British America, James Black of Winnipeg.

Present at the meeting were delegates from the Ladies L.O.B.A. including Grand Mistress, Mrs. Sward of Ottawa; Deputy Grand Mistress, Mrs. Tysick of Perth and Past Grand Mistress, Mrs. Moore of Lindsay.

Mr. Black spoke at some length on the subject "The Training of Youth Now," dealing with the advisability of the government training youths and young men for civilian occupation along such lines as agriculture and mechanics, so that men when discharged from the army at the conclusion of the war will be absorbed naturally into industry.

He advocated that the government should make provision for the training of youths ranging from 18 to 20 years so that should they be called up for active service they would already have their occupational training and would be fitted to go into industry when discharged.

(The War Office in London, however, declared it had no confirmation of reports—attributed to German quarters—that the Allied line had been pierced south of Mt. Olympus.)

Galabaka, the immediate objective of the Germans on the central front, is about 30 miles south of Grevena and the northern terminus of a railway to Athens.

From Larisa, south and east of Mt. Olympus, a branch line connects with this railway at Trikkala, 12 miles below Kalabaka.

On the Albanian front, the Greek High Command said, Italian troops moving southward from Corizza (Koritza) have gained control of the Kiasma Marit Gorge (apparently on the Devol River).

The Ministry of Home Security reported that waves of German warplanes had bombed numerous localities behind the lines, but minimized both damage and casualties.

Need Of Civilian Clothes For Britain Stressed

"Don't make what you like, but what the Red Cross needs" is the advice offered to all workers by officials of the Canadian Red Cross. The pressing need of clothing for British civilian requirements and of supplies for the Navy is emphasized and while it is pleasant to knit socks, work on dainty layettes, or make white flannelette nightgowns, it is coats, dresses, skirts, clothing for men, women and children, and warm knitted articles for the Navy that are "musts" at the present time.

With the destruction by bombing of so many homes in England, the need of ever increasing supplies of clothing should be apparent to all. Demands, changing in character to meet the prevailing requirements, are being made constantly by the National Red Cross.

The Peterborough branch, which receives frequent praise from Toronto headquarters for the high quality of work turned out, is at the moment busy with a quota asking for boys' outfits, a practical garb of grey flannel shorts and blazers with two shirts; girls' jumper dresses with blouses and short box coats, as well as girls' grey slacks and red blouses. Boys' mackinaws and baby garments are also a part of this quota, and efficient groups of workers are constantly busy at library work rooms.

The Stars Say

For Friday, April 18

The very intriguing planetary configurations ruling this day may point to definitely radical, sweeping and far-reaching crises, in which the entire future with its destiny and fortunes may be decided upon. There are signs of drama, surprises, peculiar and thrilling experiences as well as most alluring adventures of a private nature, probably concerning the affectional or emotional life. There is also every prospect of the attainment of the ambitions, with the materialization of the most cherished aims and desires.

If It Is Your Birthday

Those whose birthday it is may be on the threshold of a memorable year in which the experiences may be radical as well as romantic, with definite shaping of the future fate and fortune. Surprising and dramatic events are presaged, with probable uprooting, new associations and altered objectives. But the most cherished aims and aspirations as well as worldly ambitions are in line for attainment.

A child born on this day should have many and divers talents, with originality, independence and love of adventure and romance.

County Jail Is Overcrowded Governor Says

"I pointed my finger at them and said 'Stick them up' and they dropped back into the corridor," said Wilfrid Wood, turnkey at the county jail in giving evidence in police court this morning in the charge against Louis Gallow and William Bradd of attempting to break jail here on the night of April 3. Lawrence Burns and Thomas Nicholls had previously pleaded guilty to the same charge and all four men were in court today handcuffed together.

Wood told of seeing Burns and another man at the window of the north corridor and of noticing a portion of the bars on the window missing. It was then that he had made the gesture with his finger and the men had gone back into the corridor.

Bradd was represented by Mannis Frankel while Gallow conducted his own defence. The prosecution was in charge of V. J. McElderry, K.C.

Governor Called

Lieut.-Col. T. D. Johnston, governor of the county jail was the first crown witness. He described the location of the four prisoners on the night of the alleged attempted jail-break. Burns and Nicholls, he said, occupied individual cells on the south corridor and Gallow and Bradd were in a double cell on the north corridor.

The witness said that the prisoners were all locked in their cells at 7 o'clock that night.

"Was the jail over-crowded?"—"It was. Our capacity is 18 male and six female prisoners."

Lieut-Col. Johnston identified a number of padlocks produced as locks from the cells, including one from one of the punishment cells in the corridor. Pieces of iron produced, he said, had been taken from the doors of the toilets, and a long piece of wood had been removed from a table in one of the corridors. The witness also identified a number of sheets tied together as sheets that had been supplied the prisoners and said that the hook at one end of the string had been removed from a radiator in the corridor. A lock which Lieut.-Col. Johnston said had been on the cell in which Gallow and Bradd were locked up was also identified by the witness.

Lieut-Col. Johnston, cross-examined by Mr. Frankel, said that he did not think the door of the punishment cells could be forced open from the inside.

Gallow Cross-Examines

Gallow examined the witness as to the space between the bars on the cells and when the jail governor said that there was less space between the bars on the doors of the cells in the south corridor than those in the north Gallow contradicted him, saying the space was the same in both cases.

"I am living there, you know," he said.

At the request of the magistrate Lieut.-Col. Johnston will measure the space between the bars and will be re-called later on on the point.

Wilfrid Wood, jail turnkey, told how he had discovered Burns and another man which he could not identify at a window when he was making a tour of inspection in the north exercise yard and how he had forced them back into the corridor and prevented their escape.

Wood described the conditions found inside the jail after the attempted escape had been discovered, telling of the breaches in the brick wall between the two punishment cells and also between the cells in which Nicholls and Burns had been confined. The witness also described the cutting of the bars in the door of the cell in which Nicholls had been a prsoner.

L. R. Parks, photographer, was called to identify photographs he had taken in the jail on the day after the alleged jail-break attempt. He was the last witness before the court adjourned for luncheon.

Movie Magnate Is Facing 10 Years As Tax Dodger

NEW YORK, April 17.—(AP). — Multi-millionaire Joseph M. Schenck was convicted early to-day of income tax evasion in 1935 and 1936 and faces possible imprisonment for 10 years and fines of $20,000.

A Federal court jury deliberated 10 hours to find the movie magnate guilty on two of four counts, but acquitted him of tax evasion charges for 1937 and of conspiracy to defraud the government.

Co-defendant Joseph Muskowitz, Schenck's eastern representative, was convicted on the 1936 tax charge and acquitted on the other three counts.

Schenck, board chairman of the Twentieth Century-Fox Film Corporation, was accused of evading $412,000 in taxes during 1935-36-37, while his defence was he had overpayed by $165,000.

A jury foreman, Emerson Hempstead, read the verdict and the filmland pioneer slumped back in his chair and, although his face was red, shrugged his shoulders.

Muskowitz, who faces a possible five-year prison sentence and $10,000 fine, also was red-faced and tears welled in his eyes.

Judge Grover Moscowitz set April 24 as the date for sentencing and filing of any defence motions.

An Important Decision.

In his 2½-hour charge, which the jury caused to be re-read late last night, the Judge declared that "this case is important to the government, because the income tax laws must be enforced."

Both men left the court without comment.

Thus ended the seven-week trial during which the Hollywood magnate heard himself described as:—"A great builder of a great industry—a man loved by everyone—fair to his friends and fair to the government," by defence counsel Harold Corbin.

"Liar-Cheat-Fraud," by United States Attorney Mathias Correa.

Will Hays, movie industry censor head, Charles Chaplin and other film personages testified the reputations of Schenck and Moskowitz were above reproach.

The prosecution produced records showing that Schenck had claimed in his tax returns huge gambling losses; that he neglected to report winnings and that he deducted as "business expenses" free-handed expenditures on women and pleasure parties in Hollywood, New York and Europe.

Four additional officers have been taken on the strength of the Training Centre here in the past two days as platoon commanders, Lt.-Col. E. O. Keeler, M.C., V.D., officer commanding the Centre announced today the officer personnel of the Centre will be at full strength within the next few days.

The four new officers arriving here this week are Major J. C. Irvine, Captain John Briggs and Captain D. F. Adams, all of the Lanark and Renfrew Scottish, R.F., and Captain A. H. Ketcheson of the Argyle Light Infantry, R.F. of Belleville.

The first group of 21-year-old recruits reaching here three weeks ago continue to show high interest in their training and to date have proved themselves very amenable to military discipline. Forty per cent of these recruits were given week-end leave last week and it is expected the remainder will be granted the same privilege at the end of the present week.

Alex Leaitch Acquitted On Theft Charge

In a long judgment this morning Magistrate O. A. Langley, K.C., found Alex. Lealtch, Asphodel drover, not guilty of a charge of having stolen five hogs from Leo Herr, Indian River.

This is in the first of a series of eight similar charges against the Asphodel man. In addition there are some 15 charges of false pretences which Crown Attorney V. J. McElderry, K.C., intimated this morning will be dropped.

"I find it impossible" said Magistrate Langley in giving judgment "to find in fact that there was a fraudulent intention on the part of the accused. He took the very unwise course of running away."

"My duty," said His Worship, "is to decide whether beyond any reasonable doubt it should be found that he fraudulently converted these hogs to his own use. I canot so find. The facts show that he is in the position of a debtor for the price of the hogs." T. J. Carley, K.C., acted for Lealtch.

Outboard Marine Employees Donate $119

The largest of today's contributions to the Peterborough British War Victims' Fund, comes from the employees of the Outboard Marine and Manufacturing Co. of Canada, Ltd. Mrs. A. Lead of 179 Bethune Street, whose husband is employed by the company, donated a handmade crochet bedspread to the girls in the office of the company, requesting that they have a draw, and donate the proceeds to the War Victims' Fund. This was done, and the splendid sum of $105.75 was realized in this manner. The employees bowling club added a further $10.00 from their funds, and one of the employees turned over his prize money of $4.00 to make a grand total of $119.75 to appear in today's list of acknowledgments. The draw on the bedspread was held on Tuesday night, and was won by D. J. Graves of Crawford's Grove. Mr. Graves is an employee of the company.

Three very small girls, Marilyn Cross, Shirley Anderson and Yvonne Manning, made needle cases and sold them, realizing $2.35 for the fund. Among today's receipts were two contributions from Montreal. These were from Douglas H. Clarke, Dean of the Faculty of Music, McGill University, and R. deH. Tupper who is vice-director and secretary of the Conservatorium.

Variety Show Tonight.

Don't forget the variety show being held in the Collegiate Institute tonight and tomorrow night, under the auspices of the C.G.E. Social and Athletic Association. This is an opportunity seldom afforded people in this city, and a real evening's entertainment is assured, with one hundred per cent. of the proceeds going overseas to help the victims of a barbarism never before surpassed in the world's history.

The report from Norwood sent in by D. B. Cutcliffe includes a donation from Alex. Rose of Warsaw, and Mrs. Ellen B. Harper of Norwood.

Friday night, the teachers of South Monaghan are holding a dance in Centreville Hall for the benefit of the Fund, and locally, Charlie Hannigan and his Mountaineers are holding a similar event for the same purpose in the Legion Hall. These various activities, of which there are many going on at the present time in aid of the Fund, afford all an opportunity to help the needs of the British stalwarts, standing up so nobly in the most critical times in the Empire's history, the needs of which are growing, as witness last night's ruthless bombing of London, which to all accounts is the worst yet inflicted on the nation's capital.

Lock Company Building An Extension

Peterborough Lock Company has begun the building of an extension to their factory on Simcoe street to provide more floor space and accommodation for manufacturing.

This addition is 30 feet by 80 feet, rising through two storeys. It is being built at the rear of the main factory.

"We are quite busy, and need more room," said E. H. Howson, general manager.

The company is also altering the exterior of the older section of the factory. Its mansard roof, once an impressive elaboration of the roof that looks down into Simcoe street is coming down, and windows are to be given a modern touch for better lighting.

Women Raised $1,386 For War Purposes

Peterborough citizens will thrill to the presentation of favorite beauty spots in technicolor, and to the discovery of new holiday centres as pointed out by the camera's eye when they witness the moving picture film, "The Call of the Kawarthas," which is to have its first public showing in the Collegiate Auditorium on Monday evening, April 21, under the auspices of the Women's Auxiliary to the Civic War Service Council.

Already the Auxiliary has raised $1,386.00 for war purposes since its organization in July, 1940, in addition to other valuable contributions to the war effort, and proceeds of Monday's undertaking, with Mrs. R. J. Kearns at the head, will be used for war work of the group, and for the British War Victims' Fund, the funds to be divided equally.

The support of every local citizen should be given to this project, which, in addition to the pleasure which the presentation will afford, is undertaken for such a worthwhile and necessary cause. Chief Gimblett, chairman of the Civic War Service Council, will be chairman, and excellent local talent will supply entertainment prior to the film and during a fifteen-minute intermission.

Discuss Need Of Houses In Peterborough

Amendment of the Dominion Housing Act to sanction loans of 90 per cent. on projected houses of estimated value of $3,500 was recommended by a largely attended meeting in the City Council Chamber last night of contractors, realtors and building supplies dealers who responded to Mayor Hamilton's proposal for a conference on Peterborough's war time problem of providing increased housing accommodation.

The resolution by H. J. McCannan, seconded by O. J. Hayward, also suggested to the Federal Government that the terms of the Act be extended to permit loans on houses constructed as investment for rental or sale purposes.

As a means of continuing the effort begun last night to encourage the erection of permanent dwellings in the city, thereby forestalling the necessity of depending on the Government's expedient of pre-fabricated houses for incoming workers in local industries engaged in wartime industries, the following committee was appointed: Fred J. Overend, Harold Scott, O. J. Hayward, Alderman Curtis, H. J. McCannan, J. A. Gibbs, and C. H. Huffman, Jr.

Mayor Hamilton presided, and among those present were Alderman Dutton, Bradburn, Sands and Curtis, and Gordon K. Fraser, M.P.

The meeting was proposed in Council several weeks ago by Alderman Curtis when the shadow of pre-fabrication appeared over Peterborough's normal course of substantial home building, and with it was associated the phrase "shack town."

Need Larger Loans.

The stimulus of the National Housing Act to the building industry, as reflected in the large number of houses erected here in the last three or four years, was gratefuly acknowledged by the various interests represented last night. Many other citizens, it was said, are prepared to undertake the building of houses for themselves on the same general plan, provided that its loan feature is increased.

The Act provided for loans up to 90 per cent. on houses estimated to cost $2,500, but the money thereby made available to the investing home owner is not sufficient to meet building costs this season. Consensus of the meeting was that the Government should be urged to extend that same borrowing percentage on houses that are likely to cost up to $3,500. With that assistance it was confidently believed that many reliable citizens would avail themselves of the Housing Act as it would be revised, and that the approaching emergency in accommodation for people would be provided for without recourse to the pre-fabricated type of houses.

For Rent Or Sale

The Housing Act was devised as a means of encouraging persons to build suitable homes for themselves. The secondary amendment proposed last night was put forward in the hope that the Government would go a step further, permitting loans to persons who would be willing to build one or more houses either for rent or sale.

After welcoming all those who were present, Mayor Hamilton said there was no question about the need of more houses in this city. He said he was informed by Ian McRae, works manager of the Canadian General Electric Company, that eight hundred more employees would be engaged in that plant before long, and as many as possible would be married men.

Damaged British Ships Given Priority In Shipyards Of The United States

WASHINGTON, April 17—(AP)—Secretary of the Navy Frank Knox reported yesterday that the United States is ready, if need be, to delay construction of the new two-ocean navy to assure prompt repairs of war-damaged British vessels in American shipyards.

Forecasting the arrival of "large numbers" of damaged ships such as the battleship Malaya, Knox said they had been given first priority "over everything else in our yards."

"Inevitably where skilled labor is needed, the work will interfere with us," the Naval Secretary said. "But they are operating ships in war service, and we will have to adjust ourselves."

"We hope not," he replied to a press conference question whether the repairs would delay completion of the two-ocean fleet, now scheduled for 1946. Thus far, he added, there was "no possibility" of turning from the construction of battleships to speed work on destroyers.

Secretary Knox also said that, because of the publicity recently given the arrival of the British battleship Malaya in New York harbor, all British naval ships hereafter will enter American harbors at night and their first stop will be in the yards where repairs will be made.

Secretary Knox again said that publication of British ship movements in American waters would be of inestimable value to the Germans and the navy intends to do everything possible to bring about the voluntary suppression by the newspapers of such information

Knox hinted cryptically at the same time that oversight of some kind already is being exercised on international communications as a part of the efforts to aid Great Britain.

Tighter Censorship?

The censorship possibility was mentioned at a press conference discussion of his request to withhold news about arrival of such ships as the damaged battleship Malaya, which put into New York Harbor April 6.

The hint of an existing check on international communications came in response to a question whether the Malaya might not have readily been seen by German representatives in New York and the information telephoned to Berlin.

"If any one had called Berlin, I think it would be known, but I am not going to talk about that," Knox said.

Declining to pursue the subject further, the Naval Secretary said: "I can't think of anything more indiscreet to discuss."

At his press conference, Knox reported also:

Transfer of the operating part of the coastguard to the navy is being discussed. This would strip the coastguard of all but such duties as harbor patrol and lifesaving. In wartime the navy automatically takes over control of the coastguard. Seven large cutters are part of the coastguard's fleet of some four-score seagoing vessels.

The convoy of men and supplies to Greenland is one of the possible contingencies for which "every well-run navy tries to have plans."

A marine guard of one officer and thirty-five men for e London Embassy is to be sent as soon as Ambassador John G. Winant makes a formal request.

The navy plans to resubmit to Congress a proposal for a civilian police force to protect navy yards from sabotage. A previous proposal for civilian police to replace marine guards was turned down.

The navy has 361 combat ships and 484 auxiliary ships under con-s' uction in its own and commercial shipyards. Workers have increased in number from 74,385 at the start of last year to 142,999 on April 12 this year.

As a part of the navy's defence speed-up, the 1942 class at the naval academy is to be graduated December 19 this year, six months ahead of schedule.

Convenient Capture

A Northwestern Town, England, April 17 (CP)

HOME GUARDSMEN emerging from their homes for duty at dawn today rubbed their eyes and beheld—a German airman, caught in his parachute, dangling from a high tension wire tower.

Safely lowered into custody, the aviator told his captors he was a member of a bomber crew and that his three partners had escaped uninjured after their plane was brought down nearby.

See Thermopylae Possible New Allied Line

(By KIRKE L. SIMPSON.)

WASHINGTON, April 17.—(AP)—The British-Greek allies and the Nazi-Fascist war machine are reported locked in a death grapple on a 150-mile front as this is written.

On the outcome of this battle may rest the fate of Greece and of the British army which is bearing the brunt of the German attack. Yet Allied failure to stem the assault on that ill-defined front would not necessarily mean the end of the Battle of Greece. There are even shorter defense lines southward, waterguarded on both flanks, upon which the Allies could rally again.

One such line is 100 miles or so south of the great bend of the Vistritza River, the apparent focal point of the Axis drive in upper Central Greece. It is scarcely seventy-five miles, air line, across Greece at that narrow waistline. Deep arms of the Aegean and the Ionian Seas spear inland from east and west respectively to bolster both flanks against German mechanized might. A front drawn there still would shelter Athens, and cut the battle front in half for the Allies.

There is historic precedent for a Greek stand there, between the Gulf of Arta on the west and the Gulf of Atalantis on the east. Thermopylae Pass, where the Spartan King, Leonidas, with 300 men once battled a great Persian invading army, would be its eastern anchor.

Strategy Rests With Greeks

Nevertheless, failure of the Allies to halt their foes in this present battle would mean surrender of all Central Greece with its wide valley land. Only a narrow strip of Southern Greece proper, and the Peloponnesian Peninsula, itself a waterguarded last refuge, would remain in their hands.

It follows, then, that the Allies will face grave decisions if they fail to halt German columns lunging down from the northeast toward the great bend of the Vistritza River or German-Italian thrusts from the west toward the same point. It would bring the British Command face to face with a bitter alternative, of fighting on in Greece against all odds or attempting a withdrawal virtually certain to be accompanied by terrible losses of men, ships and battle gear.

It appears inescapable that such a decision, if it is forced on the British High Command cannot be made exclusively on military grounds. It must depend largely on what the Greeks do. If they decide to fight on to the bitter end, British desertion of her little ally is hardly conceivable.

Yet purely military considerations well might argue for exactly that course. While the Axis eastward drive in North Africa seems momentarily stalled in the Tobruk-Salum area, it is not certainly checked. Whatever British forces could be salvaged from Greece could be reorganized and thrown fairly quickly into the African battle.

Back-tracking from Greece also might release substantial British fleet and air strength for an attempt to cut Axis North African supply lines across the Straits of Sicily. Nor would German occupation of all Greece, except perhaps the Island of Crete, now a supplementary and important British air and naval base in the Eastern Mediterranean, greatly increase the threat in Africa. British naval power in the Eastern Mediterranean could not be broken by a complete Axis victory in Greece.

Hitler might rest content for the moment with driving the British forces out of their last foothold on the European continent. There are intimations from Berlin that the next phase of the war, if that is accomplished, might revert to diplomatic pressure on Turkey to line up with the Axis.

With British prestige at the low ebb, a complete rout in Greece would mean the Nazi dream of an open road eastward via an unresisting Turkey toward vast and vitally needed oil resources would not be fantastic.

Want Marmora O.V.C. Car Unit

MARMORA, April 17—(ENS). — Fourteen members of the No. 8 District of the Ontario Volunteer Constabulary visited St. Paul's Laymen's Association at their meeting in the Parish Hall on Wednesday.

The president, R. G. Winters, extended a hearty welcome to the visitors and called upon Captain Barragar to introduce Major E. R. Willing. The latter gave an excellent descriptive talk on the reasons for the formation of the O.V.C. and outlined its objects and regulations.

As an ex-member of the Air Force, he was able to draw a sharp contrast between the speed of aircraft to-day and that in the last Great War, instancing thereby that Canada is not so far removed from the scenes of conflict in this war as some would imagine.

Not only is there the enemy without to be considered, but also the enemy within in which case the serviceability of the O.V.C. could be recognized. He hoped it would be possible to form a car unit of the Belleville district in Marmora as a result of their visit.

Also contributing to the enlightenment of the audience were the speeches by Capt. Richardson in command of the Belleville Company, Lieut. W. J. Dougherty and Sergt.-Major F. Wiggins. Thanks of the visitors to the Association for the arrangements made for the meeting and of the association to the visitors for their speeches concluded an interesting meeting.

Guild Euchre.

Under auspices of Group 2 of St. Paul's Ladies' Guild a euchre party was held in the Parish Hall on Tuesday evening with nine tables in play. Prizes were won by Mrs. G. W. Henderson and Mrs. W. Leonard (playing as gentleman).

The drawing for prizes resulted as follows: Bag of sugar, Joan Shannon; bag of flour, Gordon Scott; bag of potatoes, Marjorie Brown.

A Beautiful World

Burlington, Vt., April 17 (AP)

THE world is "beautiful" to Miss Eliza Barnard, 29. She has regained her sight for the first time since she was three months old.

Depending on sight, rather than balance, she notes that it is "difficult" to walk and feels she will have to "learn all over again."

An operation—the 12th she has undergone in 14 years to remove a growth—restored the sight in one eye, though the other remains blind.

RECTAL SORENESS AND PILE TORTURE

QUICKLY RELIEVED

If you are troubled with itching piles or rectal soreness, do not delay treatment and run the risk of letting this condition become chronic. Any itching or soreness or painful passage or stool is nature's warning and proper treatment should be secured at once.

For this purpose get a package of Hem-Roid from McDermid & Jury and Bond's Drug Store or any druggist and use as directed. This formula which is used internally is a small, easy to take tablet, will quickly relieve the itching and soreness and aid in healing the sore tender spots. Hem-Roid is pleasant to use, is highly recommended, and it seems the height of folly for any one to risk a painful and chronic pile condition when such a fine remedy may be had at such a small cost.

If you try Hem-Roid and are not entirely pleased with the results, your druggist will gladly return your money. —(Advt.)

368 GEORGE STREET — PETERBOROUGH

Ottawa's Mayor Advocates Conscription

OTTAWA, April 17 — (CP). — Mayor Stanley Lewis of Ottawa told the annual dinner of the 43rd Regimental Association here last night that it is "up to the Government" to institute conscription for active service.

"If they want to bring the morale of the people up and increase war loans, now is the time to step in and bring in conscription," he said. He referred to an advertisement appearing in Ottawa newspapers Tuesday asking for ten volunteers for active service with No. 1 Ordance Store Company, Royal Canadian Corps, as a "crime."

"The Government has a way of getting these men, and that is by enforcing compulsory military service," he said.

Lt.-Col. G. S. MacFarlane, Officer Commanding the Second Battalion, Cameron Highlanders of Ottawa, a reserve army unit, said the army "definitely needs men who are willing to go on active service whenever they are called."

Gol. George A. Wells, principal Protestant Chaplain of the Canadian Forces, suggested that Canadian newspapers should print daily editorial summaries of the progress of the war, in an optimistic vein.

"I'd rather be an optimist and be wrong than a pessimist and be right," he said.

SAVED BY HUMAN ROPE

When Miss M. Watson, a nurse, was carried out to sea while swimming at Opoutama, New Zealand, men and women formed a human rope team and battled the heavy surf for nearly an hour before they rescued her.

President's Son Weds Former Nurse

Rawdon Parish Honors Rev. Canon and Mrs. W. G. Swayne On Their Departure

BONARLAW, April 17 (ENS)—On Thursday evening of last week a large number of the parishioners and neighbors of Rev. Canon and Mrs. W. G. Swayne gathered in the Sunday school rooms of St. Mark's Church and presented them with a floor lamp and a purse of money and their son Robert with a pen and pencil set. An address was read on behalf of the parishioners and neighbors expressing their regret that Canon and Mrs. Swayne and Robert are soon to leave this community and paid tribute to their devotion to their duty during the past eight years and more that they have labored in this parish:

In replying, both the Canon and Mrs. Swayne expressed their sorrow at leaving the kind friends of the community and thanked all for the beautiful gifts. They also begged all to carry on the work with the same loyalty and devotion that they have shown in the past. Robert (writing on the blackboard) thanked all for the gift and for their patience and friendliness during the past years.

Mr. W. J. Barlow, People's Warden, acted as chairman and the presentation was made by Messrs. Carl Heath and Ronald Brown. Community singing was led by Mr. J. F. Baker after which a bountiful lunch was served.

At this gathering also Mrs. Swayne was presented with a silver salad plate by the Springbrook Women's Institute and a silver relish dish by St. Mark's Women's Auxiliary. Mrs. J. F. Baker, president, and Mrs. W. J. Barlow, secretary, made the presentation on behalf of the Women's Institute and Mrs. A. V. Brown, vice-president, and Mrs. M. Fitzgerald, treasurer, on behalf of the W.A. Mrs. Swayne thanked both organizations for their lovely gifts.

The chairman asked Messrs. M. Fitzgerald, Jesse Barlow and Lindsay Mumby for a few remarks. In short but feeling addresses all three expressed their regret that Mr. and Mrs. Swayne and Robert are leaving this community and wished them health and happiness in their new home. The meeting was closed with the National Anthem and all joining hands sang Auld Lang Syne.

Easter Day services were held in St. Mark's Church 11 a.m. Holy Communion and 7.30 p.m. Evensong with splendid attendances at both services. There were sixty-five communicants at the morning service.

Rev. Canon W. G. Swayne conducted both services and delivered appropriate Easter messages. The evening service was also Canon Swayne's farewell to his parishioners.

The cut flowers on the altar were the gift of the Women's Auxiliary. The anthem "Awake Thou that sleepest" was rendered by the choir.

Miss Marjorie Brown has received word that she has won the bag of potatoes in the drawing held by the St. Paul's Guild of Marmora.

Mr. J. Davidson loaded two carloads of livestock here this week.

Rev. Canon Swayne, Mrs. Swayne and Robert left on Wednesday of this week for Maitland where Canon Swayne will take charge of Augusta Parish. Temporarily St. Mark's of Rawdon Parish will be under the care of Rural Dean A. B. Caldwell of Marmora and St. Thomas 8th line of Rawdon under the care of Rev. L. Harding of Stirling.

IF you're fond of coffee—by all means try it creamed with Carnation Milk. Then you'll have coffee of tempting, golden-brown colour—smooth, delightful flavour. The double-richness that makes Irradiated Carnation Milk so good in coffee, is just as appreciated on cereals, in ice cream and other desserts—in all cooking calling for milk.

If you know what Carnation Milk is, you'll know why it makes such delightfully smooth cream sauces, salad dressings, cream soups. It is just whole milk, evaporated to double-richness, then homogenized (which gives Carnation its extra smoothness), sealed, sterilized. Contains all the food value of the original whole milk, keeps indefinitely unopened on the pantry shelf, is always the same, no matter where you buy it.

The special processing of Irradiated Carnation Milk makes it a safer, more digestible milk for babies. And it gives them an extra helping of "sunshine" vitamin D which all babies and children should have.

Crew Of Malaya Lead Heroes Life In New York

NEW YORK, April 17.—(CP). — Now it can be told. The tars of H.M.S. Malaya are the toast of the Bistors and the talk of the town.

The 31,000-ton battleship came into New York Harbor ten days ago, but, co-operating with the request of Navy Secretary Frank Knox that nothing be said or published about her arrival, most of the press and radio of the United States kept silent. The restriction was lifted yesterday, for Knox himself named the man-o'-war.

Meanwhile sailors and marines of the Malaya "took over" Manhattan. They "do" the town nightly while their ship is in drydock.

Just as soon as the vessel's complement hit shore on leave, New York began entertaining. Strangers stopped the tars and marines on the streets just to shake thier hands and wish them luck.

Well-wishers set up rounds of drinks at bars and night clubs for the visitors, most of whom are setting foot on this side of the Atlantic for the first time.

In Times Square, the sailors, usually in groups of three or four, stop traffic night after night while crowds gather to talk with them and about them. The warriors of Britain won't talk about themselves or the battles they've been in.

The other afternoon a middle-aged couple alighted from their car on 46th Street near Broadway and insisted that a group of three Malaya tars take several packages of English cigarettes.

"We're all together in this," they told the bluejackets after praising Britain and the Royal Navy. "God bless you."

One night last week a couple of newspapermen attempted to outdrink two sailors with a view to obtaining information. The newspapermen set up round after round and ended up "under the table." The tars continued sipping. Their only comment: "The American beer is so weak."

One lad from Newcastle—a stoker—said he felt he was speaking for "all the boys" when he said "it is all so very wonderful — they treat us like heroes."

"Why we can't even buy a glass of beer for ourselves," he said. "We walk to a bar and order a round but the barkeep won't accept the money. Some stranger has beaten us to the draw and paid for the drinks.

"They really amaze us, these friendly Americans. Just as soon as they see 'H.M.S. Malaya' on our hatbands, they can't seem to do enough for us. One gentleman insisted I take $10 and buy some cigarettes for the boys who weren't on shore leave that night.

"It's all wonderful and we appreciate it so much but we want to get back into action."

Hint Lease-Lend States Aid For Dominion

WASHINGTON, April 17 (AP)—The advisability of supplying war materials to Canada on a lease-lend basis in view of her dwindling dollar resources was believed in usually well-informed quarters today to be a primary topic in discussions between Prime Minister Mackenzie King and President Roosevelt and other American officials.

Other matters which were expected to figure in the conferences included proposed development of the St. Lawrence waterway and the work of the joint United States-Canadian defence board, established after the prime minister's last previous meeting with the president last year.

The Canadian government leader, who came here after his annual physical checkup at Johns-Hopkins Hospital in Baltimore, called at the White House late yesterday.

He said he expected to see Mr. Roosevelt again and call on State Secretary Cordell Hull during his visit, which will last several days.

With regard to the possibility of lease-lend aid for Canada, it was recalled that the Dominion, next to Great Britain, has been the biggest buyer of war supplies in the United States and thus far has made her purchases here on a cash-and-carry basis.

Financial authorities, indicated, however, that the Dominion now was running out of United States dollars and would be forced sooner or later to ask some form of financial aid.

Would Prefer Loan.

Word was circulated that Canada would prefer to obtain a loan. But government policy, as established in the case of Britain, is to lend the war materials rather than money with which to buy them, and officials indicated a money loan request would be discouraged. Besides, it was explained, a money loan could not be made without amending the Neutrality Act prohibiting against loans to belligerents.

Products of Canadian gold and silver mines, customarily sold to the United States treasury, might be used to delay the day of assistance.

Recently, Treasury Secretary Morgenthau reported assurances from the Canadian Finance Ministry that the Dominion could go through 1941 on a cash basis. However, it was learned that Canada then was counting on heavy shipments of gold from the rest of the British Empire and planned to sell the gold to the United States for cash. But Britain has stopped sending gold and certain securities to Canada.

Dollars To Doughnuts

By EDITH ELLINGTON

YESTERDAY: Anthony evades Bee's questions as to how he discovered the Duchess was buying polo ponies. Then he tells her of his big idea. Co-ordination fashions in the budget department. Accessories, hat, etc., with each dress and, corresponding in price. Bee catches his enthusiasm, promises to help.

IF THE "BIG IDEA" CLICKS

CHAPTER XIX

For a full, hectic week, Beatrice and Anthony worked together over the Great Idea. Co-ordinated Clothes, or "CC" as they mysteriously referred to it within the walls of Huntington's, led them on merry shopping tours of the main floor, during their lunch hours. They poked around in Neckwear, and Handbags, and Millinery. They compared colors and debated in great detail such monumental matters as whether or not a belt with a flat bow could honestly be called a tailored belt.

Beatrice took to hiding among the size 42's, dresses that were size 14. "It would be awful if someone bought that navy blue fitted!" she said often. "Just when that ensemble's perfect. And the tan jersey—Oh, Anthony, suppose someone sees it there, in between those black afternoon dresses!"

"Roll it up into a corner," he advised. "With one stock girl, no one will discover it."

And then, on a Monday 10 days after the idea had been born, there were five separate ensembles all ready to be carried upstairs to the office of the merchandise manager. "Don't forget to get back the money you spent on those bags, hats, and necklaces, Anthony!" He had had to buy the things from other departments. Naturally he couldn't explain why he wanted them taken out of stock.

"I'll remember. But suppose he throws me out of his office?"

"I'll buy the stuff from you," she offered. "But, Anthony, he simply couldn't be so stupid as not to realize what a wonderful idea it is!"

"What are you two up to?" Toby Masters asked, as Beatrice went to the black, size 42 case to fish out a rescued sample. "All week you've been acting screwy."

"You'll find out," said Beatrice placidly. She whisked the dress expertly back into the case as Miss Dane went by. She re-rescued it. "Give this to Anthony. Dane's coming back in a minute."

The packages with the hats and handbags and jewelry were already upstairs, outside the merchandise manager's office. Anthony made out slips for the dresses he was taking upstairs, signed them, and picked up the dresses. "I wish you could come with me, Bee."

"So do I. But I can't. Don't forget to stress that line about more sales, quicker sales, easier sales, greater volume per sale."

"I know it all by heart." He looked at her. "I wish I could kiss you, right here. Our whole future is tied up in this thing! Why, Bee, if it goes over, I'll get a raise, I'll be able to—"

She cut in quickly, "Not here, Anthony!" He had almost said, "I'll be able to ask you to marry me." And she was afraid of that. The moment he asked, she could no longer continue this deception.

"The best of luck," she whispered. "I'm sure everything's going to be all right, but I'll be praying for you, anyway."

Anthony took a deep breath. "Well, here I go."

A month ago, it would have seemed ridiculous to her that a man and a girl, ostensibly in their right minds, could be so dreadfully earnest—could even be praying!—about a thing like this. "A month ago," she thought, "I'd have laughed at it."

Yet the whole time she waited on a girl who wanted a bottle green dress and who should never have so much as approached any shade of green, Beatrice's mind was up there with Anthony. What had he done first—showed the ensembles, without a word, as Beatrice had urged him to do? Or had he begun to explain, and was he showing the ensembles afterward?

The girl who wanted the green dress compromised on a rust wool. Beatrice wrote out the sales check, gave the customer the wrong change, caught herself, and had to summon Miss Dane in Mr. Bradley's absence to o. k. the opening of the cash register again.

"Where is Bradley?" Miss Dane demanded.

"I'm sure I haven't the least idea," Beatrice fibbed tranquilly.

She approached another customer. "Isn't that a pretty plaid?" She eyed the woman's size, made an experienced guess. "We have that in 18. It also comes in a smaller plaid, using those same colors."

She kept looking at her watch. Anthony had been gone so long. All of half an hour! "But if the merchandise manager was interested, of course they had to talk it over. The very fact that he's taking long is a good sign. If—if it hadn't gone over, he'd have come right down again."

"Show me the smaller plaids," said the customer. "No, wait a minute. My husband's waiting for me upstairs. I really didn't expect to buy a dress. I think I'll bring him back down here and try it on so he can see it. If I'm going to buy an extra dress, he'd better see it first."

"Of course," Beatrice smiled. "I'll hold it aside for you."

She didn't expect to see the woman again. Often customers promised to be back in the afternoon, or tomorrow, or in 10 minutes, and disappeared forever. Toby had explained, "They hate to admit they're just looking."

Beatrice, who had never been intimidated by a salesperson in her life, found it amusing to reflect that she who had bothered other girls endlessly and frequently walked away without purchasing, should now be on the other end of the transaction.

"Will you wait on me, please?" a woman with a little boy asked. "This child's bothering me to death, but I just got to have a dress to wear to go away in. We're going to Ohio, to see my husband's mother, you know."

The customer talked on and on. Beatrice made the proper rejoinders at the proper intervals, but she was six floors away, up there in the merchandise manager's office. If only Anthony would come down soon. The suspense was awful.

She was just ushering the woman and the little boy into a fitting room when she caught sight of the woman who had said she was going to get her husband. "She actually came back." It was unusual. Beatrice stepped forward, to ask her to wait just a moment, when she saw the woman's husband.

All at once, her hands were icy. There was a lump in her throat, and though she wanted desperately to get back to the sanctuary of the fitting room, she couldn't move.

That woman's husband was Jenkins. Jenkins, her own chauffeur!

Seven-Star Conference

The four-star insignia of a full general and the three stars of a lieutenant-general make a seven-star total as General George C. Marshall, RIGHT, U.S. army chief of staff, chats with Lieut.-Gen. H. J. Brees, commander of the U.S. Third Army, at Randolph Field.

Discuss Need

Johnson Motors (Outboard Marine and Manufacturing Limited) had just announced a $50,000 addition to their factory.

The Peterborough Lock Company was about to spend $15,000 on an enlargement of their plant. The Ovaltine Company was decidedly busy, and the Quaker Oats Company was again working on export orders, although it was not known how long that condition would continue.

Permanent Additions

Alderman Dutton reviewed the causes of the emergency in housing, with special reference to the long period during the depression when the building industry was inactive. The providing of accommodation for new employees was virtually an integral part of national defence, he said. At the same time it was evident that factory additions were being built for permanence, indicating the confidence of manufacturers in the future of this city.

In the present circumstances it might ultimately be necessary for the National Housing Company to put up a number of prefabricated houses, Alderman Dutton said, but sentiment generally was that dwelling of that temporary type might be avoided. He recalled that at the time of the great Chicago fire temporary houses were built, but instead of disappearing after the emergency conditions of that catastrophe had passed some of them were still in use fifty years later, and had degenerated in slum localities.

N.H.A. In Force

Fred J. Overend emphasized the fact that the National Housing Act was still in force, but information had reached him that it was getting "close of the expiring date and to the money limit set by the government." It might be that the Government would consider amending the Housing Act to provide 90 per cent loans on houses of minimum cost up to $3,500. Mr. Overend also explained that the expression prefabricated house did not necessarily mean a cheap house. Some of them manufactured by private companies, and not for emergency purposes, cost up to $20,000.

Gordon K. Fraser, M.P., expressed the opinion that the continuation of the Housing Act might depend on the Government's ability to get money.

"The Government only underwrites the loans," Mayor Hamilton said.

"True," Mr. Fraser replied, "but there is some feeling that the money is actually tied up. F. W. Nicholls, Director of the National Housing Act, told me he hoped to be in Peterborough during the week of April 28. He stated that he would like to see this city continue building the kind of houses that has been built here under the Act. I know the Government would do everything possible to help people build substantial houses for themselves. I saw Joe Piggott of the National Housing Company in Toronto on Monday, and he wants to see substantial houses built here. Mr. Nicholls is very much in favor of that, and we all know it is the cheapest in the long run to own your own house. It will be cheaper than rent.

Peterborough's Reputation

Mr. Fraser said he did not expect to see any shut down on the Housing Act plan here unless the government found itself in dire financial straits. "But there is still lots of money in the banks," he added.

"I had lunch in Toronto yesterday with the Vice-president of one of the largest insurance companies in Canada, and he said that Peterborough was practically at the top of the list for investments under the Housing Act. I had a talk last week with H. B. McKinnon, Controller of War Time Prices, and I suggested to him that new houses should be exempt from control by the Rent Control Board. I told him that if a house was built this year for investment and the owner felt it should rent for $35, it would hardly be fair for the Rent Control Board to say, "You've got to cut it down to $30." He agreed with me, and that afternoon in the House I asked the Minister of Labor about it, and he said he would take it up with the War Time Prices and Trade Board."

Mr. Fraser suggested that the proposed amendment of the act should be sent on to the government, and added: "Insurance companies are eager to lend money here. On their list Peterborough is the cleanest city in Canada."

Economy to Government

Alderman Dutton remarked that the Government had mentioned spending anywhere from ten to 25 millions of dollars for emergency housing throughout Canada. Temporary houses built in one place be moved to another after their need in the first location had passed. The cost of such moving, with the original expense, could be avoided if sufficient permanent houses were built in Peterborough. Mr. Dutton said he could not see why this economy should not be apparent to the government.

Harold Scott mentioned the social effect of ownership of homes. Herb McCannan said 200 houses were needed, and that he knew people arriving here were having to store their furniture because they could not get homes for themselves.

Alderman Sands described himself as only a bystander "in this discussion."

"This group here this evening has got to convince the man who is thinking of building a house that he is not getting a rooking. I can find 25 men down at the plant who would build if they felt sure the cost was right."

More Value Here

City Clerk Outram remarked that he took part in a survey of $2,500 to $2,700 houses built last year, and it was found that the Peterborough people were getting better houses than anywhere else in Canada.

"I want to thank Alderman Sands for what he said," Mr. Overend stated. "And I mean it. I know that we in Peterborough are giving greater value in houses than anywhere else in Ontario, and I am quoting to you Mr. Nicholls, the Housing Commissioner for Canada."

"I did not say that the building industry was not giving value," Alderman Sands supplemented. "I just wish to make it plain that I believe this group has got to convince those who would like to have homes and who would consider building."

Alderman Bradburn told of comparisons he made with corresponding houses in Toronto, convincing him that local builders were not holding up prices.

A War Measure

William Langford said that if prefabricated houses came to Peterborough they would be built here as a war measure. "What harm would it be after all if some of them are built here. I don't think they will build any more than is necessary. After all we have to be prepared as a community to make sacrifices to win the war. Builders will not take hold of a housing scheme, and capital is sensitive and must have a free way or people will not put out their money for investment. If we get some of these prefabricated houses they can be put in some place where they are not amongst other houses, and after the war they could be demolished."

"How do we know those houses would be demolished after the war?" Alderman Bradburn asked. "They might not be so willing to tear them down while people are still living in them."

Aldrman Bradburn agreed with Mr. Overend's statement that the allowance to the municipality for these houses would only be out of pocket cost of providing water and walks and sewerage, but there would be nothing to the municipality for education, hospitalization, fire and police protection and other services.

"We say we are patriotic. Let us make a little sacrifice if we have to," Mr. Langford remarked.

The discussion proceeded to the McCannan resolution. Thanks was expressed to the council for directing Mayor Hamilton to call the meeting, and the conference ended on the graceful note of Alderman Dutton's motion, seconded by Alderman Bradburn, expressing appreciation of the "fine attendance" to consider a question which the council considered of unusual importance to the city.

Bear Is Reported In Zion District

A big black bear is rambling around the Zion district in Otonabee township and farmers are planning an organized hunt to get rid of the bruin.

The animal larger than the average in size, was sighted a day or two ago by several farmers, but disappeared and was not seen again until Wednesday evening at 6.30 o'clock when John Thompson, returning from a visit to some traps, saw Mr. Bear in a field on the William Thompson farm, near Zion.

By the time something in the nature of a hunt had been organized the animal had vanished.

Apparently the bear had got nipped by several muskrat traps as he sprang the traps and then covered them with dirt, John Thompson said last night.

Tells Of Work Among The New Canadians

A true spirit of reverence pervaded the Easter Thankoffering service of Trinity Women's Missionary Society, conducted by the president, Mrs. J. W. Pierce. The hymn, "Come, Let Us Sing Of A Wonderful Love" was the call which opened the service, and in unison the members repeated the W.M.S. daily prayer. Scripture reading from St. John's Gospel, which told of the risen Christ appearing to Mary and to the disciples, was given by Mrs. A. Cheyne, and earnest prayer was offered by Mrs. J. A. Bannister.

In keeping with this theme was the Easter message told by Mrs. G. N. Moncrief, who said, "Easter means much to us this year, for we are living again through the dark Friday and Saturday, humanity in many lands is going through the agonies of cruel death and humiliating oppression, and many people are sitting at the sepulchre in their gardens mourning the loss of all they hold dear. Yet what the sorrowing watchers at the tomb regarded as the end of life was in reality the very preparation for coronation. We believe that out of every grave there blooms an Easter lily and in every tomb there sits an angel. At the blessed Easter season one of the great truths of our Christian faith is the glorious certainty that "The Lord is Risen indeed" and "Death is swallowed up in victory."

A musical program of sacred selections was enjoyed, with vocal solos contributed by Mrs. H. A. Mitcell, "Leave It With Him"; and Miss Helen Parkinson who sang "The Holy Hour." Mrs. R. Williamson was at the piano. The Thankoffering and birthday gifts were received, and members sang the dedication hymn, "We Give Thee But Thine Own."

During the brief business session Mrs. Pierce announced the family party planned for May 20th to commemorate the 50th anniversary of Trinity W.M.S. The C.G.I.T. Pageant, to be held in Reid Street Hall Thursday evening, and the Local Council Tea on Thursday afternoon.

Representing the Church of All Nations, Toronto, of which the speaker is the superintendent, Rev. Mr. MacKay gave an inspiring address on the work of the church among New Canadians. The church was opened thirteen years ago for the purpose of bringing together the new Canadians, ministering to them, and helping to create the right relationship between these people, who represent thirty different nationalities. He said "God has sent many different people to Canada, and it is our great opportunity to help the newcomer in practising Christian patience and tolerance, and in learning to live with all men.

Through the many church activities racial prejudices have been broken down, Rev. MacKay stated. Over a thousand people receive their mail at the Church of All Nations, which to them is regarded as a church home. Every Sunday services are held in six different languages. There is an average weekly attendance of 4,000, since the church is open every day, and many attend the various clubs, racial group meetings, and various activities. It is their home in a new land.

Rev. MacKay refered to the fine character and admirable qualities possessed by many of the new Canadians. They are unselfish, even the needy eager to help others who are less fortunate; they respond to Christian teaching; show a keen determination to be self-supporting, and the majority make excellent citizens. They wish that "the spirit of Christian teacher and Christian understanding manifested in the Church of All Nations might spread across the Dominion, and even to world-wide proportions," was expressed by the speaker. A vote of thanks to Rev. MacKay for his informative and challenging address was voiced by Mrs. A. B. Cunningham.

Tea was served after the meeting by Mrs. Horton and members of her group.

A BRIGHT SPRING

By ALICE ALDEN

COLOR and yet more color is the recipe for some of the season's most successful fashions. Jean Schlumberger designed this colorful daytime ensemble and even the pretty "ink spot" print—splotches of black dotted hither and yon on pale blue grey. The dress is a masterpiece of shirring over bosom and hips. The fitted navy blue wool coat is banded around the shoulders giving a smart tapering shoulder line. Schlumber, famous for his jewelry designs in Paris, created the hat too. It is of matching blue shantung with yellow pen-quills to complete the "pen and ink" theme of the ensemble.

Layette Quota Doubled By H. and S. Groups

Layettes from the nine Peterborough Home and School Associations, some of the groups having exceeded their quota of two each, are included in the bundles now on display at the Royal York Hotel in Toronto, where the annual meeting of the Ontario Federation Home and School Associations is being held. The layettes number 2,070, are valued at $30,000, and represent the answer to an appeal made by the Federation 2½ months ago for 1,000 layettes for babies of Britain.

The generous response to the appeal speaks for itself, and for the strong feeling of sympathy which mothers of Ontario have for the mothers of Britain in bombed areas, to whom babies are often born prematurely. Into each layette has gone a baby's complete outfit, together with warm quilt, blanket, rubber sheet, tiny hot-water bottle, bootees, jackets, toys and toilet articles.

Annual I.O.D.E. Meeting Is Of Special Interest

Special interest attaches to the 21st annual meeting of the Ontario Provincial Chapter, I.O.D.E., which will take place at the Royal Connaught Hotel, Hamilton, on April 23, 24 and 25.

The Acting President, Mrs. W. K. Foucar, will preside, and her official address will be given on the morning of the opening day. At this initial session resolutions of loyalty to Their Majesties and greetings to His Excellency the Governor-General and Princess Alice and to the Lieutenant-Governor and Mrs. Albert Matthews will be passed. The civic welcome of Mayor William Morrison, K.C., of Hamilton, and the address of welcome from the Hamilton Municipal Chapter by Mrs. M. B. Morden will be replied to by Mrs. W. J. Sanderson, Fort Erie. Mrs. W. B. Horkins, Toronto, will present greetings from the National Chapter.

Officers' reports will be presented, both morning and afternoon, and the afternoon session will feature the address of the National President, Mrs. Horkins, and the election of the Provincial Councillors.

Junior chapters will be featured at the special session on Wednesday evening, April 23, with a reception and social half hour following.

Conferences will occupy the delegates on Thursday morning, April 24, and Provincial Councillors will also meet on Thursday morning to elect the officers. Annual reports will be continued in the afternoon, followed by reports of the morning's conferences, and by the election of Provincial nominees for National Councillors.

The dinner speaker in the evening will be Dr. Watson Kirkconnell, McMaster University, Hamilton, and following this session the diamond bracelet, which is being raffled to raise funds for the order, will be drawn for.

The Treasurer's report and the budget discussion will feature the Friday morning session, at which honorary officers will be elected. A meeting of the officers and councillors will be held in the afternoon.

Dorothy Fund To Remain Open Until 1st of May

Dorothys across Canada have until May 1st to catch enough elusive dollars to reach their objective of $22,000, according to Mrs. Dorothy E. Christie of Westmount, Quebec, who started the Canadian Dorothy Spitfire Fund by selling an evening wrap. It was originally planed to close the fund on Easter Monday, but the books are now to be kept open until May 1st. $4,470 of the fund will probably be turned over this week to "Wings for Britain" as a proof of whole-hearted co-operation, the balance to be turned over with the closing of the fund.

In almost all towns and cities of the Dominion contributions to the fund have exceeded all the hopes of its founder. In Peterborough the fund was organized by Miss Dorothy Brisbin and Mrs. E. F. Borbridge, and the sum of $212.00 forwarded as the result of a silk hose draw and donations from local Dorothys and their friends.

Dorothys who may not have been contacted, were out of the city at the time of the campaign, or who wish to make a further contribution, may send donations direct to: Canadian Dorothy Spitfire Fund, care of the Treasurer, C.P.R. Railway, Windsor Station, Montreal, Quebec.

Nearly Million Articles Made

Women of Ontario in the past three months have contributed nearly 1,000,000 articles to the comfort of Canadian men in the forces, to women in Britain's voluntary services, and to air raid victims and refugees in England.

Woollen comforts for soldiers, sailors, and airmen, and hospital supplies totalled 596,032 articles. Mrs. John C. Fraser, chairman Women's Work Committee, reports. This included 191,128 pairs socks, 29,930 sweaters, 34,782 scarfs, 62,524 mitts and gloves, 29,339 gauze handkerchiefs, 15,740 pyjamas. For the women in voluntary services overseas, Red Cross workers have turned out 9,279 comforts of which helmets, underwear, stockings, cardigans, gloves, figured largely. Clothing for air raid victims and refugees totalled 314,441 garments. This figure also included 18,130 quilts which Mr. Fraser points out, were made from scrap materials and cost almost nothing to assemble.

A Provincial membership of 1,002 in the Red Cross Women's Voluntary Service Corps is reported by Miss Jane McKee, chairman of the Ontario committee. These volunteers are giving 10,000 hours a month to the corps, and are relieving the society of much expense by doing a good deal of the transportation and office work pertaining to Red Cross.

Rhubarb Is High In Body-Building Content

A suggestion that Canadians plant more rhubarb this spring and can it while it is still young, tender and rose-colored comes from the Dominion Department of Agriculture. Rhubarb replaces imported prunes and figs and is equal if not better in its content of vitamin B, calcium and body-building materials. Canned Canadian apples, too, are high in food values and very cheap.

When Miss Edith L. Elliott of the Department of Agriculture spoke in Peterborough recently at a meeting of the Local Council of Women, she mentioned foods that are particularly high in vitamin C content, and therefore important in maintaining health, such as one green pepper, one cup of raw cabbage, one medium tomato, one-half cup of tomato juice or one medium-sized potato boiled or baked in its skin, which replace the qualities of imported fruits and equal one-quarter of a grapefruit; half an ounce or one-quarter cup of the juice of either.

Candied fruits and peel are on the lists of imports which are excluded from Canada, but Miss Elliott told of a British Columbia melon which makes excellent peel, and said that cherries, pears, apricots, peaches, and other fruits obtainable in Canada will candy and completely replace anything we have formerly imported. Another product still in the experimental stage but expected to be on the market after the next apple crop, is called apple "flakes" or "chips." These are said to taste exactly like fresh apples in pies.

By substituting Canadian products for imports, women can help in the war effort, since by conserving exchange, Canada can purchase more needed war materials.

War Savings Begin At Home Hence Up To Women To Act

By MARY MOORE

An "all-out" effort on our part, ladies, can mean more than knitting sox, you know.

If we buy only fruit juices packed in Canada (Tomato and apple juice, for instance) we can make even our juice purchases felt—and the 1941 apple crop will be 100 per cent used up right in Canada.

On the other hand we should make our meat dollar go further so that there will be more meat to ship "over there" for it's horror enough to be bombed without having to do without "Wiltshire" for breakfast. (The Englishman must have his bacon you know!)

Those noble convoys laden with all kinds of supplies are truly Britain's life line,—and since we women are the nation's buyers we strongly influence the surplus of supplies available for export.

Pork in the form of bacon is the chief meat exported to Britain. This doesn't mean we can't have it at all, but it is the reason we concentrate on other meats this week.

VEAL MILAN

It was this little discovery that prompted this meat theme today—we thought what a delicious meat dish it was to serve to quite a few guests at a comparatively low cost.

Watch the butcher while he cuts this for you—a slice not more than ½-inch thick from the cutlet—two of them if you have many to serve. Then have him pound it even flatter with the flat of his cleaver. It takes less than 15 minutes to prepare if you have about ½ cup sifted crumbs ready. Beat the yolks of 2 eggs or beat 1 whole egg and to either add 2 tablespoons water and mix well. Cut the veal into medium sized pieces for serving and dip in the egg then in the crumb and fry in a generous amount of butter quite quickly, standing over the pan all the time it is cooking, for it is so thing it cooks quickly, and the temperature should be high,—so watch it closely. Carefully and quickly fry each piece and lift onto hot platter as they are done. We served this with new potatoes in parsley cream sauce—we served no other hot vegetable but our wooden salad bowl was a picture with tomato wedges, watercress, celery hearts, and leaf lettuce—with which was passed tomato soup French Dressing.

CORNED BEEF AND CABBAGE

It is surprising to me how much publicity this dish gets, but very little use. I had to go to three butcher shops to get the piece of corned beef I wanted — a long piece from the brisket weighing four pounds, and having a nice layer of fat on the outside—I bought four pounds because I wanted some to slice cold next day.

Cover the corned beef with cold water and bring to boiling point and gently boil for about 3 to 3½ hours. Lift from water onto hot platter and stand in warming oven until you cook your cabbage which should be cut in about 2 inch wedges—cook the cabbage in the water in which the corned beef has been boiled—no additional salt is needed. Place the meat in centre of large platter—surround with the well drained wedges of cabbage. Slice the corned beef across the grain in thin slices—being sure to warn the carver that half of it must be saved for next day to serve cold—you may not succeeed in this because it is usually too good to last!

BOILED MUTTON WITH CAPER SAUCE

The shoulder or lower part of the leg are good cuts of mutton for boiling. A five-lb. piece requires 2¾ hours. Add 1 small onion sliced thin, 1 tablespoon Worcestershire Sauce and 2 teaspoons lemon juice to the water in which the mutton is boiled. When done strain enough of the cooking liquor to make the caper sauce. Stir 2½ tablespoons flour into 1-3 cup of cold water to make a paste, and stir into 1 cup of the cooking liquor, then add 2 or 3 tablespoons drained capers and stir until thick. Serve hot with the sliced boiled mutton.

When serving the mutton cold a nice accompaniment is corn or garden relish.

QUESTION—Having noticed your cookery section for recipes I am submitting my recipe for Chocolate Fudge.

As I have won several prizes with this I know it is good.

Chocolate Fudge.

(Submitted by Mrs. O. Kirkelund, Ryley.)

Two cups granulated sugar, 2 squares chocolate, 1 cup milk, ½ teaspoon salt. Place in saucepan and beat over slow heat, stirring constantly until sugar is dissolved. Do not stir after the sugar boils. Boil until it forms a soft ball in cold water. Set in large pan of water and let it stand undisturbed until there is practically no heat in fudge mixture. Remove from cold water and add 2 tablespoons butter and one-half teaspoon vanilla. Begin to beat and beat until it becomes thick and creamy. Pour on buttered plate and cut in squares.

ANSWER. — Thank you for this interesting recipe. I have placed it in my "Be-Sure-to-Try-This" file, and am looking forward to a treat with the youngsters some evening.

Won't you be sure to write again when I can help you.

QUESTION. — There is a lemon pudding very much like the lemon cake pie that is so popular with some people. Could you give the recipe for it on the cookery page some time—it might be called Lemon Custard Pudding. Thank you for other help you have given me—this is the first time I have written to you.—Mrs. O. O. Forster.

ANSWER. — This recipe for Lemon Custard Pudding is a favorite in our house, and I hope you will like it too.

Lemon Custard Pudding.

One cup sugar, grated rind 1 lemon, 1 tablespoon butter, 2 tablespoons flour— mix those four ingredients together and add the juice of 1 lemon, yolks of 2 eggs, and 1¼ cups milk. Fold in the left-over egg whites which have been beaten stiff and put into dish, and stand dish in larger pan of hot water and bake at 350 degrees Fahr. until a "cakey" crust rises and is golden—about 40 minutes.

Write again when we can help you.

QUESTION. — You mentioned a way of serving kidneys on toast and I hope you will forgive me for not cutting out the recipe when I saw it. Since then my hubby has asked me to serve kidneys sometime, and now I would like that method. Hoping you will print it when you have time.—Florence Fidled.

ANSWER. — We called the kidney dish to which you refer Fricasseed Kidneys on Toast.

Wash about 1 pound kidneys and soak 1 hour in lukewarm salted water. Drain, remove skin if any, cut open and remove veins and tube portion. Cover with cold water and bring slowly to boiling point, drain. Cut into 1½ inch pieces for serving, roll in flour in which is sprinkled salt and pepper, brown in hot fat, and when golden remove from pan, and if desired add about 1 cup of sliced onions and saute them for 5 minutes. Return kidneys to pan with onions, barely cover with boiling water and cook just below the boiling point for 1 hour or until tender, covered. Serve on toast points garnished with parsley or cress.

Military Note Is To Be Sounded At "Gym Review"

Plans for the coming Gymnasium Review, to be held April 24 and 25, were favorably received at the April Y.W.C.A. Board meeting. The Review this year, called "On Parade," strikes a military note from the sun-suit parade of the wee tots to the squad and rifle drill of the senior girls. Other new features will include archery, Semaphore and Morse signalling, military gymnastics planned for health and physical fitness, and a group of national and character dances.

Members of the Board and Physical committees are assisting the gym members with the sale of tickets. Proceeds of the Gym Review help to carry on the regular and war time activities of the Association, which this year is meeting new situations [illegible] serving more calls for new work. Mr. Gordon K. Fraser, M.P., has kindly consented to open the Review on the Thursday evening.

Decorations are in charge of Mrs. F. M. Somerville and Mrs. H. Paige Rowell. The ticket committee reported that gym members were all aiming at a full house for both nights, and that the reduced price of this year's pageant makes it easier to sell more tickets. Free tickets will be given to gym members selling twenty tickets and the grand prize will be a swimming ticket. This week posters and dodgers giving the program are in circulation. Mrs. R. H. Turner, Mrs. C. Collins and Mrs. R. E. Cutting are members of the advertising committee. Fifty gay costumes are almost ready and will add color to character and national dances. Mrs. B. W. McClelland, Mrs. J. A. Wolstenholme and Mrs. H. F. Foote have supervised the cutting, and Miss M. Elliott and Mrs. C. E. LaBranche convened the sewing committee, consisting of groups from George Street, St. Paul's, Murray Street and St. John's churches. Members of the Peter Robinson Chapter, I.O.D.E., will act as ushers.

The Physical committee reported a successful basketball season closing with a banquet and presentation of trophies. Other committee reports included plans for the fiftieth anniversary of the Y.W.C.A. on May 15, when an historical pageant will be presented at the Golden Jubilee Reception. The Girls' Council is planning a special dance for that week, when former and present members and their friends will exchange happy memories of "Y" days. Sunday, May 18, will be Y.W.C.A. Sunday, with a special afternoon service at the "Y."

The Camp committee reported arrangements for staff for the summer, and needed property repairs. Several inquiries have already been received from campers anxious to be sure of accommodation. Swimming lessons will commence the first of May. The War Service committee reported several donations from "Y" clubs toward service work. The committee stressed the need of boarding house accommodation for girls and women coming to the city to work, and asked that addresses be left at the Y.W.C.A. Rooms Registry.

The Girls' Work Department, presented by Mrs. H. C. Sootheran, showed clubs now successfully organized and serving in every group, school girls, business and industrial girls, household workers, married women and pre-school children. A Girls' Regional Conference will be held in Ottawa, May 3 and 4, which Peterborough members plan to attend.

The annual meeting of the Association will be held immediately before the anniversary celebration on May 15. The following nominating committee was appointed: Miss E. Morrow, Mrs. H. C. Sootheran, Mrs. A. A. Moir and Mrs. R. H. Turner.

Mrs. H. R. H. Kenner was in charge of the meeting. Plans for a local conference on leadership, with Miss Julia Capen, a former secretary of the National Board of the United States, were left until fall.

FLATTERING FASHIONS

By ALICE ALDEN

THIS year's fashions with their lovely lines and frills and soft, muted colors are as flattering to the woman as they are to the girl. Lotte Lehmann, famous soprano of the Metropolitan Opera Company is one woman who wears the new clothes beautifully. Here is one of her new evening frocks, designed by Howard Greer of the cinema world. It is of black chiffon and made with a full pleated skirt which starts from a low, fitted waistline. The heart-shaped neckline is edged with palest pink chiffon and the bodice is softly pleated. The dress has angel-wing sleeves from shoulder to hemline. It is an ideal gown for the woman of importance!

DOROTHY DIX

Dear Miss Dix—We are a family of average means, a husband, wife and two grown sons. A year ago my eldest son married and brought his wife to live with us. As we were anxious to give them a chance to get a start financially, we have never charged them board. Even paid for their laundry. My son's wife is a healthy, strong girl, but she has never offered to help in any way with the housework, although I do all of my own work, even most of the laundry. She doesn't keep her own room clean, just sleeps and reads novels, or sits around so lazy that I have to sweep around her feet because she is too indolent to move. She now has a baby and she doesn't take decent care of it. My son says he doesn't care how lazy or careless she is, as she suits him. Things have come to such a pass that we have suggested that they go to housekeeping and have offered them a gift of furniture to start on, but their reply is: "We like it here and don't ever intend to leave." Can you offer any kind of solution to all of this that won't cause too much damage to any one's feelings?

PERPLEXED.

ANSWER — You can't deal with the situation in your home with a powder puff. You've got to use a sledge hammer. Your parasitic son and his wife will have to be evicted by strong-arm methods. They will never go of their own accord. Nor could you blame them for that. Free board and lodging and mother to nurse the baby, gee, that's a cinch if anybody ever had one!

I don't think in this case you need feel called upon to consider the feelings of the youngsters. All the feeling they have is just rock-bottom selfishness, and if you can do anything to jar that you will be doing missionary work on them.

They have never considered your feelings. No sympathy for you has made the lazy, trifling wife help with the housework, or even take care of her own baby. No compassion for his father has made your son try to lighten his burden by helping to pay the grocery bill.

You Harm Your Children

On the contrary, he has dumped a second family on poor old dad to support. I believe that parents should lend their children a helping hand, if they possibly can, when they get married, but that doesn't mean assuming the support of the newlyweds. It means assisting them to get established in a little home of their own and then leaving them to fight it out on their own.

When mom and dad do more than that, they do their children more harm than good, for it takes away from them all sense of responsibility, all necessity to work and save, and it encourages in them the habit of dependence and of passing the buck to some one else instead of working out their own problems.

If, for instance, your son hadn't known he could take his wife to live on father, he would have waited to marry until he was able to provide a home for her. If he had had to pay board, he wouldn't have been able to go to so many movies and have a car, but he wouldn't have worked his poor mother to death and the chances are he would have saved more money. And if his wife had had to get up and cook her husband's breakfast and keep her house clean, she wouldn't have developed into the lazy loafer she is now.

It isn't too late yet to save your son and his wife if you will make them set up their own home and depend on themselves. But you will have to get busy about it. Emulate the birds that throw their young out of the nest as soon as they are grown. Surely you have as much sense as an English sparrow.

How to Settle In-Law problem

Dear Dorothy Dix—Here is the way I settled the mother-in-law problem: My husband died, leaving me with four girls and no money. I went to work and in 15 years I had made a comfortable living, saved money, got all my girls married off to nice, respectable men. I was quite flattered when each daughter insisted that I shouldn't live alone and that I must come and live with her.

However, I refused, but said that I would go and visit them, and in time I let them know that I had lost most of my money and would probably have to sell the house. This was my way of finding out if it was me or my money that they really wanted, and to my surprise I discovered it was the money. Their invitations became fewer. They even forgot to ask me on holidays, so I figured out that old 63 had better keep her home and go back into some business to keep her interested, and only visit her children when specially urged. And then not stay too long.

MRS. F.

ANSWER—You are a wise old bird, Mrs. F., and it is a pity that more middle-aged women don't follow your advice and keep their own homes and their own independence, instead of giving up everything and going to live with their children.

Certainly it seems a terribly pitiful thing when her children do not repay a mother for the long years in which she has worked and sacrificed for them by making her welcome in their homes, but benefits are easily forgotten. Human nature is selfish and grasping, and it is only too sadly true that mothers cannot rely upon the gratitude of their children.

All of us know cases in which children have robbed their mothers as ruthlessly and cold-bloodedly as they would any stranger. We have seen them take away from her the little pittance that father left her when he died, and that would have made her independent in a humble way, and then treat her less kindly than they would a dog. And we have known old women to be case out of their own homes that their children had wangled them into deeding to them on the promise that they would love and cherish them as long as they lived.

It is because these things happen so often that I am continually urging mother to hold on to her pocketbook with both hands as long as she has breath in her body, for between mother who has gifts to give and money to leave in her will, and mother who has to be supported, there is all the difference between a star boarder and a hanger-on of the family.

Front fullness makes skirt graceful for walking or dancing. You have a choice of three different necklines so select the one that will do the most for you. The perky bolero can be made with long or short sleeves and is a chic addition to a pretty Spring frock. Gathered pockets are also included in the pattern and are perfect for the very thin girl.

Lovely Three-Circle Rug Made Easily by Braiding

Looks Just Right Beside a Bed

So bright and cheerful-looking, this Colonial braided rug is charming anywhere in your home—and is one of the easiest rugs to make!

You simply braid strips of colorful fabric and wind and stitch them round and round into three circles.

For a rug 43 inches long and 18 inches wide, you might like to combine 5½ yards of brown fabric, three yards of figured (brown, white, gold, blue) and 1½ yards of gold. Tear it all into strips about three inches wide, turn in one-half inch on each side and press down.

Now start to braid, folding the strips again as you work. Best to begin with strips of uneven length so you won't add new ones at the same place.

For each circle, wind and sew a 9½-inch centre of brown, one row of gold, and two rows of figured. Lap end circles over centre one and stitch. Then, beginning between circles, sew on brown braid, encircling the rug twice.

Our 32-page booklet goes further into the details of making the three-circle rug. Tells also how to make lovely hooked, woven, crocheted and tufted rugs; includes Navaho, other styles.

Send 15c in coins or stamps for our copy of HOW TO MAKE YOUR OWN RUGS to the Examiner, Home Service, Peterborough. Be sure to write plainly your NAME, ADDRESS, and the NAME of booklet.

APPRECIATE YOUR GIFTS

WHEN THE opponents have been so kind as to double a contract on which you can make a confident redouble, you are probably the recipient of a very fine gift. You ought to appreciate it, and prove the fact by working carefully to make the redoubled contract. Extra tricks may be extra nice, especially when they carry the redoubled value, but how silly you are if you jeopardize the entire gift by striving for too many tricks.

What a tough spot East was in to find a good bid, while vulnerable, after North's heart call. His patience in passing was rewarded, it seemed, when the opponents got so high that he could make a gleeful double. He would have been out of luck, though, if South had not become greedy and badly misplayed the hand.

West led the heart 10, and South decided to try to take all of the tricks. He ruffed this with the spade 5, next a diamond with the spade 2, led the spade 4 to the A, ruffed the second diamond with the spade 8, then a heart with the spade K and a third diamond with the spade 10. He returned to his hand by ruffing a heart with the spade Q and laid down his last trump, the J. If both defenders had followed suit, he would have taken all the rest of the tricks, but East did not. This left West with the last trump, so after the club A South got no more tricks, being down two.

For four tricks, all was in good order, but then South should have quit the ruffing. If he had returned to his hand with the spade 10 to the K, then laid down the Q, settling the hostile trumps, he could have given up one diamond and had the spade J left for re-entry to run the rest of the diamonds. Played thus, he could have made an overtrick, without having to depend on an even break of trumps.

No Visit To Canada

WASHINGTON, April 17 (AP).—President Roosevelt invited Prime Minister W. L. Mackenzie King of Canada to have tea with him at the White House late today.

The President said at a press conference that he will be unable to visit Canada, and thus return Mr. King's visit, this year.

Shipyard Strike

HALIFAX, April 17—(CP).—Two hundred and fifty iron workers, skilled and unskilled, walked out of the Halifax Shipyards, Limited, plant today in protest against a company refusal to meet their demands for increased wages.

The Company is engaged in war work and has a total working force of about 1,000 men.

Belmont Ladies Make 10 Quilts For Red Cross

HAVELOCK, April 17—(ENS).—The weekly meeting of the Havelock-Belmont Red Cross Society was held on Tuesday afternoon in the council chamber. Owing to so many being away on Easter holidays there were only seventeen in attendance, but much work was accomplished.

Mrs. Williard Ashby and Mrs. Eric Ellis, members of the Belmont Women's Institute, brought in another wonderful donation from that organization—ten beautifully finished quilts ready to be labelled. Tops of five of these were donated by ladies of the Institute: Mrs. Horace King, Mrs. Williard Hubble, Mrs. William Harris, Mrs. Charles Kennedy, and Mrs. William Smith. Also included in this donation were five suits of men's pyjamas. The Red Cross Society is very grateful for such generous donations, and President Mrs. A. McLauchlin asked that thanks be extended to the Belmont ladies.

Canadian Army Trains Its Own Technicians

The Canadian Army has undertaken to train its own technicians and tradesmen. Soldiers selected for that training learn the fundamentals of their trades in technical schools throughout Canada and, after three months' initiation period, go to the Army Trades School in Hamilton, Ont., for advanced training. They work mostly during evenings and nights, not to interfere with the regular classes nor with the national scheme for training civilian youths needed by the war industries. ABOVE pictures show Canadian soldiers at work in a Technical School. These photographs were taken in Ottawa but they can be duplicated in most of the country's technical schools. UPPER LEFT: Part of the electrical class. UPPER RIGHT: Mr. C. A. Yeo, in charge of electrical instruction, is showing Gunner R. F. Fry, R.C.A., how a transformer is built up. In the FOREGROUND, Private H. Lalonde studies the intricacies of an electrical motor. LOWER LEFT: Instructor L. J. Clarke shows Gunner R. McNutt, R.C.A., how to handle a drill press in the machine shop. LOWER RIGHT: Part of the woodwork class in the same school. The civilian in the RIGHT CENTRE is Mr. O. R. Pongalley, instructor.

In Canadian Army Crafts "Who Knows How" Has A Steady Job

By EDWIN JOHNSON
(Canadian Press Military Correspondent.)

OTTAWA, April 17.—(CP)—In technical schools and other vocational institutions strung out across the Dominion selected soldiers of Canada's active army are undergoing specialized training to meet the growing demand for skilled tradesmen.

Transformation of the army to a super-mechanized state, combined with depleted supply of desirable specialists in the open labor market, influenced the Department of National Defence to train and develop its own corps of craftsmen.

As a result former soda-fountain clerks may be learning the intricacies of electrical engineering, salesmen the art of woodturning, while peacetime fishermen, farmers and others are being moulded as experts in the various trades that enable the modern army at home or in the field to function efficiently.

The scheme envisages three phases of training.

During the first phase, or the basic military training period, the recruit is interviewed and given vocational aptitude tests to determine whether he has the necessary educational background and inherent ability to qualify for a tradesmen's course.

The next step takes a successful candidate to a youth training centre or some other civilian training institution. There he undergoes an intensive course in the trade for which he has been selected, under expert supervision.

The maximum period of this phase has been fixed at three months. Some of the courses are considerably shorter. Normally, the men are assigned to schools within their immediate training area but in some instances where a recruit has been selected for a highly specialized trade he may be sent farther afield.

Taught Fundamentals

During this stage the soldier is put through the elementary "jumps" just as the average schoolboy experiences in his first year of technical training. He is taught the fundamentals and brought to a point from where in many instances he will require only practice to complete his training.

Finally the embryo craftsmen will advance to the army trade school at Hamliton, expected to be opened early in May. Here they will be taught practical application of their learning to military requirements.

At Ottawa Technical High School, typical of other training centres throughout the country, the trainees are highly enthusiastic and eager. They realize their ultimate role will be just as important as that played by the man behind a gun. For when they become proficient it will be their duty to repair, maintain and operate the complicated machines, weapons, equipment and instruments which make up the present-day army.

Undergoing courses in the capital are men from all parts of Canada. Among them is Gnr. H. Howell of Campbelltown, N.B., who played centre forward for the Campbellton "Tigers" back in 1929. Since then he has been employed as a pulp-mill worker and as a gold miner. Now he is learning to be an electrician.

In the same class is Gnr. H. L. Barkley of Cornwall, Ont., who has been a pastry baker for 11 years. Barkley who worked in an army kitchen for seven months said that he had "jumped at the opportunity" to learn a new trade as he felt he had been too long in the baking business.

"From what I have seen of the electrical trade I'm going to like it much better than baking," he said. 'I hope to make myself a real use to the army.

Gunners C. Benwell of Winnipeg, formerly a soda-fountain clerk, T. E. McQuinn of Saint John, N.B., erstwhile salesman and L. E. Lavoie, Woodstock, N.B., a house painter in civil life, all are taking the elementary electrical couse.

Benwell described the course as "great stuff," and added that he never expected to get such an opportunity when he joined up. The men said that if they came through the war safely they planned to pursue their adopted trades.

Change Of Trades

Huddled about their work benches the men were busy on electrical hook-ups, assembling motors, making switches and other accessories and learning how to wire for power and light.

In the machine shops and woodturning class-rooms there was the same evidence of enthusiasm and activity. Here the same process of remaking craftsmen was in progress. Spr. R. W. Gaines, one-time waiter in a Montreal night club was learning the rudiments of carpentry. His starting assignment was the building of a miniature army hut.

At a bench nearby was Spr. H. Nott of Ottawa, who was overseas with an artillery unit nearly 10 months ago, but was invalided home as the result of a knee injury. A miner in civilian life he volunteered to try his hand at carpentry and added he was not sorry he made the choice.

The men march to work from their camps but when their schooling keeps them up during the midnight hours, as it often does, they are transported back in army lorries.

And when they report for classes they are greeted by a motto over the doorway: "The man who knows how has a job—The man who knows why is his boss."

YWA, Norwood Observes Easter

NORWOOD, April 17 — (ENS).—The monthly meeting of St. Andrew's Y.W.A., Norwood, was held at the home of Mrs. Alfred Bongard on Thursday evening, Miss Ruth Wildman, president, in the chair.

The program was in charge of Mrs. William Golloher, and took the form of an Easter service. The Scripture reading was given by Mrs. A. Bongard, and the circle of prayer was conducted by Mrs. Golloher and Mrs. Jack Rogers. The topic was prepared by Miss E. MacMillan and read by Miss Ruth Wildman. It was from the study book for the year, "Talks on the World Team," which is the life of William Carey. An Easter reading was given by Mrs. Golloher entitled "A Promise of Easter.

At the close of the meeting lunch was served and a social time spent.

On Good Friday all the church in Norwood had special services at different times throughout the day. In the morning the Anglican and United Churches held their services at 10:30 and 11:30 respectively. During the afternoon a service was conducted in the Catholic Church, and in the evening at the Baptist and Presbyterian Churches. All these services were very well attended, as also the special Easter Sunday services, which started with a sunrise service in the Presbyterian Church at six o'clock.

Ex-Police Fined For Beating Drunk Prisoner

PARRY SOUND, Ont., April 17—(CP). — Charges of assault causing actual bodily harm were reduced to charges of common assault here last night when Judge A. B. Curry convicted Martin Lang and Martin Felhaver of Parry Sound in connection with injuries suffered by John Morton of nearby Nobel, Ont., after his arrest here last March 8.

Felhaver, former constable of the Parry Sound Police Force, was fined $25, and Lang, former Chief Constable, was fined $50 when convicted of the reduced charges by Judge Curry. The trial started yesterday.

Both men had resigned from the force after charges were laid by Morton, who was taken to hospital from the Parry Sound jail a few hours after his arrest on a charge of disorderly conduct in a Parry Sound restaurant.

In his summing-up, Judge Curry said he believed the injuries which resulted in Morton staying two days in hospital were as a result of a struggle in the back of the police automobile after Lang and Felhaver had arrested Morton and were taking him to jail. Felhaver said in earlier evidence that he was in the back seat with Morton while Lang drove the automobile.

Judge Curry said the case rested on one point in the Criminal Code—whether the officers used unnecessary force in pursuance of their duties. He said he believed the evidence of the police officers, who told of Morton's struggles and violence after his arrest, and that both had been good police officers in previous service.

The point of whether the officers had used unnecessary force was argued in addresses to the jury by the Crown Prosecutor, E. D. Wilkins of Sudbury, and the defence counsel, E. C. Facer of Sudbury, Mr. Wilkins said unnecessary force had been used, because no one but Morton was hurt during the struggles. Mr. Facer argued that the men had the legal right to use such force as was necessary to overcome resistance to arrest.

In evidence late yesterday Lang said that Morton's face was bleeding when they reached the jail, and that he slapped Morton but did not use his fists. Felhaver testified that Morton had kicked him twice in the stomach and that he had fought back in self-defence.

Other witnesses yesterday said the police officers had struck Morton repeatedly while taking him to the jail. One said Morton had been drinking on the afternoon of March 8.

HASTINGS, April 17.—(ENS)—A beautiful Easter Cantata entitled "The Victory of Bozrah," which was an Easter story interspersed with song, was presented by the choir of Trinity United church on Easter Sunday evening.

The church was decorated with Easter lilies, ferns and snapdragons, and a large congregation was present when the robed choir, which entered from the rear of the church, sang the processional hymn.

Rev. J. E. Glover read the beloved Easter message of the Resurrection and the story was interspersed with solos by Mrs. H. Edwards, Mrs. J. E. Glover, W. W. Knight and L. Humphries. A concluding chorus by the choir included a duet by Mrs. E. Hess and Mrs. J. E. Glover.

Membership Up In Young Britons

BELLEVILLE, Ont., April 17.—(CP)—The 14th annual session of Orange Young Britons of Ontario East opened here yesterday with the delegates being welcomes by Grand Master James S. Duncan of Ottawa.

In his report the Grand Master gave a comprehensive review of the activities of Young Britons during 1940-41, particularly stressing the effects which enlistments into the armed forces had affected in the membership.

Up to the first year, approximately 14 per cent of the members in Ontario East had enlisted. Owing to the fact, that farmers were being called upon for an increase in the production of foodstuff, the majority of these enlistments were from the urban centres.

The report of the grand secretary was read and showed that membership was improving and that suspensions had been cut down. The trophy to the Lodge having the most initiations was won by Perth Lodge No. 221; the visiting trophy was won by Ottawa Lodge No. 33, while the George S. Sloan trophy for degree competition was won by Westboro Lodge No. 350.

The session continued today when the reports of the various committees were received.

This year's industrial exhibition in Helsinki, Finland, was sponsored by the German Chamber of Commerce.

SUPERBOMBS FIRE BERLIN AS RAF THUNDERS REPLY

Greeks, British Shorten Lines Anew

CAIRO, Egypt, April 18 — (AP). — Greek and British forces on the northern front in Greece "are gradually withdrawing to a shorter line of defence," Middle East Headquarters announced to-day.

The communique said that "so far the German advance in this area has been a costly one."

The withdrawal was being made, the communique said, because of increasing German pressure, with German forces getting reinforcements daily—presumably from Yugoslavia.

LONDON, April 18—(CP). — The British Government announced to-night that Yugoslavia is henceforth to be regarded as enemy-occupied territory.

ATHENS, April 18 — (AP). — At least 10 divisions of German troops, supported by upwards of 1,000 planes, hammered at Allied defence lines in Greece to-day, meeting with particularly stubborn resistance in the vicinity of Kalabak on the hard-pressed central front.

On the east flank the Germans were reported exerting relentless pressure on British forces holding positions on slopes of Mount Olympus under a terrific aerial bombardment.

On the opposite flank, German troops driving down along the Greek-Albanian border confronted the Greeks with a new danger which threatened to force their complete withdrawal from Albania.

BERLIN, April 18 — (AP). — The German high command followed up its claim of the capitulation of Yugoslavia to-day by asserting that 17,000 prisoners had been taken on the Greek front and that the battle was going successfully for German arms despite "the most difficult terrain and weather conditions."

(The capitulation claim lacks Allied confirmation, but since the Yugoslav army has not had unified command for some time it was considered unlikely in London that a unified capitulation could have been arranged.

(The situation in Greece was described as developing unfavorably from the Allied viewpoint, with the ability of the Greek sector of the front to hold out becoming doubtful.)

Numerous "road destructions" also were hampering the Germans, the daily communique said.

Announcement by the high command that the Yugoslav army had surrendered and that fighting ceased at noon (6 a.m. EDT) was acclaimed in Berlin.

"It means more men, equipment, and a greater concentration of brilliant leadership for the job which lies ahead in Greece," said Nazi spokesmen.

Gen. Dusan Simovic, who took over the Yugoslav Government when the pro-Axis regime there was ousted, was claimed by German spokesmen to have fled the country.

The two Yugoslav statesmen who swung Yugoslav into the Axis and then were overthrown—former Premier Dragisia Cvetkovic and the former Foreign Minister, Aiksander Cincar-Markovic—were said by the Germans to have been found. Cincar-Markovic was with the gerb Army, apparently a prisoner, it was said, while Cvetkovic was found in Belgrade.

Barrage Fails To Save Hun Capital

Great Public Buildings Apartments Hit In Biggest Raid Yet

LONDON, April 18—(CP).—The Royal Air Force, striking back in swift and fiery answer to Wednesday night's heaviest Nazi raid on London, pounded the heart of Berlin overnight with new and powerful "superbombs" in its biggest assault yet upon the German capital, the Air Ministry announced today.

"Very substantial damage" was inflicted on Berlan ,the Air Ministry declared.

"It will remind the Germans that the R.A.F. still is able to reach Berlin," London sources said of the Berlin assault.

Herbert Morrison, Home Secretary, told London defence workers some of the new-type high explosives were carried to Berlin by the new four-motored Short - Stirling bomber which is capable of carrying several tons of bombs and reputedly is the most powerful in use by any air force in the world.

Details of the Short-Stirling are secret, but it is known to have a long range, high speed and particularly strong defence weapons. It has been used heretofore in attacks on German-occupied territory.

Eight planes were lost in the fiery overnight assault.

Targets in the heart of the German capital were blasted, the Ministry's account said, adding that "fires immediately broke out."

"The attack was pressed home," it added, "and many bursts were seen across the targets. Substantial damage was certainly done."

Other night raids were made on

Murderous Nazi Air Attacks Kill 10,000 In Belgrade, Leave It Smoking Shambles

Men, Women And Children Lie By Hundreds Amidst Debris Of Their Homes Obeying Order To Death 'To Stay Off Roads'

By ROBERT ST. JOHN (Associated Press Staff Writer), gets first despatch through from Belgrade since Palm Sun day.

SOMEWHERE IN MONTENEGRO WITH THE REMNANTS OF THE YUGOSLAV ARMY—(Via Athens, Greece), April 16—(Delayed)—(AP).—Mass German air attacks that killed at least 10,000 persons in Belgrade alone and turned Yugoslavia's principal cities into smoking shambles struck the paralyzing blows opening the Balkan war.

Men, women and children lay by the hundreds in the debris of their homes after concentrated Nazi bombing attacks on cities.

These civilians were ordered by their government not to clog the roads by wild flight, hampering the military as refugees did in France, but to die on their thresholds if necessary. And there they died.

For nine days I rode across Yugoslavia behind the lines, watching the army try vainly with rifles and oxen-drawn artillery to repel the overwhelming mechanized force of Hitler's divisions and dive bombers.

Almost from the first hour of the German invasion, the army was without communications. One division seldom knew what the one next to it was doing.

Individually, the Serbian forces fought with great bravery, and reported inflicting heavy losses on the Germans. In one day's attack the military claimed destruction of 200 Nazi tanks.

I say the Serbian Army fought—because in travelling about I have seen many Croatian deserters, and in the critical hours of the fighting officials announced the Croats had revolted in the north.

It Was a Massacre.

It was in Belgrade the morning the German air force attacked the citizens, who had not yet learned the nation was at war, poured into the streets when the sirens screamed and the bomber squadrons roared overhead. They stood and stared curiously up at the planes and did not take shelter—though there were not enough shelters for all.

It was a massacre. At least 10,000 died in the capital alone. In one square I counted more than 200 bodies after the first morning raid.

Almost at the start the water supply failed and huge fires raged unchecked until the city was mantled with a heavy smoke pall.

Latest British Smash City Of Brest's Most Terrible Raid

BUDAPEST, April 18—(AP). — A dispatch today to the Hungarian News Agency from Sofia, capital of Bulgaria, predicted that Bulgaria would occupy Greek Macedonia in the next few days. This territory long has been the object of Bulgarian revisionist claims.

VICHY, France, April 18—(AP)—The French Information Office claimed today that 76 persons were killed and 50 wounded in a recent Royal Air Force bombardment of Brest.

The Information Office said the bombing was "the most terrible Brest has known," but no particulars of the material damage were disclosed.

(The German battleships Scharnhorst and Gneisenau have been sheltering at Brest.)

St. Paul's Hit Again

LONDON, April 18—(CP). — St. Paul's Cathedral suffered its second bombing during a recent air raid.

One bomb whistled through the towering dome of the famous building, pierced the floor of the main auditorium and was exploded in the crypt.

Only a comparative pinpoint of a hole was left in the dome, but the main floor showed a gaping chasm and the crypt under it was a mass of broken stone.

Gallow Gang's Sentences All Increased

The final chapter in the tangled story of teh C.D.S. break-in here on February 2 was written in police court Thursday afternoon when Magistrate O. A. Langley, K.C., found Louis Gallow, 38, and William Bradd, 28, guilty of attempting to break out of the county jail on the night of April 3. Thomas Nicholls, 36, and Lawrence Burns, 28, had previously pleaded guilty to the same charge.

Magistrate Langley sentenced Nicholls and Burns to 15 months, Gallow to 12 months and Bradd to nine months in the Kingston Penitentiary, the sentences to commence at the expiration of the terms already meted out to the four for burglary.

Gallow had previously been sentenced to seven, Bradd to five and Burns and Nicholls to four years in the penitentiary.

The hearing was featured by an attempt on the part of Nicholls and Burns to take the whole responsibility for the attempted jail-break and to exonerate the other two of any part in the affair. Both Nicholls and Burns swore that Gallow and Bradd had in no way been concerned in the attempt to escape from jail but in giving judgment Magistrate Langley declared that he could place "no reliance on their evidence whatever."

"Their fanciful story of how they escaped from the punishment cell," said His Worship, "is not believed by me. It is merely a concoction of falsehoods evolved for the purpose of

Losses Ignored As Hun Hordes Storm Up Passes

By EDWARD KENNEDY
(Associated Press Staff Writer.)

With British Forces on the Greek Warfront, April 17 (Delayed)—(AP)—German forces smashing ceaselessly at the Greek and British defence line have suffered enormous losses—some estimates placing the number of their dead in the Greek invasion at 50,000.

But although Nazi bodies are piled high, Hitler's high command continues to send seemingly inexhaustible divisions of powerfully armed men into the assault. Column after column of German troops, supported by dive-bombers, is being hurled against the Greek-British defence lines.

The situation is serious but not hopeless, military authorities said.

For the past six days, British, Australian and New Zealand troops have met incessant attacks along the Mount Olympic line (east flank of the defence barrier) and when I left there at noon today they still were holding.

To the west, the Germans made some inroads from Grevena against Greeks fighting with inadequate equipment. I was told steps had been taken to prevent this drive from cutting off the British force from behind.

Large troop movements were going on behind the front as the Allies sought to bolster defence positions and rectify the lines if necessary. German prisoners were being brought back in trucks.

German numerical superiority in the air is even greater than on the ground. Myriads of dive-bombers constantly harassing the defenders apparently constitute the German solution to the problem presented by the reduced efficiency of mechanized divisions in mountainous country.

RAF Takes Costly Toll Of Axis On Libyan Front

CAIRO, April 18 (AP) — The British and Australian Royal Air Forces have joined in a damaging "harassment" offensive against Axis forces threatening the British position in Egypt, it was disclosed today in a Middle East communique.

The fliers used bombs and machine guns in the attacks, which began Wednesday night and continued throughout yesterday. Enemy troops, air fields and supplies were repeatedly hit.

When bombs fell among aircraft on Derna airfield fires were started which set off explosions felt by the British and Australian pilots 3,000 feet above.

Desert-wise British troops, supported by the bombs of the Royal Air Force and the guns of the Mediterranean fleet, have inflicted new and heavy casualties upon Axis units in mechanized and bayonet fighting on the North African front, according to today's Middle East communiques.

Besides numerous Axis men and vehicles destroyed in clashes at Tobruk and Salum, the British command reported capture of five Axis officers and 72 men.

The high command paid tribute to the "dash and determined fighting qualities" of the Imperial forces engaging the Axis troops at the Libyan port, Tobruk, and the Egyptian border outpost, Salum.

Fleet Blows Some Gaps

Backing them up were units of the Mediterranean fleet which pumped tons of shells into the Axis positions west of Salum in a bom-

Slowing Up War McClarty's Plea To Miners

OTTAWA, April 18.—(CP).—Labor Minister McLarty to-day addressed an appeal to employees of Nova Scotia coal mines now closed down "to resume work at once and to give us coal without stint" in the interest of the war effort.

The Labor Minister's statement was given to the press from his office after it had been sent to representatives of employees of coal mines in Cape Breton where for more than two days the 12 big collieries have been without production.

The work stoppage by members of 13 United Mine Workers of America was called in protest against the wage policy of their district executive and Mr. McLarty in his appeal said the issue should be settled at the union's regular meetings.

He told the men they were denying to Prime Minister Churchill and the fighting men "the tools of war so urgently needed."

Text of the Minister's appeal:

I make this appeal in the interests of our war effort to the employees of the coal mines of Nova Scotia now closed down.

Bombs For Rome

LONDON, April 18—(CP). —The British Government warned today it would commence "systematic bombing of Rome" if either Athens or Cairo, Egypt, is attacked.

The Government said the Italians are prepared to drop "captured British bombs upon Vatican City" should Rome be raided by the R.A.F.

The announcement came from 10 Downing Street, residence of the Prime Minister.

The greatest care will be taken not to bomb Vatican City, the statement said.

Buy Daffodils In Bomb-Battered Streets

LONDON, April 18—(CP). —Battered by Wednesday night's worst air raid of the war, the central and west end of London blossomed today with a new crop of daffodils and "business as usual" signs.

The only shops not open were those wrecked by bombs and fire.

Many streets closed to traffic yesterday were open today, with the movement of all kinds of vehicles brisk.

Carpenters and joiners were everywhere through the blasted districts, fitting small "air raid" windows to damaged shops, and some of the more optimistic proprietors were having full plate glass windows installed.

While smoke clouds still hung over the great city the daffodil season arrived, causing considerable excitement.

At one market retailers elbowed one another from dawn to midday, unmindful of a nearby sign: "Danger. Unexploded bomb."

"Business?" said one weary salesman. "Why, it's excellent. Good as last year, I would say."

London Patches Up Wounds

Thousands Of Rescuers Still Probe Debris Seeking Trapped

By LOUIS HUNTER
(Canadian Press Staff Writer.)

LONDON, April 18 (CP Cable)—Bomb scars lining her heaving breast like bravery awards, a proud London carried on today the grim task of shaking the dust of the most wanton air bombardment of the war and was cheered by screaming newspaper headlines: "R.A.F. hits back at Berlin."

Thousands of rescue workers, fire fighters and other civil defence personnel continued the seemingly impossible undertaking of healing the wicked wounds in the body of the great sprawling metropolis. It will be a long time before some of the wounds inflicted in the indiscriminate, incessant bombing are healed and it is doubtful if the full story will ever be able to be told.

London made a quick recovery from the raid but there were still tons upon tons of debris from smashed buildings cluttering the streets, delaying pedestrians bound for work, and necessitating the rerouting of buses.

Here and there heaps of ruins were still smouldering. Pathetic scenes abound with bedraggled men, women and children, some bandaged, poking the debris of their homes in an attempt to recover belongings.

There were grimmer and more pathetic sights where 100 rescue workers still were fine-combing the ruins of a four-storey block of apartments in one London working class district. So far the bodies of two men and two women have been recovered. Seven of 11 persons removed from the debris are alive.

A dog barking in the debris attracted the attention of rescuers, who found the animal beside the body of its master.

A search continued among the wreckage of another block of workers' flats for victims still trapped. The death toll is expected to be heavy. A number of dead was found and others injured were rescued within a few hours and the search

Poor Line Up Before Dawn For Rations, Half Those Needed

(Before the German invasion, Belgium was one of the most prosperous little nations in the world. What the Nazis have done to it can be read between the lines of this despatch which was permitted to pass through the Berlin censor's hands.)

BRUSSELS, April 18 — (AP). — (Via Berlin).—In the hours before dawn while darkness still shrouds the streets of this old city, the poor parade their misery.

Once a Premier said "Belgium is the oasis of the world." But scenes change.

Along the Rue Haute, centre of the poorer district, there once were foods and drinks of all kinds at low prices in hundreds of beautiful shops.

Now it is a scene from a Dickens' tale of misery. The wretched down-and-out can spend hours looking at empty shop windows. No bread or butter, but there are heaps of luxury chocolates. These can be obtained without ration cards, but they are for the rich only. The ordinary chocolate has long since disappeared.

Since the German occupation, official time in Belgium is two hours ahead of the normal Greenwich mean time and tallies with German summer time.

So it is still dark when the people begin to line up in front of bakeries, horse-meat butcher shops and trip shops. They stand there in the early morning hours patiently waiting for the shops to open.

For three months, the people say, they have missed four-fifths of their normal potato ration.

In municipal staples houses, thousands of pounds of potatoes have been accumulated, but no distribution has been made. This supply has been kept in reserve in case of a bread supply failure. Since January 8, potatoes flour has been incorporated in the grey meal used for baking bread. Many potatoes which have been distributed were

Speed Own Flight—See All Balkans Doomed

ISTANBUL, Turkey, April 18 (AP)—Plans for evacuation of Turkish Thrace facing Bulgaria and Greece continued today as the press conceded that Yugoslavia is finished and said the Balkan war "has entered its last stage."

"Yugoslavia is about to be torn to shreds with a bit for Bulgaria, Hungary and Rumania as well as the new state of Croatia," said the newspaper Tan. "This will free German troops for the attack on Greece."

It was estimated unofficially that 30,000 persons already have left Istanbul, paying their own way. Scheduled free government transportation has not begun.

They're the twins who at their birth entered upon lives as private as a goldfish's.

For their first 26 months both were taken to a child behavior clinic five days a week for seven hours at a time.

Jimmy was left to lie in a crib or play any way he wanted. Johnny was reared scientifically, with all the new-fangled advantages. Johnny's accomplishments quickly outpaced those of his twin brother. He could swim at the age of 308 days and

Heart Of Hun Capital Badly Mauled

Portsmouth Bombed For Hours Casualties Light

LONDON, April 18 (CP)—The air ministry announced today that the Royal Air Force had subjected Berlin to its heaviest attack of the war last night.

"Very powerful bombs" burst across targets in the heart of the German capital, doing "very substantial damage," a communique declared.

Herbert Morrison, Home Secretary, earlier told London defence workers that the bombs dropped on Berlin included some of a new high explosive type which the R.A.F. only recently put into use. He also disclosed that the new Sterling bomber was in action in the raid.

"Unlike the Nazis," he said, "we make no hysterical noises about reprisals. We have our plans. They will be carried out. Berlin was bombed according to plan.

"Let Hitler understand that we have as much right to bomb Berlin as he has to bomb London."

LONDON, April 18 —(CP)—The Royal Air Force delivered a swift answer last night to the devastating German attack on London 24 hours before, striking at Berlin as the German air force aimed new blows at southern, eastern and northeastern England.

Early reports indicated the assault on the German capital, apparently undertaken on short notice by way of reprisal, could not compare with Wednesday night's raid on London, but a semi-official source said:

"It will remind the Germans the R.A.F. still is able to reach Berlin."

The main target of the German air force last night was Portsmouth, south coast naval base, which underwent what the government described as "a fairly heavy attack" lasting from dark until almost daylight.

WASHINGTON, April 18—(CP).—President Roosevelt said at a press conference today that he expected to meet somewhere next week with Prime Minister Mackenzie King.

Mr. Roosevelt did not say where the meeting would take place.

Previously it had been reported they would meet either here or at Warm Springs, Ga., next Monday.

The President said they had not taken up anything important over the tea cups Wednesday, shortly after Mr. King arrived here from Ottawa. He could not say what they expected to discuss at their next meeting. There had been no discussion, he said, in answer to a question of opening Halifax harbor to United States merchant vessels by removing it from the combat zone.

Huns Shoot Italians

LONDON, April 18—(CP).—German planes raiding a British airdrome in Libya machine-gunned Italian prisoners billeted there, the British Broadcasting Corporation reported today. Prisoners wounded by the fire were treated by British hospital attendants.

PALM BEACH, Fla., April 18—(AP).—The Duke and Duchess of Windsor arrived today at this winter resort, where a program of entertainment was arranged despite the Duke's assertion that the three-day visit was designed to discuss personal business.

They motored here from Miami, where a crowd of 2,000 welcomed them a they disembarked from the steamer Berkshire after an overnight trip from Nassau.

They were met there by Major Gray Phillips, the Duke's Comptroller; Capt. Alistar Macintosh, Mayor Alexander Orr, Jr., Miami, and other officials.

Trouble In Nice.

ROME, April 18.—(AP).—A Stefani, Italian propaganda agency, dispatch from Nice, on the French Riviera, reported to-day anti-Italian hostility had been renewed there.

It asserted hostility was reflected in the press and by the radio. The latter, it said, is "controlled directly by Marshal Petain."

The prefect of Nice was quoted as saying before an anti-Italian demonstration organized early in the month: "I give you my word of honor this land will remain always French."

(Before Italy's entry into the war, Nice was among places included in clamor raised in Italian demonstrations for French territory.)

Stefani asserted Italians of the region were "abused by the police, who hate them."

The Italian High Command acknowledged to-day that British naval units had sunk two steamships and a torpedo boat in an attack on an Italian supply convoy bound for North Africa.

Several other ships in the convoy and two other torpedo boats were reported damaged.

Mr. Morrison said the "superbombs" dropped on Berlin last night were the first of this kind used against the Nazi capital.

Berlin Marvels at Return

BERLIN, April 18 — (AP). — "Stronger forces" of the Royal Air Force than ever before used against Berlin penetrated the barriage belt to the centre of the German capital last night in a bombing attack.

Nazi sources said the Prussian State Library, already undergoin repairs as a result of the R.A.F. raid on the night of April 9, again was damaged. Three other "public buildings" and "about 10 apartment houses" were damaged, the High Command said, seeking to minimize casualties.

"Despite the warning which the German Air Force made the night before last by a tremendous retaliatory attack on London, stronger forced again penerated as far as Berlin's outer anti-aircraft carrage," said the daily communique, adding that "single planes succeeded in pushing through the first belt to the city's centre."

THE WAR TO-DAY

By GUY RHOADES
Canadian Press Staff Writer

The situation of the Allies in Greece has reached a serious stage with the collapse of Yugoslavia as a military factor and the consequent release of larger German forces to be thrown against the Anglo-Greek defenders.

The Nazi appeared to be meeting no success in their assault on the British Imperial forces. One British officer told a correspondent that though Nazi tanks were more numerous than those of his forces, the British were vastly superior.

This officer reported British mechanized troops had not lost a single tank by gunfire while British fire had penetrated Nazi tanks as though they were made of butter.

Yugoslavia's defeat appeared attributable to two main causes—inferior equipment and the racial division which sent the Croats into the enemy's camp on a promise of independence. The Serbs fought with heroism and desperation, but their equipment could not match that of their adversaries.

How much the Croats were softened by the German fifth column was difficult to guage immediately, although, the smoothness with which the change of front was accomplished indicated it had been prepared to some extent at least.

The North African situation appeared from a brief London dispatch to have been stabilized and the Axis forces were said to have adopted a "defensive attiude" around Tobruk, Eastern Libya, and Salum, Western Egypt.

The significance of this was not immediately apparent, but these causes suggested themselves.

The combined Axis forces, like the Italians in the last Libyan campaign, may have extended their lines too far and too hurriedly, so that they can be cracked from the rear by aircraft.

The losses they suffered in encounters with British rear-guard delaying troops and naval forces may have weakened them too far for offensive action with reinforcements against augmented British forces.

The destruction of their supply convoy of eight ships in the Mediterranean may have left them insufficiently equipped and supplied for further ambitious projects.

Tunnelling under the debris of buildings where 300 or 400 persons lived, rescue workers so far have not located anyone and it is feared there is little likelihood of anyone still trapped being rescued alive.

"Yesterday our men were relieved by reserve squads from another borough as well as our own," a worker said. "We've made tunnels under the debris, down which our men crawled and shouted, but there has been no sound in response."

A woman rescued after being trapped for nine hours in a ruined shelter where 20 persons are still trapped said: "We never thought any of us would get out alive. Through the long hours of waiting I comforted those who were alive by moistening their lips with orange juice. I could hear the flames over us."

Thousands Served Meals.

Emergency services have been able to deal with the feeding of the homeless. About 170 feeding centres are operating to-day, serving thousands of meals, and many cooks in these centres deprived of gas turned out field kitchens rigged up temporarily.

Fleets of buses, including 500 extra vehicles, mobilized while the attack was at its peak, took a load from the interrupted rail services avoiding damaged streets where civil defence workers were still dealing with the havoc. A great many streets are closed.

Eight buses converted into big ambulances completed the job of removing to a country base hospital numerous casualties who had been taken to the mental section of a northwest London hospital which suffered a hit. After the bombing nurses tended and bandaged the wounded in corridors by the light of hurricane lamps.

Prime Minister and Mrs. Churchill toured west end areas and were cheered by workers who clapped and shouted: "Are we downhearted? No!"

Waving his stick at the wreckage, the Prime Minister told auxiliary fire service men: "You seem to be doing a pretty good job here too."

Home Secretary Herbert Morrison inspected the civil defence services and told 300 cheering air raids precautions personnel that new British bombs had been used in the raid on Berlin last night.

The Chislehurts caves in Kent received an influx of Londoners, many of them pushing perambulators with their bedding. But the caves are already filled and it is impossible to shelter anybody else. It was feared tha if more people arrived transport arrangements would be unable to cope with returning them to their homes in the blackout.

Istanbul's only subway, a half-mile tunnel under a hill, was being converted into a huge air raid shelter.

Commenting on the United States promise of help to Yugoslavia, the newspaper Aksam said: "It is sad to think that when help arrives Yugoslavia will be no more. On the sprawling East African fronts the high command said that its forces were in contact with the Fascists 14 miles south of Dessie, in northwest Ethiopia, and that south and southwest of Addis Ababa and other Ethiopian sectors "the advance of our troops also is making progress."

A General Graziosi was taken prisoner and hurried to an Addis Ababa hospital for treatment of his wounds after he had been left for dead by his own troops.

(A General Eugenio Graziosi is an Italian corps commander in Africa. He saw service in Italy's African campaign in 1896, the Italian-Turkish war of 1899 and the first Great War, having won high decorations in the last.)

Numerous other prisoners were captured, the high command reported, in the African operations which appeared headed toward a climax.

Porto Edda is the last Albanian port held by the Greeks, who occupied it Dec. 6.

Premet, Argirocastro and Porto Palmero also have been re-occupied the High Command claimed.

Arrival of Fascist troops at Dubrovnik coming from both north and south completed occupation of Yugoslavia's Adriatic coast, the High Command asserted.

(Premet fell to the Greek forces last Dec. 4 and they took the important town of Argirocastro four days later. The two towns are in Southern Albania about 10 miles from the Greek-Albanian border. (Dubrovnik, Yugoslavia, is about 75 miles up the coast from the northern border of Albania).

50,000 Casualties.

ATHENS, April 18.—(CP).—One authority to-day estimated Germany had lost 50,000 casualties in the Greek invasion so far.

BERLIN, April 18—(AP).—Nazi spokesmen asserted today that the end of the Yugoslav campaign does not mean there will be any letup in German military activity.

They said that even the military defeat of Greece would not mean a pause such as ensued after the Polish campaign.

They asserted that the Balkan campaign "is but one sector of a great struggle in the Mediterranean zone," that Egypt and North Africa are quite as much a part of this struggle as Greece, and that therefore uninterrupted military activity may be expected.

13 Less Stukas

ATHENS, April 18—(AP).—Official announcement today that the Royal Air Force had shot down 13 German planes, nine of them dive bombers, in the past three days indicated that the Germans are using vast numbers of this type of planes in an attempt to break British resistance.

The R.A.F. reported the loss of four planes, of which the pilots of two are safe.

On Mount Olympus, British and Imperial troops have hurled back repeated waves of Nazi infantry for six days, reports reaching Athens said. Steps have been taken, it was added, to prevent the German smash from Grevena from cutting off the British from behind.

The Athens radio last last night that the British right wing north of Katerina, in the Olympus arena, had thrown the Germans back with heavy losses.

Mount Olympus, fabled home of the ancient gods of Greece, resounds all day and all night to the sound of dive-bombers, which roar over in batches of 20 to 40 to dump bombs.

A British tank officer asserted not one British tank had been put out of action by gunfire but that "our shells go through the Nazi tanks like cheese."

CAIRO, Egypt, April 18 —(AP)—British warships are continuing to pump hundreds of tons of shells into Axis positions west of Salum, Egyptian outpost just across the border from Libya where land fighting is in progress between the British forces and Italian and German advance units.

The shelling started 48 hours ago and helped put the brakes on the Axis advance across the western desert, military authorities reported today.

Long columns of Axis motor transport were destroyed by the British men-o'-war, which moved close inshore and kept up the attack despite frequent Axis air attacks.

PONTIAC, Mich., April 18 (AP)—An additional $2,500 a month widow's allowance was granted Mrs. Annie Laurine Dodge Lange yesterday by Probate Judge Arthur Moore. She had previously received a $5,000 monthly allowance.

The grant, which provided for immediate payment of $60,000, was made retroactive to August 15, 1938 when Mrs. Lange's first husband, Daniel G. Dodge, heir to an automobile fortune, was killed in an accidental explosion while on their honeymoon.

Trustees Put Up $1 Subsidy Idea

TORONTO, April 18—(CP).—The 80th annual convention of the Ontario Educational Association ended here last night after four days of activity. The convention was attended by teachers, trustees, ratepayers and school inspectors from many parts of the province.

The convention's program last night was not heavy, most divisional annual meetings and discussions having been held earlier in the week.

A resolution adopted late yesterday by the trustees department asked a Federal Government subsidy of $1 a pupil yearly to all primary schools in Canada "where English only is taught." It was explained that French is not taught in primary schools and therefore was not contained in the resolution.

The college and secondary schools art teachers' meeting formed a new organization yesterday, the Ontario Association of Teachers of Art. In another meeting, the Home economics section was told by Frank S. COBOURG PRESBYTERIAL OF THE W. M. S. MEETS IN PORT HOPE

Mrs. S. J. Gray Of Garden Hill Is Re-elected President; Increased Revenue Is Reported

PORT HOPE, April 18 (ENS) — Mrs. S. J. Gray, Garden Hill, presided at the opening session of the Cobourg Presbyterial W.M.S. annual meeting which was held here Thursday. She was returned to office for another year when the nominating committee's slate was accepted.

Mrs. F. N. Belyea, president of the Port Hope Auxiliary welcomed the delegates, expressing the hope the meeting might profitably spend its time in the Master's work. The Cobourg Evening Auxiliary with Mrs. F. Sherman presiding conducted the morning worship service, and later reports were presented.

Christian Stewardship

Mrs. Fred Sherman presented an inspiring address on Christian Stewardship and Finance in the opening address of the afternoon session. Emphasizing the need for continued giving Mrs. Sherman said that all other contributions should be maintained and any demands brought on by world conditions should be met by sacrifice. "We should give thanks we are far from the scene of war where homes and churches have been destroyed. Our regular demands should be and extra demands brought on by the condition of the world should be a sacrifice" The delegates were urged to contribute as God prospered them.

Financial problems at the end of the season may be solved by panned giving through envelopes or budgeting. "Let our giving be spontaneous, cheerful and sacrificial, even to the points where it hurts" Mrs. Sherman asked, "as Christian women allied to a Christian society we dare not forsake it and its aims the very moment it is war."

Cheering information was divulged when it was learned there are more auxiliaries studying than previous and that donations increased last year. There has also been an increase in the number of auxiliaries. The sum of $7,405.00 was raised in 1940, Mrs. S. J. Findlay reported.

Those in Attendance

The roll call revealed the following Afternoon Auxiliaries were present: Baltimore, Bethesda, Harwood, Bethesda South, Bethel Grove Brighton, Camborne, Campbellford, Canton, Carmen, Castleton, Centreton, Cobourg, Colborne, Cold Springs, Dartmouth, Elizabethville, Fenella, Frankford, Garden Hill, Gore's Landing, Grafton, Norham, Plainville, Port Hope, Roseneath, Vernonville, Warkworth, Welcome, Wicklow, Wooler. There were also four Evening Auxiliaries represented: Brighton, Campbellford, Cobourg and Port Hope.

An impressive worship service "In Memoriam" for eighteen members Presbytery W.M.S. who have passed away was conducted by the Frankford Auxiliary. As the names of the late members were read a rose was placed in a silver container in their memory Those whose term of office had ended thus were from Cobourg, Wooler, Carmen, Fenella, Garden Hill, Roseneath, Centreton, Brighton, Smithfield, Dartford and Campbellford. The text read during the service was from the 14th Chapter of Mark.

"Stock Taking in War Time" was the topic of Mrs. G. E. Forbes interesting address. Mrs. Forbes is a former president of the Dominion Board of the W.M.S.

Now, more than ever, there is reason for mission work it was declared, War has threatened the destruction of the material foundation and men are looking towards the lessons of Christianity more than ever. Despite the withdrawal of missionaries from Far Eastern countries there is an increasing demand for missions throughout the world, Mrs. Forbes declared. "It is a testing time for us who are in this Christian enterprise to prove the reality of the Christian fellowship," she said, "and we must demonstrate the fact that there can be a Christian brotherhood in the midst of war."

British Are Going Forward

Mrs. Forbes related that though the people of Great Britain are in the midst of war they increased their givings last year. "They have been going forward in the midst of war, realizing the opportunity was greater."

Referring to the challenge of the war, Mrs. Forbes declared, "we have more work to do than ever before, but we must also carry on all our Christians activities, in order to keep Christianity a strong vital force."

"Men and women are turning to the church today as it is the only stabilizing force. Everything else is gone."

"God is calling us today. A new world will have to be born and you and I must begin laying the foundations for it," delegates were told. "If the W.M.S. is going to face realities it must take stock."

Mrs. Forbes asked for more missionaries in spite of the withdrawal from some fields. There is unlimited work in other areas including West China, India and southern islands. In time the now abandoned fields may again be taken up, it was felt.

The W.M.S. needs increased membership, the delegates were told. "We need more members in our W.M.S.," Mrs. Forbes said, "the program is wide enough to give every woman a voice and exercise their ability."

Mrs. Forbes referred to the War Savings Stamps plan, by which steps are being taken to reduce the church deficit.

Prayer is increasing throughout the church. Mrs. Forbes said. In the recent World Day of Prayer the contributions reflected the new stress laid on prayer.

Discontinuance Of Beer Parlors Is Asked By Presbyterial W.M.S. In Petition

PORT HOPE, Ont., April 18 — (CP).—Protesting the sale of alcoholic beverages, the Cobourg Presbytery of the Women's Missionary Society of the United Church meeting at Port Hope addressed a petition to Prime Minister Mackenzie King, asking for the following:

1—Discontinuance of alcohol beverages in beer parlors, taverns and all other places of retail sales; 2—That sales be confined to government-owned stores; 3—That advertising of liquor be forbidden by law; 4—That wet canteens in military establishments be abolished.

The resolution pointed out the expediency for conserving resources in war time and it charged the money expended on the sale of liquor was "a large and unnecessary amount." It said the beverage rooms were a temptation, especially to enlisted men away from home for the first time and said there is a growing alarm across the Dominion at the moral and physical injury caused the youth of both sexes by the free sale of liquor.

Percy Farmer's Home Is Destroyed

HASTINGS, April 18 (ENS) — Three hours after fire broke out at his farm home in Percy township, Edward Fitzpatrick, who was trapping at the time, learned from a neighbor of his misfortune. The fire which occurred on Thursday shortly after the noon hour, completely destroyed the frame house and contents. The fire, of undetermined origin, gained considerable headway before it was noticed by the two hired men, Oscar Scriver and P. Wizzall. The high winds soon had it out of control.

The farm home, situated near the shores of the Trent about six miles from Hastings, is rather isolated, and there are few neighbors, and due to the bad condition of the roads it was impossibl for many to rush to the scene of the fire. However, alarms were sent to many by telephone and willing workers gathered to save the sheds and barn.

They Want Bare Facts

British papers have been speaking plainly about the manner in which official war news is presented. They say it is soft soap, and it is written in such a way that it causes the feeling that the reading public cannot be trusted to have the facts placed before them.

Others claim that the war reports must be written to conform to the demand for bed-time stories which always have a nice ending so the children will be able to listen all the way through and then topple over in slumber.

So the demand comes from the British press for the straight hard stuff. They do not desire to have the official writer of news pulling his punches or bothering about what the effect is going to be on the general public. When there's a nasty situation they desire that it be made to appear NASTY and nothing else. When there is a bit of good news they want it that way and not for more than it is worth.

With that general policy we doubt if there can be much quarrel, but having said that it is reasonable and right to contend that it would take a man or a group of men with elaborate knowledge and more elaborate reports to so write and report war news so that it could at once be identified as good, bad or very bad.

When the supporting lines were withdrawn and the British expeditionary force was left to fight its way out to Dunkirk, where is the writer of reports, official or otherwise, who could from day to day, or several times a day, have given a correct account of what was going on there, or who could have correctly classed it as a tremendous defeat or a glorious escape?

Prime Minister Churchill made that plain enough in his statement in the Commons when he announced that the troops had been evacuated from Dunkirk, and it was then that he stated he had feared it was going to have been his duty to announce one of the most fearful disasters in the long history of the Empire.

With the fast-moving equipment of today a battle ranges over miles and miles, and it may be over territory with which the people at home are entirely unfamiliar; may be in places of which they have never heard and about which they know nothing.

We are not asking to have the muffler placed on news which is not pleasant to read, but merely contending that at the moment when news is breaking, and when it is being rushed out to the world that it is not humanly possible to tag or properly index it as bad, worse or worst.

Mean Anything To You?

News from London brings to the front the Peterborough Fund for British War Victims. We read that the latest German raid over that city was heavier than anything which had been experienced before.

We read that and we try and picture what it must mean, but we can't. We may even waste good breath in breathing forth mutterings against the raiders, but that doesn't help a bit. We are a good 3,000 miles removed and all we may say will never be heard by those against whom we launch our diatribes.

The Peterborough Fund is near the $13,000 mark, but we believe that would not cover the physical damage which would be done by the dropping of one well-placed German bomb.

Right now is the time when you and you and you can show in a definite way what you think about this business. It is personal interest that is going to count.

It is pretty much the same as the way you would feel if there was trouble or disaster in your own home and the neighbors started arriving to see what they could do about it. Their efforts might not be able to undo the harm or injury which had been inflicted, but the very fact that they came would mean more to you than you would utter in words.

Remember, too, that every dollar you put into this fund is still a complete dollar when it arrives in London. There is not one cent taken out for what might be called overhead or expenses, because all the work is being done freely and gladly.

Your contribution right now is a direct way of saying what you think of the renewed attack upon London.

Probe Is Justified

It does look as though there had been something slack in Toronto. A resident of that city, 51 years old, was given vitamin B injections and two days later he was dead. Since then nine other patients have been admitted to Toronto General Hospital for treatment and they were of the same type. Fortunately they responded to curative measures and are making progress toward recovery.

It is now stated that staphylococcus has been found in the bottle used for the vitamin B injections, and that is the type of bacteria which causes boils, pimples, or when a number are localized an ulcer will result.

It is well to know that the Chief Coroner for the province is going to have the situation examined at an inquest and at this moment that is the only way to deal with the situation. During war years the giving of injections increases as it never does in times of peace, and if there was anything defective in the method employed in this particular case then it should be made public. When injections are given they enter the blood stream and if an infected or impure ingredient is used then damage has been done which is difficult to overtake. The public is interested just as much as the medical profession because in this case it was a man from the ranks of the general public who had to pay the price.

A Teacher Has An Idea

Miss Evelyn McDonald was speaking at a discussion meeting in Toronto, and seemed thoroughly convinced that when young people are through their secondary schooling there are certain fundamentals with which they have not come in contact. For instance—that freedom and duty are twins, and that each single right claimed by man carries with it a reciprocal responsibility.

Teachers in secondary schools, she said, were aware that shortly after they are through with their scholars they will be facing political responsibilities; they will be called upon to vote and to make decisions. Miss McDonald was impressed that there was a vacant space in school curriculum because there had been so little taught in the school which prepared the scholar for the larger life outside.

We believe Miss McDonald (to use a rather common phrase) "has something there." Politics is, or ought to be, the science of government. Too often there is no science about it, particularly when it falls into the hands of rigid partisans who look upon victory as the opportunity to reward their supporters.

We dare say the young chap who has to buy a tag for his dog is not aware of why it has to be done; he probably does not know that if his dog is picked up and taken to the pound the animal's owner can be identified and notified. It would be interesting to know how many tax-payers have an adequate idea of the operation of sinking funds for municipal financing, and yet they may have been paying their share of assessment for local improvements on that basis for years. Or how many members of parliament into whose hands goes the power to tax the people have ever had occasion or desire to make a study of that problem of diminishing returns?

It is also going to be required in the near future that we should know more of international dealings; that we should face boldly into a fair answer to the old charge that tariffs create friction, friction creates hatred, and hatred in turn creates war. It looks to us like a wide open field, and the secondary schools appear to be the logical place for the imparting of sincere instruction. We cannot depend on universities to do it because out of 100 children who start in public school only three of them ever reach university.

Houses In Peterborough

As discussions generally go at such meetings there was a decidedly practical turn to the one at the meeting called by Mayor Hamilton to discuss the housing situation in Peterborough. Those who were taking part in the proceedings knew quite well what they were talking about. That helps.

People who have built or secured for themselves homes in Peterborough within recent months have made a good investment, and we doubt if they need to be told that. It would cost more to build the same house today than it did last year or the season before, and for other houses the market has become firmer and the range of selection is not as great.

Right now the question is whether we are going to have sufficient new homes built on the basis of permanent construction or placement, or whether we are going to depend on the operation of the government proposal for the erection of pre-fabricated houses. There should be no prejudice toward the latter because they are not of the shack variety or anything approaching it. The same principle has been in existence for some time and has been applied to the erection of some very presentable houses.

But it was plainly the feeling of the meeting that there was a preference for the erection of homes of the permanent variety; it was felt it was better for the city, better for those who built them. But the sticking point was whether the government loan plan would be continued and extended to meet the cost of putting up a home today because the cost figure is greater than when the plan was in operation in the first place.

Gordon Fraser, M.P., has evidently been securing all information possible at Ottawa, and he was able to throw some light on the rather contentious question of whether the regulations and activities of the Rent Control Board would be extended to houses built under the government loan plan for rental purposes.

The first meeting did not come to definite conclusions, and it could not have been anticipated that it would as there were too many unknown quantities with which to deal. But it made a start and a committee of practical men has been named to follow the situation. We regard this as one of the most important matters facing Peterborough at the moment because the decisions reached will constitute something with which we will have to live for some time to come.

NOTE AND COMMENT

A great man is probably one who lives in the pleasant memory of his friends after he is dead.

There is something worth while in having a husband. A woman in Dallas, Texas, parted from her man just a week ago and is now charged with murder.

We read that human beings are made of iron, sugar, salt, coal (carbon), water, iodine, oxygen, phosphorous, nitrogen, hydrogen and lime. We have a feeling the sugar was left out of Hitler.

New price administrator at Washington says he is going to watch closely the prices of ten essential commodities. We often watch airplanes and so we know how he'll feel. A kink in the neck.

London, Ont., policeman is said to have refused a 25c shinplaster offered by a boy in payment for a bicycle license. The other policeman on the force said the bill was all right.

Dr. Boomer of the University of Alberta says 150 gallons of gas can be made from a ton of Alberta coal. But he doesn't say who would have to carry out the ashes.

Mechanical bride and groom in a store window at London, Ont., caught fire, and the fire department had to attend to matters. It's not so simple as that in other cases where bride and groom are the real thing.

"You can't legislate patriotism," was one argument used in the legislature of the State of Maine where a resolution was defeated to force children to swear allegiance and salute the flag. And there are times when we are inclined to believe there is more truth in that claim than is generally admitted.

Eight hundred miners at Coleman, Alta., have returned to work after being out for 10 days, and that means 8,000 working days lost. We'd like to have a straight answer to that old question as to why an agreement made after 10 days could not have been made before they quit work.

WEE ANGUS

(By A.R.K.)

¶ Wee Angus used to have a plan, on what he'd do when he's a man, he'd run a corner store; but down the street just where we shop, and where a lot of things we bought, they've up and closed the door.

¶ Wee Angus knows the man down there, he told him closin' wasn't fair, there was no other way; he said he'd been in there for years, till hair turned grey above his ears, but couldn't make it pay.

¶ In summer time Wee Angus goes, and rigs himself in working clothes, and heads off for the farm; and there he helps his Uncle Jed, they see that he's all right and fed, he chores around the barn.

¶ The last time when he came back home, he said he'd leave the farm alone, no profit growing hay; and prices got so low he said, that he'd been told by Uncle Jed, he couldn't make it pay.

¶ And there's a doctor not far off, Wee Angus went there when he'd cough, I think he got some pills; he heard the doctor talking then, about a growing list of men, who never paid their bills.

¶ Wee Angus worries some, he said, about his chance of going ahead, defects in everything; he thinks he'll start at pitching ball, where good men's pay is never small—or fighting in a ring.

Fifth Column To Beat Hitler At Own Game

By CHARLES P. STEWART

WASHINGTON.—What's the matter with employing fifth-column tactics to undermine Herr Hitler?

The suggestion is U.S. Attorney-General Robert H. Jackson's. He made it in the course of a speech in New York a few nights ago, and all the strategists in Washington, diplomatic and military, are falling over one another to indorse the idea. In a general way they doubtless had thought of it before, but not as concretely at it was expressed by Bob Jackson.

Chas. P. Stewart

Adolf's system, as everybody knows, has been to lend sub-rosa support to locally disloyal elements in countries he plans to overrun presently.

Even in the United States he has our bunds to make a play to. They're not strong enough here to be a serious danger, though they're a nuisance, or an offence, anyway. But there are little European democracies that Adolf has found more susceptible.

In Norway, for instance, he had his Norwegian dummy, Quisling, on the job in advance of the German invasion, and Quisling appears to have had quite a little following. This by no means is to say that the Quislingites were in a Norwegian majority. If they'd attempted an uprising exclusively their own, the Oslo government unquestionably would have squelched them in short order.

SUBVERSIVE INFLUENCE

BUT there were enough of them to be quite a subversive influence, which made itself considerably felt when the Nazis swooped down on the western Scandinavian peninsula. At least they were sufficiently potent to hamstring national resistance to the invaders. Consequently, Adolf's conquest was comparatively easy.

Austria, Hungary, Bulgaria and Rumania probably were somewhat more Nazi-istically impregnated than Norway was, but, from all accounts, even these countries were scared into Nazi-ism rather than converted by it. The best guess is that their populations also are overwhelmingly anti-Hitler, if they thought they could do anything about it.

Poland, Holland and Belgium obviously are about 100 per cent anti-Nazi, for they tried to fight and were licked, which must have left 'em sore as blazes.

Denmark, standing no show, did not fight, but it isn't Nazified, either.

Neither is France, except for the merest handful. That, too, is evident.

COUNTER FIFTH-COLUMNIZING

NOW, here are all these peoples, who, on an average, were perhaps five per cent fifth-columnized in advance by Herr Hitler, leaving 95 per cent who are dead willing to be fifth-columnized into anti-Hitlerites. Okeh, proposes Bob Jackson, let's go ahead and fifth-columnize 'em accordingly; they're wonderful raw material. And they ought to be fifth-columnized into solidarity as well as into anti-Hitlerism. Unified, Bob surmises that they'll bother Adolf aplenty.

Yugoslavia doesn't need to be tinkered with. The Yugoslavs are on the rampage already.

Bob didn't mention Italy, but, since he spoke, there are Washington observers who point out that there's another field for fifth-column activities. When Benito Mussolini launched fascism he certainly had a majority of the Italians with him. Nevertheless from the very first, he had considerable opposition right on his own peninsula. He suppressed it with castor oil and several assassinations, but all his original opponents can't be dead yet. And, considering the luck he'd had lately, there's a good bit of wondering if most of his countrymen aren't getting pretty sick of him. So why isn't there an Italian opening for a deal of fifth-column cultivation? Mussolini, going into the discard, wouldn't be much of a personal loss to Adolf, but he'd be embarrassed by having his whole partner kingdom lie down—or actually come out against him. It might be accomplished by effective fifth-columnizing.

AND IN GERMANY

FINALLY, couldn't some of it be pulled off in Germany itself?

There are whispers that there are Germans who don't like Adolf. The fatherland has some liberal traditions. If there are Teutons, at home, who will subscribe to 'em, they naturally cant' say so. All the same, we have some German exiles, here in the United States, who are as anti-Hitleristic as the next man. Possibly there are a few, as yet unable to get away from Nazi-ism, who'd like to end it. Missionary work with those boys, if any, would be apropos. Just now it would have to be mightily surreptitious, but if fifth-columnism gets started all over the Balkans, Scandinavia, the Low Countries and in Italy, it would be nice to have a modicum of it break out right in Germany.

Bob Jackson's thesis is that Adolf taught us the game. Why not profit from his instructions?

• A Case of German Bluff

From Modern Power and Engineering

THE highly successful system of propaganda of the Nazi regime has focussed engineers' attention on the self-same policy of Germans for many years prior to Hitler rule. The Germans have, in fact, consistently throughout the years endeavored to indicate an inherent high engineering technique, and this was so successfully put over that the real inventors and originators simply sat back in disgust at this knavery.

As is pointed out in a recent issue of "The Engineer" of London, Eng., "practically all the engineering inventions which have formed the foundation of German technical industry came from Britain....In steam engineering and architecture the only intial activity by Germans was in importing finished products —— It is long since the vanguard of German marine engineers worked on the Clyde, from whence came the ideas for their fast Atlantic steamships....Not even Goebbels could claim that German engineering had a hand in the development of the steam turbine, and, much earlier, the first steam locomotive to operate in Germany went there in boxes, just as did the first power loom, the first spinning frame, the first tensile testing machine, and the first ejector condenser.

THE Teutonic illusionists have almost succeeded in creating the impression that internal-combustion engines are of German origin. This is simply not true, since it was from a Frenchman that they took the idea of the four-stroke cycle, from a Scotsman the idea of the two-stroke engine, and from an Irishman the idea of the positive scavenge. The Diesel engine is no longer, or very rarely, built, and the scheme of the modern heavy engine is based mainly on the ideas of an Englishman.

In machine tools the Germans have originated nothing, and for the application of repetition methods of manufacture they are entirely indebted to British and American pioneers. A typical German procedure has been to give German names to inventions originating elsewhere. The armored battle vehicles now so largely used by the Germans originated in Lincoln.

THE fact is that German bluff has long been used in engineering, just as it has been used in the political business. The unfortunate thing is that it has so often appeared to succeed.

"What engineers and industrialists must remember in the future is that all this assertion of German technical superiority should be heavily suppressed....Philosophy they have tried to corrupt for their own base ends, and in the realm of thought, their leading representative was the grandson of a respectable Aberdeen saddler whose name was Cant."

By a concerted national effort we can spike all this form of German propaganda, and not be partisan to the old trickery that caused many Canadian engineering companies to employ Germans. And when we hear of German engineering inventiveness we can also think of German political propaganda, and put the two together in the same category.

The Curse of Job

Tommy, returned from Sunday school, was informed that a new baby brother had arrived.

"Oh," he cried. "Has he cursed yet?"

"Whatever do you mean?" the astonished father asked.

"Well," replied Tommy. "It said in our lesson today that Job cursed the day he was born."

He Knew

The young man strode into the newspaper office and banged his cane on the editor's desk. "Where's the editor?" he shouted.

"He—he's out," replied the clerk nervously. "What's he done this time?"

"In that advertisement for my valveless motor," stormed the visitor, "he's turned the second 'v' into an 'u'."

Not Informative

When the threat of invasion was at its height and all signposts had been removed, a motorist stopped a country yokel and enquired of him the way to a certain village.

The yokel, pointing the direction, replied: "That wore the way before the war, but I b'aint be tellin' anybody now."

OUT OF FRANCE

MINNEAPOLIS is seeing a happy object lesson in co-operation for a completely unselfish purpose: the rescue of the two children of a Minneapolis mother from wartime France.

When the wife of Prof. Emerson P. Schmidt of the University of Minnesota learned that 12-year-old Monique Boutet and her nine-year-old brother, Pierre, were living in Nazaire, France, with no apparent way of coming to their mother here, she and her husband got busy. Staff workers of the State Department, Jewish refugees, representatives of the Unitarian Church, Catholics and Methodists all played a part in finding the children, getting messages to them, arranging their transportation by land and sea to New York and from New York to Minneapolis.

GEN. OKAMOTO, of Japan, who predicted that "the anticipated landing of German forces on the British Isles....is now only a matter of hours," should have been more specific.

There are 24 hours in a day, 168 hours in a week, 720 hours in a month, 8,760 hours in a year, 35,040 hours in a Goering four-year plan, and 87,600 hours in a decade.—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

OUT GOES THE MULE

TIME was, and it was so only a quarter of a century ago, when a considerable war in any part of the world was apt to boom the Missouri mule market.

Growers said "show me the coin" if you want the animals, and grew rich over night from cash purchases by big governments, because mules, and particularly Missouri mules, were about the nearest thing to mechanization the military world knew before the advent of the gasoline-driven vehicle.

But now all that is a thing of the past. And from Kansas City comes the sad news sad anyhow to muleteers, that the tank with its superior ability to get up and get over all sorts of terrain has definitely put the mule back on the farm.

No longer do his long ears and paint-brush tail wave over the battlefield. He has become the slave of the whiffle-tree and the plow.

In the last year even the American Army has bought only 200 of the animals, and the foreign market no longer exists.

The mule definitely has been mustered out of the service. He hasn't enough kick any more.—Detroit Free Press.

Atlantic Still Main Test In War Decision

(By KIRKE L. SIMPSON.)

WASHINGTON, April 18—(AP).—Two motives can be assigned for the increased fury of the Nazi air attack on London:

Foremost must be a belief in Berlin that British morale, the will of the people to fight on, has touched a new all-time low due to events in the Balkans and North Africa. The Nazis hope, perhaps, that the air raids will shatter British spirit completely.

There has been no word from London that morale has been shaken although Britons do not attempt to minimize the grim price paid there in blood and destruction. The fact that they do not try to belittle the raids speaks of unshaken British courage; and that courage undoubtedly is buoyed by British naval interventions in the African campaign, which could turn apparent disaster there into victory.

Britain's city dwellers have come through many nights of aerial terror with thumbs still up. However, the terrible blow that London suffered Wednesday night piled agony on agony. The war news from Greece and from Africa was almost all bad, lightened only by word of British fleet actions.

Hitler has promised his people full victory in 1941. He has now scored new army successes in Yugoslavia, Greece and North Africa. Moreover, Berlin claims that new losses have been inflicted on British vital shipping in the Atlantic.

May Not Be Crisis Year.

It is there, not in the East, that the war still must be lost or won. Nor is there anything definite to imply that the crisis in the Atlantic will come this year, provided British morale can still endure the strain.

Prime Minister Churchill has told Parliament that shipping losses this year would become critical only if 1942 replacements were lacking. He looked to a new American shipbuilding miracle to supply them then.

Nevertheless, the Admiralty's decision to give out official figures on tonnage losses on a monthly basis rather than weekly has an ominous sound. For example, it tends to leave Berlin claims of recent destruction undisputed officially until mid-May.

The reason for the change was to level off ship loss statistics better and avert either undue optimism or justified pessimism. It is more than possible, however, that Berlin read into the move a hint of wavering British morale.

That leads directly to another motive for the fury of the London raid. It was obviously designed to convince the British public that two-front war had not diverted enough Nazi air strength to the East to lessen the force of the grim air siege of Britain, or of the invasion threat.

Partial Answer To Berlin.

London was hammered all night by an estimated 400 Nazi bombers at precisely the time when the heaviest German air concentration was called for in Greece, in North Africa and over the Sicilian Straits. The blow at London unquestionably was designed to demonstrate German air preponderance anew and to revive active invasion fears.

A stabbing British sea blow at the Sicilian Straits supply lines of the Axis North African attack partly answered Berlin. Coupled with the roaring of British naval guns to support the Salum-Tobruk stand of the British troops, destruction of an entire Axis convoy, Africa bound, may prove a turning point in the war. It could lead to an Axis disaster in Africa, ending that threat to the Suez Canal, whatever happens in Greece.

Director Of V.E. Raps Matric Bug Mathematics For Girl Students

TORONTO, April 18.—Home economics can and should be made the most important subject on the curriculum for girls: in fact it should be the centre round which the whole school program for girls should be built, Frank S. Rutherford, director of vocational education for the Province, told the Home Economics section of the O.E.A. in the Royal York yesterday.

"I am speaking of home economics not merely as patchwork and sewing but home economics in all its ramifications including a great variety of occupations concerning the kitchen, the laundry, sewing, home nursing, the bedroom, and all those things that we hope every girl is going to have to do if she is to do if she is to be a citizen of Canada," he said. "Too many people seem to have the idea that training in home economics is to turn out domestic servants. Home economics is to turn out the Canadian girl to be competent in the Canadian home.

"It is your mission," he stressed, "to prepare and inspire every girl so as to make her an efficient, competent, respectful homemaker, and to make the best home possible within the family income and budget."

He deplored "this matriculation bug" and pointed out that only 5 per cent of students went on to university, and he told of instances of well-educated women who married and did not know how to cope with the most elementary problems that arose in their homes. He referred to a graduate nurse who after marriage inquired of her mother: "Is lard shortening?" and of one of the most highly educated women in this city, a post-graduate of the University of Toronto, who when the doctor ordered a mustard plaster to be applied to her husband, hadn't the remotest idea how to prepare a mustard plaster.

"The idea that every girl should be taught higher algebra and geometry is crazy—they might better be learning the catechism," he said with a smile.

"At the conclusion of the war there will be a greater emphasis on practical education than ever before. I expect every secondary school will have its workshop and its home economics department. I suspect there will be more vocational schools, and I wouldn't be at all surprised to find Provincial technical schools to which students from the small schools would come for a finishing course."

Mrs. H. B. Paul of Perth, supervising teacher in Lanark County, told of the handicaps suffered by pupils in the rural schools and made an appeal for extension of opportunities which city children had in such abundance to the rural school boy and girl.

The treatment which put this man right must surely be worth trying in every case of indigestion. Read what he says:—

"Two years ago I suffered very much from indigestion, loss of appetite, and a most severe pain in my back. Food soured in my stomach. I felt most miserable after meals, and had no desire or appetite for them. A friend advised me to try Kruschen Salts. I did so, and I am most happy to testify that after a short time I felt the greatest relief. I continued taking Kruschen till I felt myself quite better and a new man. I feel as light-hearted as I did twenty years ago."—W.B.

FULL HOUSE WILL GO TO BARRIER FOR GREAT KENTUCKY DERBY

2 Dozen Horses Are Still In Derby List

NEW YORK, April 18 —(AP)—If all you hear is true, it's going to be a full house and then some out there on the Downs when "My Old Kentucky Home" calls the horses for the Derby May 3.

For, despite an injury to Bold Irishman, which left his prospects about as bright as an old oatbag, and not forgetting that the next nine days' racing are going to make sharp slices in the lists, there are still two dozen or so of the gallopers in the running to get to the post. At this writing, it looks like the biggest starting field since War Admiral beat 19 others in 1937.

Half of the two dozen, topped by the winter leaders—Dispose, Porter's Cap, Curious Coin and Whirlaway—are just about a dead-eyed cinch to charge out when the starter hollers "come on."

Of the two dozen still regarded as most likely to succeed in getting the ride to the Downs, the big hand has been dealt to Maxie Hirsch, who has four others beside the Texas-owned Flamingo winner, Dispose, a possibilities. If Dispose can't do it, the miracle man of 1935 (remember Bold Venture?) might possibly pull one out of the hat from among Mrs. Parker Corning's Attention, rated as Equipoise's best son; Arnold Hanger's Harvard Square, who has been working first rate at Belmont; Bold Venture's boy, Itabo, stablemate of Dispose in Richard Kleberg's Barn, or the River Edge Farm's Sheriff Culkin, who gets a chance at Jamaia today to show how he fits into the picture, if at all.

Heffernan, Davis To Referee Allan Cup Finals

CALGARY, April 18—(CP).—Leo Heffernan of Montreal and Dick Davis of Winnipeg will be the referees for the first game of the Allan Cup finals here Saturday, between Regina Rangers and Sydney Millionaires, Frank Sargent of Port Arthur, first vice-president of the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association, announced here yesterday.

Second game of the best-of-five series for the Canadian Senior hockey title will be played in Regina Monday, and the third in Saskatoon Wednesday.

While the Millionaires were on their way to this foothills city, Rangers were hustled through a strenuous workout by Coach Freddy Metcalfe. The Rangers were impressive as they skated for an hour.

Rangers will go into the series with only eleven men, having lost Defenceman Sandy Sandelack for the season as a result of a shoulder injury.

Baltimore Orioles chased Carl Hubbell to the showers with a three-run outburst in the first inning of a game between Orioles and Toronto Maple Leafs 15 years ago today. Hubbell left the Leafs for New York Giants of the National League two years later, developing into one of the game's greatest pitchers.

SPORTS — DAY BY DAY

By FRED D. CRAIG

The two clubs picked by all the experts to do most of the battling for first place in the National League, namely the Cincinnati Reds and the Brooklyn Dodgers, are having a great deal of trouble in getting traction. As a matter of cold record neither club has so far moved a wheel in the league race and the two divide cellar honors with a record of three losses in three starts. For the third time yesterday the St. Louis Cards took a fall out of the Reds. It was a close fit with the final counut St. Louis 7, Cincinnati 6, with Gene Thompson the victim this time, although the loss was not credited to him. Brooklyn who would rather lose three games to any one else than one to the New York Giants, had to lower their colors for the third day in a row to Bill Terry's club and by this time the whole Dodger squad must be fit to be tied. The Giants came from behind to take the slap-happy outfit 7 to 5, their third straight win over their neighbors. That is enough to cause a riot call in the Brooklyn sector. In the other National League game played yesterday the Pirates defeated the Chicago Cubs 7 to 2 and Boston triumphed over the Phillies 7 to 5. All four National League winners registered seven runs each, which doesn't happen every day.

* * * * * *

Only half a card was played in the American loop. It saw the New York Yanks finally grab off a game from the Philadelphia Athletics after the A's had taken the first two games of the series. The New Yorkers had their batting togs on and slammed out 12 hits including a homer by Keller to defeat Connie Mack's team by 9 to 4. Getting another sweetly-pitched game, this time by Al Smith, the Cleveland Indians hung another shutout on the Chicago White Sox, Cleveland winning 2 to 0. Smith only allowed six hits as against seven collected by the Indians off the delivery of Lee. The Boston-Washington game and the Detroit-St. Louis tangle were both held over because of rain and cold.

Says Ken Colling in the Belleville Ontario-Intelligencer: "Just what pitching strength the Reliance Aircraft softball squad have up their sleeve is being kept a deep dark secret. However, we understand Johnnie Hamilton and Ralph Anderson both have past baseball experience. Anderson having played ball in the Maritimes and Hamilton up around Toronto. Both are being counted on for service in the O.A.S.A. by the "plane-makers." Hamilton tells us he's guning for the first base slot and is really serious about the whole thing. With Tabby Gow, former Kingston outfielder, and Speedy St. Louis both with the Reliance nine keen rivalry can be expected between the two local intermediate "A" entries in the City League. The Reliance Aircraft also intend to sponsor and operate an inter-plant softball league from which they hope to draft players as the season advances. Skipper Barriage makes no bones about the fact he was counting strongly on some new recruits for his Corbys A.C. nine and will make his supreme effort to win the Eastern Ontario title at least this year. Skipper Gerald has a couple of new faces to present in Corbys A.C. uniforms, both of whom are employed about eight miles from Belleville, he says."

The High Mark of Cmmercialism

This column has been contending for some time that hockey as now operated by the Canadian Hockey Association has become little short of a racket, that the powers-that-be are aiming at bigger gate receipts and that the deliberate policy is to stage games where "the money is" regardless of the rights of individual teams and the claims of home fans for consideration. Fred Jackson, sports editor of the Toronto Star in his "Sports Wheel" column has come out with exactly the same charge. Ridiculing the arrangements for the Memorial Cup finals and for the Allan Cup series Mr. Jackson declares that "the high-water mark of commercialism in the C.H.A. has been reached," and adds that if Mr. Dudley, president of the O.H.A. and the C.H.A. "is wise and is keeping an ear to the ground he should be able to catch rumblings of discontent that are echoing from and to all parts of the Dominion"

* * * * * *

"A few years ago the C.H.A. found itself with little money in the bank, and it was necessary to drastically re-arrange the play-off systems with the executive given carte blanche to spot the games wherever they could make the most money," continues Mr. Jackson. "You couldn't and didn't quarrel with that line of reasoning, because even a hockey association has to have a bank account. Thus all hands agreed with the policy as put down by Dr. Hardy and his associates. But those of us who like to feel there is still a spot of amateurism left in the C.H.A. are finding it hard to reconcile such a mercenary way of conducting playoffs at the present time with the fact that the bank balance of the organization now reads in excess of $61,000."

* * * * * *

"We suggest that Mr. Dudley owes hockey fans, club officials and members of the working press who support and get behind his clubs, an explanation," the article concludes. "We do not want Mr. Dudley to say that if the present policy is abandoned the finances will again go on the rocks. We would like him to say that some day a common-sense ruling will be put into the books of the association to the effect that when the financial status of the C.H.A. makes it necessary games will be played in arenas where a good profit is assured. But not when the cash box is bulging with $61,000!"

The Leafs Look Natural

Toronto Maple Leafs opened their campaign yesterday with a game at Baltimore and the 1941 edition had a familiar look as they went down to a 4 to 2 defeat at the hands of the Orioles. Floyd Stromme, a smart right-hander working in the interests of the Baltimore club held Lena Blackburne's outfit to four hits and while Vallie Eaves who is apparently about the pick of the Toronto pitching staff this season was not hit hard, the winners bunched their blows to give them a win. The big feature of the International League opening day, of course, was the fact that 61,000 fans bought tickets for the first game in Jersey City, a new record for minor league patronage. Only 35,000 could get into the park and the remaining 26,000 probably were just as well satisfied as they were spared the grief of seeing the home club beaten by Rochester 3 to 2.

Sydney Millionaires and the Regina Rangers will meet Saturday night at Calgary in the first game of the best of five series for the Allan Cup. Chief interest for many folk will centre in watching whether the good-luck team of Johnny McCreedy and Dick Kowcinak this year with the Millionaires, will be able once more to prove their worth as mascots by figuring on another championship club. Four times in a row the pair have clicked and if they make it a fifth the New York Americans would do well to sign up the pair for next season just for the luck of the thing. Those boys simply cannot lose, judging by their record. Incidentally we are still of the same opinion that several professional clubs missed the boat when they didn't grab off McCreedy, Kowcinak and Bellinger as a line and toss them into action. If they failed to score more goals than two-thirds of the attacking divisions now in the cash-and-carry we would be surprised.

WASHINGTON, April 18 (AP)—Clark Griffith, owner of Washington Senators, and Mike Jacobs, New York promoter, signed a contract Thursday for a heavyweight fight here May 23 between Champion Joe Louis and Buddy Baer.

The bout, set for fifteen rounds, will be held outdoors in Griffith Stadium.

Quaker Squad Given Edge In Manpower

WINNIPEG, April 18 — (CP). — Saskatoon Quakers are at full strength for the deciding game of the best-of-seven Western junior hockey final with Winnipeg Rangers here tonight and, in a series such as this, manpower, could easily be the major factor.

The teams, tied at three games each, arrived last night from Saskatoon where Quakers deadlocked the series with a 10-2 victory Wednesday.

Coach Russ McQuarrie of Saskatoon reported the club in good shape for the all-important battle. Harold Laycoe, captain and star defenceman who has been troubled with a bronchial ailment, and Winger Tony Leswick, who had been slowed by a bad knee, are both fit for action.

Rangers have three injured players, Defenceman Bill Mortimer and Forwards Hub Macey and Lou Medynski, none of whom saw action Wednesday. Coach Baldy Northcott said there was a possibility Mortimer might see action tonight but the others will be on the bench definitely.

The series winner will leave on Saturday for Toronto, where the best-of-five national final with Montreal Royals open Monday.

Lawn Bowling

By HERB MARTIN

With the fine weather things are beginning to hum in no uncertain manner around our bowling club. Most of the committees are working hard and there is so much to do in such a short time that the chairman of the different committees find it hard to get enough evenings in one week, to accomplish all of their work.

But the most important committee, at least for the time being, is that of the membership committee under J. T. Braund. This committee has to do all of their work between now and May 6th, and this job is no easy one; it is a tough proposition for anyone, but it can be successful if we, and by "we" we mean you and I, get out and do our bit and do it promptly. If we sit back hoping that "George will do it," then we will have only a small club. We are just passing this hint along; we'll wait for a day or two to see what happens.

We strolled over to the greens the other day, just to look things over, and our greens are in wonderful shape, came through the winter in grand condition, no winter kill, no dead spots, nothing but grass and lots of it. The work put on by the greens committee for the last two years is now paying dividends. Maybe we may get going before May 24th —who knows.

The annual meeting of the Central Ontario Lawn Bowling Association will be held in the club rooms of our club on Tuesday evening, April 22nd, at 8 p.m. All are invited.

Masked Wolf Is Carried Out But Adjudged Winner Of Bout

TORONTO, April 18— Although they carried the Masked Wolf away from the ring on a stretcher he was still adjudged the winner of the main bout of last night's wrestling show at the Gardens over Sammy Stein, Jewish star from New York.

While a crowd of close to 4,000 fans hooted and howled disapproval Referee Cliff Worthy awarded the bout to the Wolf, claiming he was the victim of an "accidental foul." Stein hit the man in the mask amidships several times before he finally flattened him.

Whipper Billy Watson, Toronto wrestler, who produced a signed contract to the effect that he, not Stein, was entitled to wrestle the Wolf, appeared in the ring ready for action in the main bout. He spoke to the crowd over the public address system and deplored the fact he was "being pushed around" by not getting the bout. Matchmaker Frank Tunney contended that he was agreeable to Watson wrestling the Wolf, but that the Wolf's manager would not consent to the match.

Main Event

Masked Wolf won from Sammy Stein, New York. Stein disqualified for fouling at 32.07.

Preliminaries

Roland Kirchmeyer, Oklahoma, and George (K.O.) Koverley, of Yugoslavia, wrestled to a 30-minute draw.

Al Getzewich, Boston, and Bill Hanson, Norway, wrestled to a draw in 30 minutes.

Red Wings Whip Giants 3-2; Bears Win 7-6

(By the Associated Press.)

Mayor Frank Hague holds a new minor league record for selling tickets today, as the highlight of the International Baseball League's opening day at Jersey City — but there was a lot of difference between buying a "ducat" and seeing the ball game.

A genius at such things, Mayor Frank sold 61,640 pasteboards to yesterday's Giants-Rochester tussle opening the loop's 58th annual season. However only about 34,000 were able to crowd their way into Roosevelt Stadium to see the Wings whip the Giants 3-2. The old mark was 50,529, which Mayor Hague posted a year ago.

A total of 26,162 fans attended the other three parks to see Newark Bears turn back Montreal's Royals, 7-6, Baltimore's Orioles trim Toronto Leafs, 4-2, and the Buffalo Bisons swamp the Syracuse Chiefs, 11-1.

Carl Doyle, sent down to Rochester by St. Louis Cardinals, settled down after a shaky first inning and subdued the Little Giants. His mates got to Bobby Coombs to tie the count in the fourth. Then, with two out in the sixth, First Baseman Harry Davis tripled to right centre and scored the winning run on Dain Clay's slow roller.

Kelleher Does It

A two-run homer by Frankie Kelleher in the seventh was the margin of victory for Newark. Hank Borowy kept the Royals in check for eight frames, but lost the touch in the ninth and was driven from the mound. Allan Gettel came to the rescue.

Catcher Herman Franks, released to Royals only yesterday by Brooklyn Dodgers, was the batting star, clouting a homer and two doubles.

Home runs by Al Flair and Dixie Howell gave Baltimore's Floyd Stromme the edge over Vallie Eaves in a tight pitching duel at Oriole Park. Stromme turned in a four-hit effort, while Eaves held the Flock to six hits. Each fanned five.

Buffalo ruined the Chief's opener, hopping on Ted Kleinhans and Tom Delacruz for 18 hits, while Fred Hutchinson tossed a six-hitter. Bob Patrick led Bisons' assault with four safeties.

The Leafs Game.

BALTIMORE, Md., April 18. — Inspired by the play of three recruits who earned their spurs at the expense of Vallie Eaves, Baltimore Orioles rang up a 4 to 2 victory over Toronto Maple Leafs here yesterday afternoon, as 6,500 Marylanders witnessed the fifty-eighth inaugural of the International League.

Rookies Homer Howell, Bob Hamilton, and Al Fair collaborted with right-hander Floyd Stromme to make life miserable for Eaves in particular and the Leafs in general yesterday afternoon. While Stromme was putting the brakes on the Leafs' offensive with a neat four-hit display, his three young partners supplied the punch that provided all four Baltimore runs.

Rubeling Homers.

Eaves wasn't far behind his pitching rival in effectiveness, but two of the six safeties he permitted were out-of-the-park wallops. He was given a two-run working margin by the fourth, but when the first of the sixth rolled around, he was behind—and stayed there.

Stromme had to bear down hard in the early rounds, when his jittery supporters committed four miscues in three innings, one of which cost the first run of the game. Al Rubeling pumped a homer over the right centrefield fence in the fourth for the second run, but Stromme tightened and gave up only two singles over the final five frames.

The pay-off punch was powered by Backstop Homer (Dixie) Howell, who drove a two-run homer over the left field fence in the fifth to put the Birds ahead for the first and final time. The youthful catcher, who served his apprenticeship with Ottawa last year in the Canadian-American League, was a surprise starter. Manager Tommy Thomas of the Birds made a last minute decision to start Howell instead of Joe Kracher, and the move paid dividends.

Leafs Blow Chances.

Al Rubeling collected half of the four Toronto blows, with Joe Gantenbein and Bob Latshaw grabbing the others. Eddie Morgan, who was safe twice on infield errors; Bill Lillard and Johnny Tyler and Dewey Williams were especially impotent on the attack. Eric Tipton was similarly unsuccessful, but Tip was short by less than two yards on two run home bids toward the right centrefield sector.

Cards Set Pace Edge Reds In 7-6 Set-to

By JUDSON BAILEY
(Associated Press Sports Writer.)

A few weeks ago, when everybody was guessing and second-guessing baseball's pennant prospects, some of the experts proclaimed that if the St. Louis Cardinals jumped off to a fast start they would run away with the National League race.

Well, the Redbirds are away like a rocket.

They have just won three consecutive games from the world champion Cincinnati Reds and there is no telling where or when they will stop. It might be to-day, but it wasn't yesterday.

The two western rivals put on a Wild West sideshow, with 18 players taking part for each side, and the Cardinals came out by a 7-6 margin.

The superior power of St. Louis was irresistible, as it may be throughout the year, and when the Cardinals came up to the seventh trailing 4-1, they solved the problem simply enough by having Jarrin' Johnny Mize hit a home run with two on and Ernie Koy another with their bases empty.

Brooklyn's unpredictable Dodgers, rated right along with the Reds and Cardinals as flag threats, also absorbed their third straight lacing from the New York Giants 7-5 in a sandlot show of 26 hits and four errors.

The Pittsburg Pirates plastered a 7-2 count on the Chicago Cubs behind the two-hit hurling of Truett (Rip) Sewell, who could have coasted after Vince DiMaggio hit a home run with the bases loaded in the first inning.

Bees Win by 7-5.

The Boston Bees bumped off the Phillies 7-5 with a home run attack that would hav made the weak-hitters who used to inhabit the Beehive squirm. Max West hit a homer with one on in the third. In the eighth, with the Bees trailing 5-4, Babe Dahlgren, the ex-Yankee, slapped a round-tripper with one on, and, finally relief pitcher Wes Ferrell drove out a final homer in the ninth and took credit for the victory.

Al Smith, southpay castoff of the National League, shut out the Chicago White Sox 2-0 for the Cleveland Indians.

Joe McCarthy shook up his New York Yankee lineup and got a 9-4 victory over the Philadelphia Athletics that was cheering mostly because Lefty Gomez went the route for the first time in more than a year.

Dodger Pitcher Mungo Sued

NEW YORK, April 18—(AP). — Van Lingle Mungo, Brooklyn Dodgers' pitcher, was served with an arrest order yesterday in a $20,000 personal damage suit brought by Francisco Colladra Carreno, professional dancer, who charged that the ball player assaulted him in the National Hotel in Havana last March 10.

Carreno claimed tha Mungo beat him after he found his wife and the pitcher in the room of a hostess.

The dancer said he had been unable to dance and had been estranged from his wife since the episode. The couple danced professionally as Gonzalo and Christiana.

The arrest order was served on Mungo at Ebbets Field by King's County Sheriff James V. Mangano. Dodgers' officials posted $500 bond and Mungo was given twenty days to answer the charges.

Karnak Returns $292.10 At Havre

HAVRE DE GRACE, Md., April 18 (AP)—Pete Jr., a son of Wise Pete and Brunette Preferred, showed no respect for a field of 3-year-olds including three Kentucky Derby hopes and won in approved "going away" fashion by a length and a half margin. The victory of the colt, owned by Mrs. M. R. Waugh of Culpepper, Va., came in the Sykesville Purse, a test of six furlongs which drew Don Orlan, Fettacairn and Air Marshal, all named for the Kentucky Classic, and all out of the money.

Second position went to J. Greener's Clarksville with Handy Tom, the favorite, third. Fettacairn, representing the Tower Stable, did show some energy by finishing fourth, but he was beaten off more than six lengths.

Jockey Ira Hanford steadied Pete Jr. along within striking distance while White Time and Handy Tom were running themselves into submission. Clarksville, also close up, went to the front in the stretch but he was unable to resist the Wise Pete colt in the final drive. Pete Jr. paid $16.40 and was clocked in a creditable 1:12 1-5.

A new high for the 1941 season in mutuel payoffs hereabouts came when Abram S. Hewitt's Kanark won the third race and paid $292.10. R. Watson piloted the rank outsider.

MORE ABOUT—

Gallow Gang

clearing the other two."

Detective Sergeant John Nimmo of the Toronto police department was the frist crown witness at the afternoon session. He described what he had found at the jail after the attempted break had been discovered. All four of the accused were in the cell that had been occupied by Bradd and Gallow, Detective Sergeant Nimmo said, when he got there. He had ordered the men out of the cell and they were searched in the kitchen. Before Nicholls was searched he had admitted that he was in possession of a couple of hacksaws and these were found tucked down in each sock. On Gallow was found $50 hidden under his belt and Burns also had $50 hidden on his person.

Finds Parts Of Saw

In the cell where the men had been Detective Sergeant Nimmo said that a piece of a hack saw had been found hidden under the blankets in each bed. In the cell was also a board off the table in the corridor, a number of sheets tied together with a hook at one end, the part of the bars that had been sawn from the window and other articles.

A pair of shoes that Detective Sergeant Nimmo said had been worn by Gallow that night were produced and the witness said there were fresh cuts on the left boot and fresh rubbing such as would be caused by climbing.

Lorne Henderson, head of the criminal investigation department of the T. Eaton Company, who had gone to the jail that night with Detective Sergt. Nimmo, corroborated that officer's evidence as to what had been found in the cell of Gallow and Bradd after the attempted break. Mr. Henderson also told of finding a piece of wire in a bucket in the corridor near where the men had been standing before they were taken into the kitchen to be searched.

Railroaded, Said Gallow

Constable Archie Menzies told of hearing Gallow say in the jail after the break had been prevented that the case was a frame, and that it was because they were being railroaded that they had done what they had.

Chief Constable Newhall corroborated this evidence as to the statement made by Gallow that they had tried to escape because they were being railroaded.

Lieut. Col. T. D. Johnston was recalled to give evidence as to measurements he had made since the morning session as to the spaces between the bars on the cell doors in the north and south corridors.

"Gallow was right this morning," he said. "The space is the same between the bars in the south and in the north corridor, about three-quarters of an inch."

To Mr. Frankel, the witness said that it wa simpossible for him to get his hand out through the bars of the door in the cell occupied by Bradd and Gallow.

This concluded the crown evidence, and after making an unsuccessful motion for the dismissal of Bradd without calling on his defence and Gallow had made a similarly useless motion in his own behalf, Lawrence Burns, who had already pleaded guilty, was called as a defence witness.

"What part did Bradd have in this attempted jail-break?"

"None whatever."

Burns Describes Escape

Burns gave in detail his version of the escape, declaring that after a hole had been broken in the wall between his cell and Nicholls' the bars had been cut on Nicholls' cell door and pushed down, and he and Nicholls had got out into the south corridor. They had pried the lock off the punishment cell in that corridor, and broken a hole through the wall into the punishment cell in the north corridor. Then he said that he had shoved on the door with his feet, making an opening through which Nicholls had been able to shove his arm and pry off the padlock with an iron bar, taken from the door of the toilet.

When they got into the north corridor Burns said that he had opened the lock on the door of Gallow's and Bradd's cell.

"What did you do that for?"

"We wanted to entice Bradd and Gallow to come with us, but they refused."

"I fixed that lock before I was released from jail on bail," declared Burns. "I had been in that cell and I manipulated the lock, filing off a part of it so that I could easily open it with a bit of wire. The guards would not notice it for the lock would lock all right and look secure."

"I ask you," said Mr. Frankel, "did Bradd have anything to do with attempting to break out of jail"

"Absolutely nothing. All the things found in the cell had been carried there by Nicholls and myself."

Burns told of being seen at the window where he was sawing the bars. The sheets found, he said, had come from his and Nicholls' cells, some of them had been stolen off a table in the corridor and two had been handed out from Bradd's and Gallow's cell.

Nicholls Corroborates Pal

Thomas Nicholls, who had also pleaded guilty, corroborated Burns' evidence in detail, but said that it was he who had gone into Bradd and Gallow's cell and handed out the two sheets from there. He declared that neither Bradd nor Gallow had played the slightest part in the escape.

Nicholls was cross-examined at length as to how the lock on the punishment cell in the north corridor had been pried off from the inside. He declared that when Burns pushed the door partly open he had put out his left arm, and using a long iron bar taken from a toilet door had pried off the lock.

"When Burns was seen at the window," Nicholls said, "we gathered up the sheets, the piece of iron bar, the plank from the table and other things in the corridor and carried them into Gallow's cell. We were hoping that when the guard looked into the corridor he would fail to notice the window and would think everything was all right."

Bradd's Denial

William Bradd was called to the box by Mr. Frankel and swore that he had no part whatever in the attempt to escape. He swore that he and Gallow were not out of their cell that night until after the attempted break had been discovered. His trial was not to begin until the next morning and he pleaded "not guilty," he said. Bradd testified that when Burns had opened their cell door Nicholls had come into the cell and taken two sheets which he handed out to Burns. The other articles in the cell, witness said, had been brought there by Burns and Nicholls.

Louis Gallow was the last defence witness and he also swore that he had had nothing to do with the escape and had remained in their cell. He declared that when Burns had asked him if he were going with them he had refused because he felt that he had a good chance to be acquitted on the charge of burglary he was facing. He had known nothing of the attempt to escape until Burns and Bradd appeared in the corridor outside his cell, he said.

Lieut. Col. Johnston, called in rebuttal by the crown, swore that in his opinion it would be impossible for the padlock on the punishment door in the north corridor to be opened from the inside in the manner claimed by Nicholls.

"Nicholls says it was done" commented Mr. Frankel.

Mr. Frankel and Crown Attorney McElderry addressed the court briefly. The former contended that there was no evidence whatever to connect Bradd with the attempted jail-break. Mr. McElderry argued that the men had been acting together and he claimed that the story told by Nicholls as to how the door of the punishment cell in the north corridor had been opened was impossible.

Rejects Defence Evidence

"I do not feel" said Magistrate Langley "that in connection with the evidence of Nicholls and Burns that I can place any reliance in their evidence whatsoever. Their fanciful story of how they escaped from the punishment cell in the north corridor is not believed by me. It is a concoction of falsehoods evolved to save the other two. I have very little faith, either, in the testimony of the other two men."

Magistrate Langley pointed out that the implements of escape had been found in the cell occupied by Burns and Gallow and while Nicholls had told a plausible story about that he did not believe it. He was satisfied that the four men had been working together to accomplish an unlawful purpose, and therefore there would be a conviction.

Nicholls and Burns, he said, would be convicted on their pleas of guilty and the other two on the evidence.

In the matter of punishment Mr. Frankel pleaded for a concurrent sentence but His Worship did not agree with that suggestion.

On the evidence however he said that he thought varying degrees of punishment would be justified.

In sentencing Burns and Nicholls to fifteen months Magistrate Langley said that they had accepted responsibility for the lion's share of the business. "I feel however that you have made yourself the goat of this affair" His Worship told Nicholls.

Gallow was given 12 months to add to his seven-year sentence and Bradd whose part, according to the evidence, had been the smallest in the affair, was sentenced to nine months, making his total sentence five years and nine months.

CAIRO, April 18 (CP)—In North Africa, authorities said, the German-Italian drive has stopped and for the last 48 hours the Axis forces have adopted "a defensive attitude" around Tobruk, eastern Libya, and Salum, in western Egypt.

Italian troops in Ethiopia, commanded by the Duke of Aosta, were reported still resisting persistent pressure of British forces.

An authorized spokesman confirmed a report that the Duke of Aosta had sent a representative to British headquarters in Ethiopia, but declined to discuss the nature of his mission.

(Yesterday, official circles in Rome denied flatly unofficial British reports that the Duke of Aosta had sent a representative to negotiate an armistice.)

The damage was not severe, however, and casualties were light, a communique said.

Elsewhere, the bulletin declared, "casualties were few and no substantial damage was done."

London, still recovering from the effects of Wednesday night's raid, the worst of the war, had two brief air raid alarms between midnight and dawn, but no bombs fell in the capital.

Two German night raiders were reported downed, bringing to 66 the total British defences have destroyed in the last 16 nights.

Low clouds interfered with night attack on Berlin—the 39th directed against the German capital and the first since April 9.

The raid, which resulted in destruction of the State Opera House and damage to the Prussian State Library and other buildings in the heart of Berlin, was described as the heaviest to date there.

Portsmouth Main Target

PORTSMOUTH, England, April 18—(CP).—German planes bombed this important south coast naval base for several hours during the night.

A procession of raiders took part in the attack, which was the heaviest of the night in Britain.

The German planes began coming over shortly after dark and kept up the assault for several hours.

High explosives did damage in various parts of the city, but authorities said casualties were remarkably light.

One heavy high explosive bomb crashed into a church hall from which many persons had hastened to safer shelter just a few minutes previously.

The only casualty in this incident was an air raid precautions warden. He was picked up, seriously hurt, on the edge of a bomb crated which was rapidly filling with water.

Houses were wrecked in many sections of the city, trapping residents under debris.

"SALADA" TEA

THE CURSE OF MANKIND

Robt. G. Jackson, M.D. Now in his 84th year

More than one prominent physician has described constipation as the curse of mankind and especially womankind, as indeed it is. If you know the rankness of a stagnant pool, you can easily imagine the internal condition of a constipated person.

Constipation is so unnecessary. Nature gave every man and woman the muscle mechanism for thorough and punctual elimination. That mechanism is still there even in the person who hasn't been "regular" for years. What's needed is exercise—use—for only by exercise and use can that muscle action be made strong and active again.

Are pills and purges the answer? You know different. The answer is diet. The muscles that form the bowel wall will need bulk on which to work. The nerves that control these muscles need minerals to keep them vital.

I positively assert that if you will eat one full meal a day from any one of my three natural whole-grain cereals Dr. Jackson Meal (formerly Roman Meal), Bekus-Puddy and Lishus, and make other meals of simple, sensible foods, you can re-waken Nature's eliminatory action and keep it functioning regularly. If you are interested in this subject, send for my free booklet "A Glorious Achievement". Address Robt. G. Jackson, M.D., 547 Vine Ave., Toronto.

ANNUAL APPEAL

The local branch of the Grenfell Mission is making its annual appeal for funds. Peterborough citizens who know of the importance of this, are asked to give what they can, in spite of many calls upon their purses at this time. All contributions, large or small, will be most thankfully received by the treasurer, Mrs. G. R. Langley, 239 Burnham street, or may be left at the Examiner office.

JOINS CAMP STAFF.

Jack Hughes, a member of the Examiner's editorial staff, joined the staff at the Military Training Camp to-day. Jack, whose drawings have made him well known throughout the district, was with the Examiner for seven months, and showed every prospect of being a good newspaper man. He is the third member of the editorial staff to join the Canadian Army since the outbreak of war.

JOIN CHURCHILL CLUB

Detective Sergt. John Nimmo of the Toronto police department who was here Thursday in connection with the trial of the four men charged with attempted jail-break took advantage of the opportunity to initiate a number of local police and other citizens into the Churchill Union Jack Club, an organization launched to facilitate the sending of aid to British war victims. Membership in the club costs a dollar and everything except the cost of the Union Jack pin supplied each member goes to the folk in need in the Old Land. If you notice citizens with a metallic flag on their lapel, the chances are they are members of the Churchill Club.

NO EVIDENCE OFFERED

Two youths, Marshall Murney and Everett Feren, arrested some time ago on a charge of vagrancy were dismissed today in police court when Chief Constable Newhall stated that he did not propose to offer any evidence.

CAR IS STOLEN

Wilfrid Cameron, 29, son of Mr. and Mrs. W. L. Cameron of Edmonton and nephew of D. J. Cameron, 571 Gilmour street and Mrs. Elizabeth Ford, 583 Aylmer street, has been promoted to the rank of flight Lieutenant in the R.C.A.F. Flight Lieutenant Cameron, an instructor at Camp Borden, learned to fly with the Edmonton and Alberta Aero Club and prior to enlisting in November, 1939, he was employed with Consolidated Mining and Smelters Corporation.

WILL BE EXAMINED

A Harvey township young man appeared in police court this morning on charges of vagrancy and of being mentally ill. He was remanded until Monday on both charges and Magistrate O. A. Langley ordered that he be examined in the meantime by Drs. H. M. Yelland and A. G. Howson. The man created a disturbance in the police station Thursday when placed under arrest and one of the officers was struck in the melee that ensued.

Toronto Pair Given Freedom

Morris Rosenfarb and Noel George Charon, the two Toronto men who were arrested here with three women on the night of the attempted break at the county jail and who have been remanded several times on a charge of vagrancy appeared before Magistrate O. A. Langley, K.C., in police court this morning.

"We have heard nothing more from the outside police who were inquiring about these men," Chief Constable Newhall informed the court.

Rosenfarb and Charon, who had pleaded not guilty to the charge said that they were ready to go on with their trial this morning.

Chief Newhall announced that he would offer no evidence against either man and accordingly the charges were dismissed and the pair given their liberty.

City Is Divided Into Zones

To facilitate the local salvage drive which is being sponsored here by the Women's Auxiliary to the Civic War Service Council, Inspector James F. Reid has divided the city into six zones for collection purposes.

These will be as follows:

That portion of the city south of Wolfe Street from the river to Monaghan Road.

The section north of Wolfe Street to the south side of Charlotte Street and from the river to Monaghan Road.

The section from Charlotte Street to the south side of McDonnel Street and from the river to Monaghan Road.

The section from McDonnel Street north to the northern city limits.

Ashburnham north of Hunter and Ashburnham south of Hunter Street.

To ensure a systematic collection of salvage the loan of trucks is requested.

"The collection will start on April 24," said Inspector Reid this morning, "and will be carried on Thursday and Friday of each week until the end of May. To do the job properly we will need six trucks each day of collection, to operate from 9 o'clock in the morning until around 1 p.m. We are asking owners of trucks to co-operate by lending them to assist in this drive which is part of the nation-wide salvage campaign being carried on in Canada."

Those who wish to help by placing trucks at the disposal of the Women's Auxiliary are asked to communicate with Inspector Reid at 3535 or 7002, or with Mrs. Earl Kearns, 111 Stewart Street, phone 3026, or with Mrs. Al Heckman, 14 Brown Street, phone 3748.

Bewdley Ladies And Other Groups Push Fund Over $13,000 Mark

During the past four days over one thousand dollars have been added to the amount already raised from Peterborough and district for the British War Victims' Fund, and only a little over $300 is now required to send the sixth £500 to give some help to the thousands made destitute and homeless through the terrific bombardment of their homes from the skies. A group of Bewdley ladies held quiltings, teas and euchres, and as a result $31.11 was handed into the Fund yesterday afternoon by Mrs. D. Coulston. This is the first substantial amount to come in from Bewdley, the Rice Lake summer resort, which Peterborough citizens visit in large numbers during the season.

The Lucky Strike Ladies' Bowling Club gave up their season's prizes, and the splendid amount of $45.00 will certainly help to alleviate the wants of those who have lost their all.

North Monaghan Speaks

Acts speak louder than words, and yesterday North Monaghan came very much to the forefront by contributing $50.00 from the Ratepayers' Association, and $25.00 from the North Monaghan Red Cross. This is the second contribution to come from the latter, and the people of North Monaghan, our nearest neighbors, have been splendid supporters of the Fund. The money was raised in a community effort at Rye's Pavilion, through the courtesy of Herb Payne, who has it under lease, and the Ladies of the Red Cross raised part of it by raffling a quilt which was won by Mr. Courney.

Very few days go by, in which school children under the guidance of their teachers add something to the Fund, and to-day we record a splendid contribution from School Section No. 5, South Monaghan, where the pupils in collaboration with their teacher, Miss Muriel Whittington made a quilt and sold tickets on it to result in $20.00 appearing in our list of acknowledgments today.

Peterborough Golf and Country Club Dance Committee also assisted materially by handing in its cheque for $25.00.

C.G.E. Show

Last night, a packed house greeted the All-Star-Act Variety Show at the Collegiate Institute sponsored by the C.G.E. Social and Athletic Association in aid of the Fund, and their expressions of approval and enjoyment will certainly ensure another packed house for the second performance this evening, and patrons will not only receive full value for the price of admission, but will have also the satisfaction of knowing that 100 per cent of their money will be helping the less fortunate in England.

Salute To Britain

Mr. Goldstone, Manager of the Centre Theatre, has offered to give the entire proceeds of a special "Salute to Britain" Matinee on St. George's Day (next Wednesday) to the Fund. The feature will be "Mortal Storm" and a short special, "This Is England," with a comedy as well, starting at 1.30 p.m. All receipts up to 4.30 will come to the Fund.

Call of The Kawarthas

Next Monday night's premier showing of the whole of these beautiful technicolor films in the Collegiate Auditorium under the auspices of the Ladies' Auxiliary to the War Service Council, provide an excellent opportunity for people to see the beauty of our nearby country, so attractive to visitors far and wide, and 50 per cent of the proceeds will come to the fund. Tickets 25c each may be procured from members or at The Examiner office.

D. J. Fitzgerald Elected Head Of Business Men

Dennis J. Fitzgerald, manager of Zeller's Limited, was chosen president of the Peterborough Business Men's Association, at a meeting of the executive held Thursday night. Don Loucks is the vice-president and J. J. Doris was re-elected as secretary-treasurer.

Mr. Fitzgerald succeeds W. Chris. Hughes, manager of Grafton's, the latter having completed the year started by the late Al. Sharp. J. W. Watson was president for the previous year and J. W. Geraghty headed the association at its inception.

As Victoria Day, May 24th, falls on Saturday, plans are under way to have this holiday celebrated on Monday, May 26. The city council is being requested to make the necessary arrangements, and it is thought that school pupils will not object to an extra day away from the school.

The membership committee is headed by Vern A. Selkirk, and a drive will be staged to try and have every retail merchant become a member of the association.

The question of store-closing hours came in for discussion, and it was mentioned that some merchants do not close their stores at the hour prescribed by law, especially on Saturday nights. The Chief of Police is being asked to lend his fullest co-operation in order to have every store close at the legal hour, and if a gentle warning fails to bring about satisfactory results, legal action will be taken.

City's Neatness Impresses All Visitors

A pervasive appearance of neatness is a primary impression Peterborough has made on Frederick Edwards, special writer for a national magazine, who has been here for several days obtaining information for one of his interesting series of articles on Canadian cities.

"Your main business streets with their retail stores is one of the most attractive I have seen any where," Mr. Edwards said. "I have been comparing this central part of the city with St. Catharines, and I think I would even place Peterborough at the head of the list in that respect.

In many of the cities I have visited you see old properties that are neglected and shabby. The owners become indifferent about such old buildings, and they have a depreciating effect on the whole street. Owners of similar places in Peterborough, however, apparently are aware of such influences and have done their part to keep up externals on something like parity with newer store buildings. I think that two salient impressions of this city are its neatness, cleanness and brightness, and also that it is a place for pleasant and agreeable living."

Freshly Painted

From his room in the Empress Hotel Mr. Edwards pointed across to the market building and Bradburn block north of it.

"You see how those buildings are painted and fresh looking, that is what I mean. I think the market building is ugly architecture, but apart from that, not only are the fronts of the store along the main streets attractive, but one notices the same neatness around here at the rear. And presumably that is a characteristic of Peterborough."

Mr. Edwards said this was his first visit here. He specially mentioned the industrial background, and also formed the opinion from the reaches of the Otonabee River above and below the city, and the nearness of the Kawartha Lakes that Peterborough must be a pleasant place in which to live, that the people perhaps get more out of living in this neighborhood than do folks generally in most other cities.

"Another thing that strikes me is local enthusiasm for various war efforts. I went into a store and noticed a little box to receive contributions for British War Victims, and enquiry along that line brought me further information of the splendid way your citizens have responded to these various appeals. I shall certainly mention that."

The Examiner mentioned to Mr. Edwards his account of Kitchener, St. Catharines and Guelph as linger recollections of his series.

"I am simply trying to describe things as I find them for the great number of readers," he said, "and I am leaving here this evening with good opinions of Peterborough."

Better Pasture Is Needed For More Milk

When midsummer parches the meadows and the livestock of the farm is deprived of its grass ration, what has the manager of the farm to offer his stock?

That was one of the questions discussed in the series of pictures and comment on improvement of pasturage in the office of Frank C. Paterson, agricultural representative.

Only a score of farmers attended, some of the regulars who respond to every agricultural enterprise, most of them good farm practicioners.

Charts indicated that natural pasture begins in the forepart of May and with aftermath in grain fields and other expedients it can be maintained at a fairly high grazing level throughout the summer.

Mr. Paterson presented one group of slides recommending the planting of four or five acres of special mixtures for the dry meadow weeks on both side of the July-August boundary. One mixture was 20 pounds of scarified sweet clover and 2½ bushels of oats; another was 2½ bushels of oats, 20 pounds of Sudan grass and 10 pounds of millet, to the acre.

It was suggested that the special problem that is pressing upon agriculture this summed demanded extraordinary methods, Mr. Paterson said.

Other slides discussed pasturage for sheep and swine and poultry. Several of them showed types of farms in Hastings and Peterborough areas with a rock base and thin layer of soil, and other submarginal kinds of land which it was suggested were fit only for reforestation and should be planted with trees.

Trainees Arrive Exhibition Camp

The strength of the Training Centre here was increased on Thursday with the arrival of 136 men in the 21-year-old clas called up under the four-month training plan. A few others have still to report.

In addition 47 other ranks of the Active Service Force reported here for duty last evening and were posted to Nos. 2 and 3 Companies with other members of the Active Service Force.

The recruits reporting yesterday under the four-month plan similar to the first group, come from various points in Military District No. 3, and met many of their friends in the first group to report here three weeks ago.

The recruits were given a medical board and issued with clothing and equipment and this morning were given some elementary military training. The lads are excellent physical specimens and this morning appeared to settle down quickly in their new surroundings.

The Active Service group came from Eastern points and will be given two months' basic training here.

The officer personnel of the Centre was increased to-day by one when 2nd Lieut. J. W. Hughes of the P.W.R. reported for duty.

A number of both recruits and Active Service men were given weekend leave this week, the others having enjoyed Easter at their homes a week ago. The weather during the past few weeks has been ideal for training, and the camp grounds are improving daily after the recent rains.

Cricketers Plan For Season; Report Balance

The annual Spring meeting of the Peterborough Cricket Club was held at the Chamber of Commerce last night with only a small attendance of members despite a special appeal. Apparently a rather unfortunate night for a meeting had been chosen —but an informal round-table talk showed a keen intention to carry on this old club's activities.

Treasurer R. N. Stuart's financial statement showed a good balance on hand, substantially increased by a generous donation by Mr. Gordon Fraser, M.P., who has kindly consented to be one of the club's honorary vice-president.

The fact that many former players will be working on Saturday afternoons seem to make difficulties in raising a team but it is assured that co-operation with Whitaker's will insure one good team every Saturday. The season will open with the old-established fixture against the Grove School, Lakefield, on May 3, at Nicholls Oval, and interesting home and home games have been arranged with the No. 1 Manning Pool R.C.A.F. in Toronto, who have our well-known Toc H. player, E. Bowden, as secretary.

An earnest appeal is made to any cricketer to come to the support of the old game. Club officials feel sure that there are many old players in Peterborough who are interested and the committee would be glad if they would contact the Captain F. Dyer, 585 Chamberlain street, phone 5870; R. N. Stuart, 701 Stewart street, phone 7470 or B. Boothroyd, 188 Lock street, or C. H. Ireson, 368 Water street, they would be heartily welcomed and have every opportunity of partaking in clean, healthy sport under favorable conditions.

The following are the executive and officials for the coming season: Hon. president, Dr. Hammond; hon. vice-presidents, Gordon K. Fraser, M.P., H. A. Morrow, G. A. Macdonald (Chicago) and E. A. Peck, K.C.; president, Col. C. H. Ackerman; vice-president, C. E. Coleman; captain, F. Dyer; vice-president, Rev. G. F. Kelly; secretary, B. Boothroyd; treasurer, R. N. Stuart; transportation, J. Chambers; entertainment, T. Williams; equipment, D. Grant.

Congratulations were expressed for the success of the Christmas contest which is becoming quite a popular annual event, and the faithful few present were confident that despite unfavorable conditions, it would be a successful season for Peterborough's oldest sporting organization.

Ballots Dropped By Parachute

GIMLI, Man., April 18—(CP).—Bundles of ballots attached to miniature parachutes were packed into an airplane which took off Thursday from this small fishing town 75 miles north of Winnipeg on the shores of Lake Winnipeg.

Two thousand new election ballots are contained in the bundles, which will be dropped over the 17 polls in Rupert's Land constituency. The ballots are intended for use in the Manitoba election next Tuesday, replacing incorrectly marked ballots sent out last week-end.

Pilot Eddie Richards will fly 1,000 miles delivering the ballots. Radio messages have advised deputy returning officers to watch for Richards' plane, which is equipped with skis to enable it to land on still-frozen water at Norway House and God's Lake to take on gasoline.

P. A. Talbot, Manitoba executive council clerk, who has charge of election arrangements, said the incorrect ballots were the result of a "series of errors" by his staff and misunderstandings following telephone conversations with election officials in the northern constituency.

Cardinal Villeneuve Of Quebec Calls Canadians To United Stand

TORONTO, April 17 (CP)—Rodrigue Cardinal Villeneuve explained today the French-Canadian view of Confederation and appealed to all Canadians to do their share in promoting national unity at a moment Canada is engaged with the other nations of the Empire in the battle for "Priceless Ideals."

The Cardinal, only Prince of the Roman Catholic church in Canada, in his address in English to the Empire Club and Canadian Clubs of Toronto, told how all Canadians just as all the other peoples of the Empire "share the substantially same ideals of social and international justice, honor and human dignity."

Those ideals of "righteousness, honor, peace and freedom" for which the British peoples went to war "cannot but be pleasing to God," he said. "And we may confidently leave their triumph in His Almighty hands."

"But, for victory—may I put the stress on prayer," he added.

He stressed the "necessity of religion in education," expressing regret that viewpoint was not "more widely shared by many peoples nowadays who regard religion as a private luxury which should have no part in education."

The Cardinal praised the "example of courage set by the British people." Their courage was "unsurpassed in any conflict in the past."

Quelled Rumors.

"You would perhaps wish to know my views on our beloved country's future," he said. "May I repeat what I publicly said not very long ago. I was led to speak on the subject because there were rumors outside the Province of Quebec, that the French Canadians...were contemplating the establishment of a separate state in their province, and the dominant influence of that separatist movement was the Catholic Church under the leadership of the Cardinal Archbishop of Quebec.

"Not much notice was taken of this mischievous gossip in Quebec, no responsible person attached undue importance to it, but unfortunately, it seemed to have aroused such suspicions in the minds of some English-speaking Canadians, that I availed myself of a fitting occasion to put an end to such ridiculous rumors.

"Addressing a large Catholic and Protestant gathering, I said: "Never did I wish that the Province of Quebec should become either a clerical or Fascist state. The Church in no way admits that patriotism should be love of isolation, that it should be confined to one village, town or province; no, it should extend to the whole of Canada and should be accompanied by a vivid feeling of loyalty to our Sovereign King George VI."

The Pioneers of Canada.

The Cardinal turned to the question of national unity and urged that the fact that French-Canadians were the "pioneers of Canada" and "true Canadians" should "entitle them to a more generous treatment on the part of some of their fellow-Canadians."

"In the Province of Quebec," he said, "the educational rights which the English minority enjoy, should be accepted as the basis for the extension of similar educational facilities to the French-speaking minority in other provinces, and this would certainly contribute considerably to promote national unity.

"No one more than I deplores the unhappy divisions which exist among those who believe in Christianity," he declared. "And I have not the slightest wish to utter one word to provoke controversy or make such divisions wider, but I cannot refrain ....to refer to the injurious and unpatriotic aspersions made by a certain clergyman against my race and

Early Experimental Schools For Canadian Army Prove Great Success

By EDWIN S. JOHNSON
(Canadian Press Military Correspondent.)

TORONTO, April 18 (CP)—An experimental class established in the local plant of the International Harvester Company for skilled army mechanic instructors has proved so successful that the Department of National Defence has decided to extend the scheme to 12 other centres in Canada. The possibility of still further expansion is under consideration.

The test class was inaugurated February 17 as part of the general plan adopted by the army to train its own skilled and semi-skilled workmen rather than tap sources supplying vital war industries. Facilities in the company's plant were offered to the service by F. M. Morton and W. C. Herald, respectively vice-president and manager of motor truck sales in Canada.

"The results attending the first class in Toronto have been phenomenal," said Lt.-Col. Spencer Ball, who has charge of the Dominion-wide organization responsible for the training of embryo army craftsmen.

Col. Ball said that for the present additional plant schools for the development of instructors would be confined to the International Harvester Company with classes to be organized in the following centres: Montreal, Quebec, Ottawa, London, Hamilton, Winnipeg, Saskatoon, Edmonton, Calgary, Lethbridge and Vancouver. The Toronto school will also be retained.

Gradual Expansion

Offers of similar facilities have been received from other Canadian firms and garages but any expansion, Col. Ball said, would be gradual to avoid the possibility of overlapping.

Ten officers from different units making up the Canadian armored division, now in training at Camp Borden, were assigned to undergo the test course. In civilian life they had followed varied professions including the brokerage business, insurance and accountancy. A few had been students while two were members of the permanent force. None had any prior knowledge of mechanics.

At the end of the six weeks course the entire class graduated with a high rating in theoretical examinations and practical work.

"The course these men have taken is actually equivalent to 2½ years of normal apprenticeship," said M. L. H. Kain, assistant plant manager of the company. The graduates would return to their units well equipped to serve as instructors of specialists on whom the smooth-functioning of the army's mechanized wing depends.

The new plant schools will be operated on lines similar to those governing the experimental class with 10 officers or N.C.O.'s attending each 6 weeks' course. Training facilities, tools and instructional personnel is being supplied by the company without cost.

Plant instruction will be in charge of Mr. Kain and Maurice Smith and military supervision will be undertaken by officers in each military district in accordance with plans drawn up by Col. J. K. Lawson, director of military training.

25 Tweed Youths To Aid On Farms

TWEED, April 18—(ENS).—With the rural sections of Hastings County feeling the shortage of labor for farms to the same degree as the rest of the province. Principal T. E. Moffat of the Tweed High School has announced that 25 students have volunteered for work on farms and left school at the Easter vacation to take up their agricultural duties.

These boys have all qualified in their examinations during the year to be eligible for farm work, having obtained the necessary marks in all subjects. They will enter higher grades when school opens in the Autumn.

Thirty more boys have volunteered and will probably leave before the midsummer term. Although a scarcity of farm labor exists in this centre, some of the boys have taken up farm work as far east as Kemptville.

Bonuses To Hit Only Basic Necessities

OTTAWA, April 18 — (CP). — The cost-of-living bonus which may be awarded Canadian workmen by Boards of Conciliation and Investigation will be granted as protection from increases in the cost of basic necessities of life only, the Labor Department said yesterday in an interpretative statement.

The Order-in-Council covering payment of the bonus has already been placed in operation and the Labor Department statement took the form of suggestions for its application by Boards of Conciliation and Investigation.

The interpretation said the bonus was not designed to protect the worker from increases in cost of all his purchases.

"A flat bonus is therefore suggested because a bonus computed on a percentage of wage rates of earnings would favor the better paid workers and defeat the purpose of the order by preventing that decline in the consumption of non-essential commodities which is required by war conditions and is necessary to prevent inflation," the Department statement said.

Purpose of the Order-in-Council was to establish a uniform wage policy for Boards of Conciliation and Investigation by providing that the highest wage rates generally established during 1926-29, or any higher rates established thereafter before December 16, 1940, would be accepted as fair and reasonable. These wage rates may be supplemented by a separate bonus as the cost of living rises.

Life In England—War Style

Although war has taken a terrific toll in England, and bomb damage is estimated at millions of dollars, life in the cities of England continues at a favorable pace. ABOVE on the LEFT is King Haakon of Norway, refugee-king of Nazi-occupied Norway, taking the wheel of a new fire engine which he christened "King Haakon" recently. Sitting beside him is Major Jackson, head of the London fire brigade. Feature of the fire engine is a turntable ladder. In radio messages to his people King Haakon has pleaded with them not to give up hope. In the CENTRE is a young British aviator holding a propeller of a plane. This propeller is used for a scorecard against Hitler's Luftwaffe. Every symbol signifies a German aircraft shot down by the R.A.F. on the RIGHT. Practising what he preaches outside his church, Rev. E. Ralph is proving himself a real Christian. Seeing that furniture often lay for some time exposed to the weather after homes have been bombed, the minister borrowed a coster's barrow and is salvaging the furniture, which he stores in the church hall.

Heart In Mouth Writer Tries To Describe Raid

By EDDY GILMOUR
(Associated Press Staff Writer.)

LONDON, April 18 (AP)—If my heart would just get out of my mouth for a few minutes, perhaps I could write this story.

Outside, the droning sounded like 50,000,000 bumble bees.

"There's an ear-splitting wham from across the street—a 20-foot door blown down. All the doors along both sides of the street are open. The locks were cracked by the force of the blast.

Sounds like 80 guns just went off at once nearby. This old house just shook like a dog after a swim.

My roommate and co-worker, Tom Yarbrough, decides to don his helmet and go out to see what's happening.

Again the old house shimmies and shakes and the lights dim and slowly become bright again. For a half hour there's more of the same, then Yarbrough returns.

I decide to take a look for myself.

I wade through crunching glass to the corner. Flames are shooting high in the air.

Then comes a bomb whistle—and the only possible protection in sight is a stone post.

I flatten myself against it and, for a second, a strange feeling comes over me. The post has four sides. Where will the bomb strike?

Too late now, the bomb has already struck.

Shrapnel splashed in the street as I hot-foot it for a doorway. Made it! and from the dark a voice asks "where you from?"

"The United States," I replied.

"Come in and get some real coffee," said an elderly woman wearing a tin hat. "I was born in New York."

Coffee never tasted better.

Back home and to the typewriter ...It's still night in London. Dawn ought to be along in a little while.

Dollars To Doughnuts

By EDITH ELLINGTON

Yesterday: Anthony takes his Big Idea up to the merchandise manager. Bee waits anxiously, knowing that if he is successful he will ask her to marry him and her masquerade will be ended. A customer tells her that she wants her husband to see a dress. Bee doesn't expect the woman to return, but she does. And her husband is Jenkins, Beatrice Huntington Davenport's chauffeur!

BEE BEGS FOR HER JOB

CHAPTER XX

Jenkins' hands were deep in the pockets of a striped purple suit, and a slouch hat was pushed back on his head. He had the air of a man enduring inhuman punishment.

He was protesting to his wife. "But listen, suppose she stays in South America the rest of the year? You think the old man's going to keep me on a salary for doing nothing I tell you, I might be out a job and you want to buy more dresses!"

"I might not buy it. I just want to try it on."

Beatrice gained control of herself even as Jenkins' eyes wandered around the department. She turned her head just before the moment when that roving eye would surely have lighted on her face. She dived for the fitting room curtain, her heart racing. Behind her, she heard Mrs. Jenkins saying, "I think that's the girl who waited on me." "I've got to get out of here," Beatrice thought swiftly. "I simply can't face Jenkins. I can't have it all exposed now!" It was an hour until lunchtime, and she had a customer in the fitting room. A customer who was trying to soothe a whining little boy. "I'll be through in a minute, Junior. In just a minute."

Miss Getz appeared, providentially, and Beatrice cried, "Oh, Getzie, please take my customer in there. I—Idon't feel well."

Miss Getz stared, but Beatrice had turned and ran. She slipped through the curtains at the other end of the fitting room aisle. Miss Dane was on the phone, her back to Beatrice. Beatrice fled through Housewares, and into a waiting elevator.

She'd go up to the soda fountain, linger over a forbidden coke, and then she'd loiter on the main floor. How long would Mr. and Mrs. Jenkins wait down there? "If he'd only talk her out of the whole idea, and drag her away!"

Over the coke, she wondered again about what was happeneing upstairs. "I'll sign the slip for it," she told the soda clerk.

"If you ask me, they ought to give us the cokes," the girl said while Beatrice scribbled her name, number and department across the back of the ticket. "What's a coke to the Duchess, anyway?"

"Two thousand cokes might be something," Beatrice suggested mildly.

Having finished her drink, she wandered into the stocking department. "I certainly need some, too. But $1.35 . . . that's too much." She fingered 79-cent hose until the speculative eye of a main floor section manager sent her scurrying again. As she passed one of the side street entrances, a sudden thought struck her. "Jenkins lives in Queens. I bet he's riding around in my car!"

She walked boldly out the door. Sure enough, there a little way down the street, her shining black town car was parked. She regarded it with strangely mingled emotions. "I'll ride the subway, and Jenkins and his wife skylark around in that."

She wondered maliciously, how Jenkins would like it if she simply got in the back seat and sat there, waiting for him. "The shoe would be on the other foot then, my good man," she thought. Yet she was aware that she was not half so outraged by Jenkins' flagrant abuse of his privileges as she would have been before she came to work in Huntington's.

The doorman, who had been busily handing an old woman into her car, shook his head at Beatrice. "You want to catch pneumonia?" His eyes twinkled. "Any time you feel like sneaking out for a breath of air, be sure it's me on the door, and not that other man. He'd tell on you quick as look as you."

She took the escalator to the basement. From Children's Clothes she peered into Budget. The Jenkinses had definitely left. Beatrice sighed with relief, and marched back.

Miss Dane was drumming dangerously on the wrapping desk, her blood-red fingernails managing to call forth an unpleasantly loud sound from the scarred wood. "Where have you been?"

"Upstairs for a coke," Beatrice confessed meekly.

Miss Dane's throat purpled. "How dare you leave the floor? You were taking advantage of the section manager's absence, that's what you were doing! I have a good mind to fire you right now!"

Beatrice bit her lip. All at once, she wanted fiercely to scream, "Go on, fire me! Fire me, and watch me mess your job up and your whole darned department—watch me mop you up in 10 minutes!"

But sweet though it would be to put a bomb under Miss Dane, the though of Anthony Bradley stopped her. She simply couldn't ruin everything now! He was on his own, up there with the merchandising manager. He was working out a scheme he had thought up himself—he would soon be getting a promotion he had earned. "The farther he gets away from this low-paying section manager job, the less it will hurt him to know I've been lying...."

If Anthony could convince himself that he was standing on his own two feet in this store, if he knew beyond any shadow of a doubt that he was valuable and appreciated—perhaps later, when inevitably he discovered that Beatrice owned the store, he wouldn't feel that he held his job only because she loved him. Because Beatrice had long ago decided that Bruce Sheldrake, who was too high and mighty to explore trivial details, was going out on his ear, some fine day. And Anthony Bradley, after serving the training she was certain Grandfather would have wanted, was going to occupy that perfectly appointed office upstairs with "General Superintendent" on the door.

So Bee Davis, saleslerk in Budget Fashions, let Miss Dane the Budget buyer, fume at her. Bee dropped her eyes and tried hard to look contrite.

"Yes, Miss Dane," she murmured meekly. "Oh, Miss Dane, I'm so sorry. I'm so very sorry."

And finally, when she saw that Miss Dane was working herself up into a veritable tantrum, and when she realized that the eyes of every girl in the department were focused on them, Beatrice took a deep breath and burst out, tearfully, "Please, Miss Dane, don't fire me! Oh, Miss Dane, I need my job. I promise I'll never do it again. Really, I won't, Miss Dane." Her wide eyes lifted tragically to the contorted face of the buyer. "Miss Dane, you won't fire me, will you"

She had learned, the day she applied for this job in the personnel office, that if you stood up to people they respected you more. But she had learned, too, that power was sweet to women like Miss Dane. Women who had so little else to glory in. The power of life and death, of hiring and firing, made autocratic tin gods of them. If you begged, they liked to see you grovel ...and they grudgingly dispensed a little mercy, afer you'd humbled yourself enough.

But Miss Dane surprised her. For, instead of the mounting fury, instead of more threats and final humiliation, Miss Dane suddenly crumpled.

"Stop that!" she grated. "Don't cry, you fool! Do you think I like trampling all over you? But I haven't got it so easy myself..... They took my stock girl, they keep raising my sales figures higher and higher. I'm nearly crazy, that's what I am! I was a salesgirl myself once. In those days, the store had some heart. Mr. Huntington wasn't hard-boiled, he didn't drive people..."

To the never-to-be-forgotten stupefaction of the entire Budget Department, Miss Dane herself burst into tears. She wailed, "Go away, you young idiot. Let me alone! Oh, I wish I never had to see this place again!"

She covered her face with her hands, and turned to Miss Getz, who had somehow crept closer. "Getzie, Getzie," she choked, "it wasn't like this in the old days, was it?"

YOUNG'S POINT, April 18—(ENS).—The Sunday School of St. Aidan's Anglican Church held their party on Easter Monday, with a large attendance together with a number of children who are spending their Easter holidays at the Point.

About four o'clock Mrs. Moore, assisted by the senior girls, served a most delicious tea party to the children. After lunch they were peanut and candy scrambles, the delight of every little heart. Floyd. The remainder of the afternoon was spent in sewing for the bale. The meeting closed with prayer by the rector, Rev. T. H. Floyd.

Mission Circle Has Supper Meeting

The Primary Class room in St. James' Church was the scene of a delightful supper meeting held in their Easter service by the Jean Wagar Mission Circle on Monday night, when over thirty girls and guests were present.

The tables were done in springtime decorations with flowering plants and pussy willows and streamers of mauve and yellow making a pleasing ensemble.

In charge of the supper arrangements were Vera Leggitt, Dorothy Martin and Eleanor File, assisted by Mesdames E. M. Davis and M. H. Drysdale.

Seated at the head table with the president, Olive Searles, were Mrs. Wesley Rose, W.M.S. president and Rev. F. W. and Mrs. Craik with the other circle officers.

The service opened with the call to worship by Jean Davis and prayer by Mary Easson. The scripture lesson was chosen from Luke 24: 1-34 and read by Gladys Rutherford, and prayer offered by Mrs. Rose.

Recalling the events of the first Eastertide, Rev. Mr. Craik brought a note of inspiration as he told of the last supper and its significance to us. Continuing the Easter theme was the reading from "Springs in the Valley" by Connie Wagar. A brief business session included invitation to the mother and daughter banquet by Mrs. Rose, as well as an invitation from George Street Circle for the October meeting. An interesting feature was the Christian Stewardship Alphabet led by the secretary, Zetta Wood, and in which all present took part.

Appropriate music included the solo "Low at Thy Feet," by Hazel McLaren and the quartet "Go Tell the World About Jesus." Margaret Smart, Helen Spence, Hazel McLaren and Mrs. Davies, with Anne Deyell accompanying.

"The Surgeon of Skeena" was the study for the month and particularly interesting as presented by Anne Deyell, who told of the work of Dr. Wench and his wife in northern British Columbia.

A sincere vote of thanks to the girls in charge of the supper and to all assisting in the program was voiced by Jean Hammond.

"The Easter Egg," a novel guessing contest was won by Greta Van-Nest, and the meeting closed with prayer by Mr. Craik.

Hymn Composed By Rev. Craik Is Sung

The Easter W.M.S. meeting of St. James' United Auxiliary was held on Tuesday with the usual good attendance.

The meeting opened with the singing of the hymn, "Come Gracious Lord," composed by Rev. Mr. Craik.

The silent prayer for our adopted missionaries was followed by the unison prayer. Mrs. Wesley Rose, the president, conducted the business session which included final arrangement for the coming mother and daughter banquet on May 9.

Owing to the resignation of Gladys Langton, as Mission Band leader, the new appointment was left with the nominating committee.

"True Generosity" was the theme of the Christian Stewardship message brought by Miss M. Deyell with a fine appeal to all workers, while Mrs. E. Beavis in presenting the temperance department emphasized the vital necessity of home influence.

In an interesting resume Mrs. E. M. Davis told the story of Dr. Tucker and his contribution to the missionary cause.

The Easter program proper was in charge of Mrs. Ernest Kitney and her group, when a number of Easter hymns were the prelude. After prayer by Mrs. Beavis the Te Deum Landamus was read responsively, and was followed by a beautiful Easter story told by Mrs. F. W. Craik. An Easter message in song was the solo, "On That Day" contributed by Mrs. E. Frizzelle.

The meeting closed with prayer and benediction by Mrs. Kitney.

FASHIONS

An extra skirt can make your wardrobe seem more extensive at a little price. This pattern includes three smart skirts, designed especially for the woman who wears a larger size. Wear your new skirt with blouses that you have on hand, and with your suit jacket for a change. You'll find many times when a skirt and blouse make just the right costume for the occasion and will be glad to have such a well-cut skirt on hand. Gray men's wear flannel, beige tweed or fine checked woollen are all very chic this Spring and neutral enough to go with anything.

Style No. 2881 is designed for sizes 26, 28, 30, 32, 34, 36, 38, 40 and 42-inches waist measurement. Size 30 requires 1⅞ yards of 54-inch fabric for any version.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a princess gown of ciel blue sheer, with shoulder veil. She carried Talisman roses. Miss Olive and Miss Evelyn Moore were attendants for their sister, wearing peach and romance pink sheer frocks, with matching hats, and carrying blue iris and cornflowers. Mr. Donald McCallum was groomsman for his brother, and the ushers were Mr. Arthur Moore and Mr. Roy Blake. After a reception at the home of the bride's parents, the couple left on a motor trip.

A generally favorable and fortunate state of affairs may be read from the ruling lunar and mutual aspects. And while there may be activity and excitement, with much commotion in the private as well as business relations, yet there is likely to develop certain strange, curious or intriguing situation which it will take some sound reasoning and good judgment to safely negotiate. There may be sudden and surprising openings, coming from secret or unpredictable sources, calling for swift insight and direct action, in order to reap benefits and personal gratification. Be alert but decisive.

If It Is Your Birthday

Those whose birthday it is may anticipate a year of much good fortune and personal gratification, with progress, pleasure and probably social or sentimental felicity, although these may be attended by peculiar, intriguing or mystifying factors—to be dealt with with much rationalizing, keen understanding and quick action. Practical tactics and common sense in obscure situations may avert pitfalls and delusions. Keep balanced and sane in strange adventures.

"Y" Review Lays Stress On "Being Prepared"

Guests who peeped in at the dress rehearsal for the Gymnasium Military Review Thursday afternoon following the Local Council of Women tea were given a happy foretaste of the program for Thursday and Friday, April 24th and 25th, when the presentation, "On Parade," will demonstrate to citizens the wisdom of the "Y's" policy of having children and business girls of the city carry on as normally as possible during war time. Owing to present conditions the annual gymnasium pageant has been curtailed, but the class review of gym activities which takes its place is novel and interesting.

The flag signalling, rifle and squad drill and military gymnastics which members of the gym classes have studied during the winter season, with even the tiny tots participating in the healthgiving exercises, will be highlights, since one of the most important ways women and girls of today can serve their country is to keep fit and be prepared.

The whirr of sewing machines in the work room, where mounds of costumes are still in the making, could be heard as one passed en route to the gymnasium, but the elaborate garb of former years have been cut down to allow volunteer seamstresses to carry on with their war work. Although fewer in number, costumes are just as interesting as formerly, each briskly suggesting the military order of things. For example, there's a flirtations little dance for the youngest performers, featuring "wooden soldiers" and baby doll dresses with fluffy skirts and lots of chiffon bows, and in the "Irish Lilt" the colleens sport scarlet capes over their crisp green costumes. Miss Caroline Littlefield, physical director, is directing the presentation.

STRAIGHT from the beach at Waikiki come some of the season's smartest inspirations for summer play clothes, done in sturdy cottons and light-hearted colors, made to stand the gaff.

The outfit sketched is a Polaka suit, of rough blue and white plaid cotton, perfect for summer days in the country or on the beach. It's designed to emerge fresh and smiling from innumerable tubbings, retaining its air of casual chic despite sun, sand and water.

This consists of jacket bound in white badminton tape, with matching skirt. If you like you may have matching shorts and shirt, and be prepared for all exigencies of a summer week-end. Wear the shorts and shirt for beach-lolling, slip on the jacket and skirt for lunch.

When Love Has Waned, Break the Engagement. Loveless Marriage Is Just About the Saddest Plight That Young People Can Be Called Upon to Face.

An engagement to marry should be regarded as merely a sentimental option which a man and woman take on each other's hearts and hands, and which they are free either to close or let lapse, without disparagement to either party, when the time to make a final decision arrives. This would save endless misery and prevent many of the marriages that are doomed to be failures before they even start, because they are the result of men and women feeling that they have to stick to bargains which they already repent. For it is only too sadly true that circumstances alter cases—as the old proverb puts it—and that we make many commitments on the spur of the moment that we bitterly regret on sober second thought. The prospect that seemed so alluring when presented to us by a good-looking spellbinder looks like a fool's risk when we mull over it alone and in full possession of our faculties. The pretty girl doesn't look so glamorous under the harsh light of the mid-day sun as she did in the moonlight, and on closer inspection the Fairy Prince doesn't seem so desirable, after all. No hat nor gown nor automobile ever looks as ravishing out of the showcase as it does in it and, nine times out of ten, we would take it back to the bargain counter if we only had the nerve to do so. Time changes us all. It alters our tastes, our points of view, so that very often the thing that was our heart's desire yesterday we would not take on a bet today, and that is why I think that a marriage engagement should be a flexible, take-it-or-leave-it arrangement, instead of a binding contract, which often costs a man money to break and causes him to be regarded as a welcher by his associates

Of course, women, having the traditional right to change their minds, have little difficulty in breaking out of an engagement when they discover that, after all, they prefer Percy, who has a new streamlined car, to Sam, who walks his dates.

But when a man finds out that what he mistook for a deathless passion was only a passing fancy; and that long before he has gotten through paying the installments on the engagement ring he put on Sally's lily white hand she bores him to death and he looks forward with horror to spending his life listening to her chatter, it is no easy matter to untie with his teeth the knot he tied with his tongue.

Better Not Act Quickly

I get no more desperate letters than those I receive from men who ask for some nice, reliable, painless way of breaking an engagement and telling Mary they have transferred their affections to another. Well they know there will be trouble, for Mary hasn't given up all her other dates for this.

She hasn't assembled a hope chest to have it left on her hands unused. She hasn't flashed her diamond in the other girls' faces to give it up without a struggle. And the prospect of having to endure her tears and reproaches is so appalling that many a youth's courage fails him, and he suffers himself to be dragged to the altar rather than make a fight for liberty.

The easy engagement would make for happier marriages because it would give the party of the first part and the party of the second part a chance to test out their affections for each other. For they could be very sure that a love that isn't strong enough to endure an engagement wouldn't hold up under the stress of matrimony. And they would also have an opportunity of finding out how well their tastes jibed, and how much of each other's society they could stand without yawning.

Engagement Not Mortgage

In reality, that is what an engagement should not be. Not a mortgage on a girl's and boy's future, but a finding out of what sort of a permanent investment the other would be.

It should be a time in which a man and woman who are contemplating spending the balance of their lives together should make the most profound study of which they are capable of the other's character, points of view, manners and habits, and then decide whether their peculiarities would get on their nerves, or they would love them just because they were John's or Mary's little ways.

And if, as the engagement wore on, they loved each other more dearly and found their greatest happiness in each other's companionship, then let the wedding bells ring out and joy be unconfined.

But if, on the contrary, they find as the engagement drags its weary length along that their enthusiasm for each other has died a natural death and their temperature gone down from fever heat to subnormal; if they fight and quarrel over all sorts of trifles, and other boys and girls begin to look good to them, then let them be free to say: "Good-by and thank you for a pleasant time," and no bones broken. Not even a heartstring strained.

Home Study May Be Step to a Cartooning Career

On His Way to the Big Money

"Go right in, Mr. Jones!"

A lucky fellow, the cartoonist who has arrived, for these days more funny pictures are used than ever before.

Home study may show how much talent you have for this well-paying profession. Charts explain cartoon techniques, how to build up a funny face.

You start with a simple oval, then draw horizontal guide lines, as shown in the sketch above, to help you place the features.

Moving these guide lines up or down changes the character of the face completely! The higher the eyebrow line, the more stupid your man looks. The higher the mouth, the tougher is his chin!

You get really comical facial expressions when you experiment with different shapes for eyes, nose and mouth. A man in a daze? Crosses for eyes! A sappy smile? Draw it up the side of his face!

You learn to draw the figure much the same way, starting with a "matchstick man".

Our 24-page instruction book tells how to cartoon the face and figure, how to picture action. Gives pointers on selling comic strips, gag cartoons, caricatures, advertising and movie cartoons.

Send 15c in coins or stamps for your copy of SIMPLE CARTOONING SELF-TAUGHT to the Examiner, Home Service, Peterborough. Be sure to write plainly your NAME, ADDRESS, and the NAME of instruction book.

BARCLAY ON BRIDGE

WRITTEN FOR THE EXAMINER

By SHEPARD BARCLAY

"The Authority on Authorities"

"RESULT" PLAYERS

MEDIOCRE players frequently develop a complex whereby they judge the merit of their partners' work on the basis of results. If something pans out well, they think their mate has done finely. If it works out disastrously, they are prone to loosen a torrent of abuse. Actually, bridge is such an uncertain proposition, at many stages, that some of the best work proves expensive and some of the worst turns out fortuitously.

The North player who bid as shown was the only one in an entime duplicate game who made the sacrifice bid over the hostile 4-Spades. The opponents took two tricks against him in each suit except spades, setting him four tricks and giving East and West a score of 700 points. That was the highest for any East-West pair, as nobody else got more than 650 points, for making 5-Spades. Consequently the North player at this table bid his side into bottom score.

After South had studied over the traveling score slip and realized his side was bottom, he opened up on his partner and gave him a regular broadside about optimism. North finally had enough of it, and took his hand again out of the duplicate board to show South how good his bidding was. If South had possessed even the J of hearts or diamonds, the slam would have been down one less trick and would have made top score instead of bottom.

North, who was perfectly correct and sound in his contention, maintained that a hand so weak it did not even contain that small amount of useful strength is the rarest kind of rarity, even in the face of, the sort of bidding that had been done. When the two opponents agreed with North, South finally silenced himself and apologized for what he had said.

MILLBROOK

Women's Institute Consider Course Home Nursing

MILLBROOK, April 18.—(ENS)— Mrs. T. G. Harkness was hostess for the April meeting of the local branch of the Women's Institute, held at her home on Saturday at 3 p.m., with the president, Mrs. E. C. Richards, in the chair.

The correspondence, read by the secretary, Mrs. J. W. Hilton, and including a letter from the secretary of the Canadian National Exhibition in reference to the new prize list for 1941, particularly in the household economics classes, and urging having local members, especially those who are known as good cooks, become exhibitors. "To increase the use of Canadian products" was a slogan emphasized.

The short course on 'Home Nursing and Emergencies" was given in detail in a letter from Marian H. Henderson, Director of Health, Toronto, and the formation of a class urged, a local graduate nurse, if possible, to be in charge. "A book, a teacher, and a class" are the requirements for the twelve lessons, local doctors and dentists also to be asked to give lectures and demonstration material. The matter will be taken up later, when it has been determined whether the junior girls' club and its leader, Mrs. W. H. Armstrong, could undertake this important study course.

A card from Gunner Bruce Freelove in England, thanking the Institute for cigarettes sent him, was read, and the treasurer, Mrs. Melville Ball, reported $45.05 taken in at the recent dance and euchre by which the W.I. celebrated its fortieth birthday anniversary. Expenses were $23.35, including $16.00 for the orchestra; $6.50 was received in tickets sold on the birthday cake, which was donated by H. D. Bigelow, and altogether a balance of $27.55 was placed in the bank as a result of the undertaking.

Tuning, demothing, and otherwise renovating the piano in the Town Hall had cost $16.00 and the treasurer mentioned that the insurance premium is due at the end of this month. The president announced the district annual to be held at Morrish on May 29, and the visit of the district president. Mrs. Ira Lowe, for the May meeting, which is the annual one, when the election of officers takes place. It will be held the second Saturday in May at 8 p.m., with Mrs. Melville Ball as hostess.

Mrs. G. O. Fallis was appointed auditor taking the place of Mrs. B. L. Richards, removed to Toronto. Mrs. P. Handley is the other auditor for the books of the local organization. A top for a quilt, donated by Mrs. John Allen, Sr., charter member of the Institute, but now prevented from attending the meetings owing to advanced years and failing health, was mentioned by the president, and this will be completed at an early date. The offering for the Red Cross fund, was taken and the program for the day, concerned with the study of Canadian industries, was taken up by Mrs. Edmund Mall, convener of the standing committee on this subject.

At the annual meeting the roll will be answered by "Pay your fee." Following the National Anthem a social hour was enjoyed, with the hostess serving candy.

4 Women Seek Manitoba Seats

WINNIPEG, April 18 (CP)—Four women are seeking Manitoba Legislature seats in the provincial election next Tuesday.

Three are running in Winnipeg's 10-seat constituency while the fourth, Miss Salome Halldorson, only woman member of the last House, is standing for re-election in St. George, rural constituency located between Lake Winnipeg and Lake Manitoba. Miss Halldorson is president of the Manitoba Social Credit League.

The three Winnipeg nominees are Mrs. Harriet Dick, Liberal; Mrs. Asta Oddson, Social Credit, and Madeline Hryniewiecki, Sound Money Economics. Mrs. Dick is a supporter of Premier Bracken's Coalition Government. Mrs. Oddson, Social Credit League candidate, is opposed while Miss Hryniewiecki's Sound Money Economics sponsors have neither approved nor disapproved coalition.

This is the second attempt by Miss Halldorson, Mrs. Oddson and Mrs. Dick to obtain a seat in the Legislature. Miss Halldorson was succesful in her first try in 1936 while Mrs. Oddson was defeated in Gimli in the same election and Mrs. Dick lost out by 54 votes in 1920 when she ran as an Independent in Winnipeg.

She Opposed Coalition

Only Social Credit Legislature member to oppose coalition when the non-partisan government was formed last Nov. 4, Miss Halldorson was born at Lundar, Man., 54 years and specialized in modern languages at the University of Manitoba. Since 1919 she has been a language teacher at the John Barnason Lutheran Academy in Winnipeg.

Mrs. Oddson, born in Winnipeg 46 years ago and mother of four children, has been active in the Social Credit League for six years and was secretary in 1937-38-39. She is now a member of the Board of Directors. Graduated in arts from the University of Manitoba, she worked with the Manitoba Economic Survey Board in 1937. The following year she was employed on the cost of living survey of the Dominion Government.

Mrs. Dick has been active in Winnipeg welfare work and other public services for 25 years. Born in Cobourg, Ont., she came west as a young woman and raised a family of six sons, three of whom served in the first Great War.

She organized the Home Welfare Association of Winnipeg and has been president 20 years.

Greek King Plans Army Rule As Premier Korizis Dies; Successor Fails On Cabinet

Goering Guff

Berlin, April 19 (AP)

GOERING hailed Hitler today as "defender of German honor and liberty, guarantor of the German future" in a message on the eve of Hitler's 52nd birthday.

"The hearts of all Germans," said Goering, "in Europe's north, south, east and west and beyond the seas beat in love and gratitude."

"The defeated enemy," the message concluded, "jealously look upon unbroken German strength and the determined will of a united German nation on Hitler's second wartime birthday."

No Faltering In War Says Leaders; Death Unexplained

ATHENS, Greece, April 19 (AP)—King George was reported today to be planning a military government to succeed that of the late Premier Alexandros Korizis, who died yesterday.

Efforts of Kostas Kotzias, former military governor of Athens, to form a government were said to have failed.

King George earlier had assumed wartime control of the government as head of the council of ministers, but entrusted to Kotzias the task of forming a new cabinet.

The scholarly banker, Korizis, whose death yesterday afternoon was anounced to his countrymen late last night, had succeeded the late Gen. John Metaxas as premier of wartime Greece.

Thus twice within 80 days death had disrupted Greece's government as the little nation fought desperately for life.

Just as Korizis vowed to lead on undaunted in the fight with Italy which began under Gen. Metaxas, Kotzias had pledged his nation to stand firm now against the military might of the Axis.

Fight To Go On To Victory

The Athens news agency quoted Kotzias as declaring in a radio message to his countrymen that this stand would be an example to the "excellent Greek troops who have covered themselves with honor and glory for six months and who continue with the same heroism under the most difficult conditions to fight an uprecedented battle."

The government did not disclose immediately the cause of Korizis' death, first announced to the Greek people late last night.

The government announced that the premier's funeral would be today at the Athens cathedral with full honors of his nation. A short time later another announcement declared Greece's resistance would not be weakened, and an authoritative source added:—

"Various rumors have been put into circulation by malicous elements serving treacherous aims and foreign interests. It can be stated categorically that the struggle undertaken for the honor and salva-

G.M. '43 Models Shelved, Rest To Follow?

DETROIT, April 19 — (AP). — General Motors' announcement that it is making no plans for new model passenger cars in 1943 is expected in automotive circles here to be followed shortly by similar decision by the remainder of the motorcar industry.

In announcing his company's decision yesterday in New York, Alfred P. Solan, Jr., General Motors Board chairman, said the action had been determined upon so that all possible acceleration might be given to the United States defence program.

All other companies manufacturing motor vehicles have pledged their fullest effort to the defence materials production program and a decision to forego 1943 model changes has been regarded among authoritative observers in the industry as an "obvious eventuality."

While the Ford Motor Company and Chrysler Corporation, which with General Motors produce about 85 per cent of United States automobiles, have made no definite statement yet of their 1943 model plans, their reaction to the Sloan announcement left little doubt of their plans for 1943.

They Failed To Collaborate

Slav Premier Admits His Nation's Mistake With The Allies

ATHENS, Greece, April 19—(AP).—Premier Dusan Simovic of Yugoslavia today blamed the swift German entry into Croatia and the lack of "prior collaboration with the Allies" for the speedy defeat of the Yugoslav armies.

In a military analysis of the war released by the Yugoslav Legation, the Prime Minister, as head of the government in exile, expressed determination to "go on fighting at the side of our Allies until final victory."

The statement said in part:

"The degree of technical preparation of the Yugoslav army, compared with its powerful enemy, was much inferior...We had not organized any military collaboration with the Allies.

"Desirous of staying to the end on a policy of neutrality, we refrained from carrying out any negotiations in connection with such collaboration...Despite their willingness, therefore, the Allies were unable to help us with planes and armored units which were badly needed.

"Thanks to the good morale of our army and our people and thanks also to the heroism of our aviation, which inflicted heavy losses on the enemy and which during the struggle lost 50 per cent. of its strength, we had a chance after the first surprise...to organize resistance on the Kosovo-Krusevac-Kragujevac - Belgrade line and hold for a time the enemy advance."

RetreatInGreece Tough Job

(By KIRKE L. SIMPSON.)

ROME, April 19—(AP).—Rising Italian prices were sharply attacked yesterday by Giovanni Preziosi, editor of La Vita Italiana, a monthly political review.

Recalling a decree ordering merchandise prices pegged at the levels of July 20, 1940, Preziosi said prices not only should not have increased since then, but should have been reduced.

He predicted further increases "since there exists no merchandise which had not seen a rise since July 20—and what a rise!"

Canned foods, wines, cotton goods, hats, scarfs and electric lights were among the goods he listed whose prices were not pegged.

Preziosi said some price increases furnished by a buyer for a charity organization included:

Butter from 16 lire (80 cents) to 22 lire ($1.10) a kilogram (approximately from 40 cents to 55 cents a pound).

Pig fat from 12.10 lire (about 60 cents) to $19.50 (about $17) a kilogram (approximately from 30 to 50 cents a pound).

Soup bones from 9.90 lire (about 46 cents) to 12.10 (about 60 cents) a kilogram (approximately from 23 to 30 cents a pound).

Draft to Call 250,000 Women

Britain Starts With 20-21 Group and Makes Few Exceptions

LONDON, April 19 — (CP). — A quarter-million women of 20 and 21 are expected to register to-day in Britain's first conscription of feminine labor for war industries.

When Labor Minister Ernest Bevin announced the plan to draft women workers on March 16, he declared the registration call was to be heeded equally in the drawing room and the laundry room.

The only exemptions will be for women already serving with the nursing service, full-time Air Raid Precautions, and Civil Defence Volunteers and students at universities, technical and professional schools.

Two or three weeks will be required for classification of to-day's registrants before the Ministry of Labor begins interviewing those who will best fit into the nation's humming industrial machine.

Bevin has explained the Ministry would select from the list all women "likely to be useful to the war effort whether in employment or not.

Special care will be taken, the minister said, to avoid calling women with small children or those with exceptional domestic responsibilities.

As soon as the group born in 1920 has been classified, another age group will be enrolled.

Opposition to to-day's registration was voiced by the Council of the Women's International League, meeting in Oxford, in a resolution protesting conscription of labor and omission of "conscientious objection" as specific ground for exemption.

On March 9 Mr. Bevin issued a call for 100,000 women volunteers for shell-filling factories pending inauguration of the conscription plan, explaining: "We must call for a great response from our women to run the industrial machine."

The response, it has been announced, was 110,000 volunteers.

First registration of civilians was April 5 when persons between the ages of 41 and 45 were called in, with men between 41 and 42 years to be drafted first.

Dive Bomber Worst Worry

Swarms Blast Everything In Sight In Greece

LONDON, April 19—(CP Cable). —The unending mass of men, arms and planes the Germans are able to throw recklessly against the stubbornly resisting Allied line in Greece is causing increasing concern over the outcome of the campaign.

This tremendous pressure, maintained by steady reinforcements, is forcing the Allies to withdraw to a shorter line. Faced with superior forces, they are battling savagely and gallantly, but the sheer weight of the enemy is overpowering.

When the Allies meet the Nazis on equal terms they generally triumph, but then the German throw more power into the drive oblivious

Imperial Line Holds Everywhere

Tank Charges Beaten, Many Prisoners With Terrific Toll

ATHENS, Greece, April 19 (AP)—An Anzac detachment, surrounded near Servia by a German battalion, was reported today to have extricated itself and killed 300 Germans.

British and Greek defenders of the tightened Hellenic line declared their front was unbroken and their flanks unturned under the tremendous onslaught of Axis armies bolstered by Nazi divisions streaming south from Yugoslavia.

As King George II worked to shape a new government—possibly a military cabinet—in an overnight change necessitated by the death of Premier Alexandros Korizis, word from the north indicated fighting had intensified along the entire defence line.

British army headquarters in Athens declared repeated Nazi attacks by armored formations and infantry "have been repulsed" and said the attackers failed to penetrate the line at a single point.

(The Germans claimed they had hoisted the Swastika on Mt. Olympus, British-held eastern anchor of the line, and that the bombed, earthquake-shaken town of Larisa, 40 miles south of the mountain, had been taken).

"Imperial forces are in contact along the whole front," British headquarters said. "Heavy attacks by armored formations and infantry

Decision In November

Moscow, April 19 (AP)

PRAVDA, organ of the Communist party, said today the Soviet Union made a decision not to join the Axis last November, but asserted Russia's new neutrality pact with Japan was not directed against Germany.

Discussing the implications of the Japanese agreement in a leading article, Pravda said the pact "creates a solid foundation for development of friendly relations between the two states."

The assertion was made in reference to foreign comments on the new pact, which Pravda said "continue to flow in a broad stream."

9-Plane Search

Toronto, April 19 (CP)

ROYAL Norwegian Air Force authorities said today that nine planes from the Norse training base here are searching for the fighter plane which disappeared while on an altitude test flight yesterday. They said the co-operation of the Royal Canadian Air Force in the search had been asked.

The fighter plane, piloted by a young Norwegian flier whose name could not be announced, has been missing for almost 24 hours. Last night another Norwegian plane engaged in the search reported a patch of oil on Lake Ontario near Hamilton but when it tried to guide a harbor patrol boat to the spot, the oil patch could not be found.

Bad Weather Keeps Raiders At Home

LONDON, April 19—(CP).—The Air Ministry today announced no overnight offensive action by the Royal Air Force, leading to belief that stormy weather over the Continent held aircraft on the ground.

The apparent cessation of activity followed a night in which Berlin received its heaviest raid of the war, a raid in which more numerous and heavier types of bombers carried the new "super" bomb which has been observed in raids on other German-held centres to inflict enormous damage, sometimes tossing whole buildings into the air.

R.A.F. pilots returning yesterday from their 1,200 mile round trip to Berlin told of seeing the German capital dotted with fires. Apart from that they had difficulty in observing the extent of the damage their bombs inflicted, for visibility was poor.

The pilots and their crews suffered intensely from cold and were troubled at times by ice which formed on the wings and propellers of their craft.

Eight aircraft were lost in the raids, while two German fighter craft which attempted to intercept the raiders were known to have been shot down.

Few Hours Over Britain

LONDON, April 19 (CP)—Officials reported little enemy air activity over Britain last night and early today and Britons generally enjoyed a night of undisturbed rest.

The air ministry and ministry of home security said that apart from slight activity over southwest England and the north of Scotland "there has been nothing to report during the night."

No casualties were reported and the damage was slight.

Air Crew Break, Coup Set For Eve Of Hitler's Birthday

TORONTO, April 19 — (CP). — Five of the group of prisoners which escaped from a North-western Ontario camp have been recaptured, Col. H. E. Stethem, Director of Interment Operations, announced to-day.

OTTAWA April 19.—(CP).— The capture of "several" of 28 German prisoners of war who escaped from a Northwestern Ontario internment camp during the night was announced to-day by a spokesman of the Secretary of State Department.

The official declined to give the exact number recaptured at this time but he was permitted to add that some were back in camp and others, overtaken in the dense bush about the camp, were being returned to the enclosure.

He gave official confirmation to the fact that the number who broke away from their guards during the night was 28. That was the first word from the Northwestern Ontario camp. Later it was thought the number was 30. But he said it had been established the total was 28.

This figure brought the number of attempts to break away from internment authorities in Canada to 61.

One man, Ernst Nueller, was shot and killed when he resisted capture in the same area where the 28 men broke for freedom. A second pris-

Thy Find Honor

New York, April 19 (CP)

UNDER the heading: "The glory that is Greece," the New York World-Telegram today published this editorial:

"How the battle of Greece will come out, we don't know. But we do know that a little land has grown great again. Win or lose, her sacrifice kindles new courage, her heroism raises new hope for all who love liberty everywhere.

"Perhaps this is poor balm for the wounded, whose homes are sacked, whose families stumble among the shell holes of the dead. "But maybe not. It was their grim choice. Deliberately they chose suffering as better than willing surrender to the conqueror. And thereby they still find honor.

"Such a people canot be insenitive to the world's regard. It must help them to know that the prayers of multitudes in the enslaved lands, as in the democracies, are with them.

"Glorious is the word for Greece.

Bomb Raid Routs London Staff But Twice-Hit Office Escapes

By DOUGLAS AMARON
(Canadian Press Staff Writer.)

LONDON, April 19 (CP Cable)—There's something to that "third time is lucky" saying after all.

Bombs that landed almost at their front door early Thursday morning sent the London staff of The Canadian Press looking for new quarters for the third time in seven months. This time, however, it was only a temporary move and before the morning was over the staff was back at its desks, without a trace of damage to show for the close call.

In previous bombings we were not so fortunate. Last September a near miss smashed windows and forced The Canadian Press bureau to move to new rooms in the 20 Tudor Street building, then housing The Associated Press.

The December fire-raid ended our stay there and sent the CP and AP to their present quarters in the Press Association building on Fleet Street.

When the home guard gave the order to evacuate the latter building on Thursday the CP joined the AP in a hazardous trek through glass and debris-littered streets. A mail-bag slung over my shoulder, I carried files, records and a typewriter —which served as a useful shield when I was forced to dive to the pavement half a dozen times to dodge falling bombs.

Finally we reached the safety of a hotel where I was greeted by two bomb explosions which made the previous blasts seem like sissies. Only one phone line was available so the CP story of the raid was telephoned to the cafe office from the flat of other staff members, who had been advised of the evacuation.

After the raiders passed on we moved to the ministry of information building, from which we functioned until advised that it was safe to return to the office.

During the raid coverage for Canadian newspapers was continued almost without a break.

R.A.F. Raiders Leave Sinking Five Axis Convoyed Vessels

LONDON, April 19 — (CP). — Four Axis merchant ships and an escort vessel either were set afire or left sinking yesterday, the Air Ministry announced to-day in a communique which said eight British planes were missing from the day's operations over the North Sea.

Two of the enemy vessels destroyed were travelling in convoy near Heligoland... Together with an escorting vessel, they were set on fire "so seriously as to be a total loss."

The other pair were "hit and left sinking" off the Norwegian coast.

Neutral sources reported the sinking of four British merchant ships aggregating 27,337 tons in the week ended April 18. These included the 10,917-ton Northern Prince, reported sunk in the Atlantic.

Another loss to Britain reported during the week was the 1,061-ton French liner Commissaire Ramel, which was under charter to the British Admiralty.

Loss of two small Swedish ships, the Kexholm of 3,815 tons and the Liguria of 1,751 tons, was also reported.

The British Admiralty announced during the week that henceforth its official summary of shipping losses will be issued monthly, instead of weekly as hitherto. The first report will be made available towards the middle of May and will cover the month of April.

ROME, April 19—(AP).— The Italian high command claimed to-day that two large tankers were sunk with torpedies and a cruiser was hit with bombs in an attack by Italian fliers on a heavily-escorted convoy in the Eastern Mediterranean.

(Confirmation from Allied source is not available.)

In North Africa, the daily war bulletin said, patrol clashes were reported east of the Egyptian village of Salum, and Axis planes bombed British positions at Tobruk, 80 miles west of the Egyptian-Libyan border.

"In Yugoslavia," it added, "our troops are continuing a movement to complete the occupation of Dalmatian territory."

An army commander with his staff and five other generals were claimed as prisoners.

Ex Fenelon Falls Merchant Is Fined $415

LINDSAY, April 19.—(ENS)—A fine of $415.55 was imposed Friday upon a retired merchant of Fenelon Falls on the charge of illegal possesion of liquor. This was the second conviction on a similar charge within the past few weeks. On the occasion of the first conviction the residence of the accused was also declared a public place.

L. M. Frost, K.C., appeared for the accused, who pleaded guilty.

William and James Davis, brothers of Bexley, faced the magistrate Friday. The former was charged with intoxication and the latter with driving a truck while in an intoxicated condition. William Davis pleaded guilty, and told the Bench that he had come to Lindsay on Wednesday to secure a supply of groceries and fell by the wayside. He had got his liquor free. Magistrate Gee remarked that Santa Claus did not arrive until Christmas. A fine of $10.75 was imposed. James Davis pleaded not guilty to the charge preferred against him, and his case was adjourned until Monday next in order to give the accused time to prepare his case.

James Taylor of Ops Township, was fined $10 and costs for fishing for lunge on April 16. The charge was laid by Game Inspector Hodgson. Overseer W. Scott and other other outside game wardens are patrolling the waters, protecting lunge during the spawning season and further offenders will be dealt with severely. Inspector Hodgson has also given notice that suckers as well as all other fish must not be taken from the waters in this county until May 16. This is in accordance with a provision of the Game and Fishery Act.

to cost—and this has been heavy.

The most worrying factor is the continual dive bombing due to Nazi air superiority. The great air force permits the Germans to maintain a virtual 24-hour attack in which they blast everything in sight—plateaux, mountain tops, and even creeks.

Incidentally, informed sources speculating on the Allies' ability to prevent further losses by concentrating on the more important Libya campaign, the prize of which is Suez, lifeline to the East.

Britain is fighting in Greece because she was morally bound to aid a gallant ally, but it is suggested that in the Empire's main struggle her interest lies in assuring the safety of Suez. As long as German mechanized forces are on the Egyptian border and bombers are on Libyan airfields, the Suez Canal is jeopardized.

"Heroic Greek co-operation on our left is playing a valuable part.

"Despite all efforts, our front has nowhere been penetrated and our flanks nowhere turned."

All reports from the front up until noon today indicated the Allied lines were unchanged in the past 12 hours, despite relentless Nazi pressure.

"We mow them down by the hundreds as they try to climb the steep mountain sides, but as soon as one wave is thrown back another rushes forward, said a military officer.

"Their losses are tremendous, unequalled, I believe, by anything they have suffered in the European war to date."

This source said the Nazis were bringing up heavy guns to supplement the bombardment by their Stukas, which fly over 20 and 30 at a time.

oner of war, Baron Franz Von Werra, dropped from a prison train near Smith's Falls, Ont., and made his way to the United States where he is free on bail on a charge of illegal entry.

Up until today those two prisoners were the only ones who managed to escape and have not been returned to custody.

Great Hunt On

Meantime in the Lakehead area a manhunt of great proportions was organized to track down those engaged in the mass escape by means of a tunnel.

Port Arthur was the base of operations for the search.

Royal Canadian Mounted Police, Provincial police and internment camp guards co-operated in the hunt.

Officials here said they were confident of success.

It was suggested plans had been brewing for weeks in the camp to time the escape for this week-end to coincide with Hitler's birthday which is tomorrow.

Authorities had been warned to be super-vigilant during the week-end against just such an attempt.

Air Crew Men

In Toronto Col. H. E. Stethem, director of interment operations, said today that residents of the Lake Superior bush country where 28 German prisoners have escaped from an internment camp, should "use any force necessary" to capture the men.

"The men are all non-commissioned men of the German air force, mostly crews of planes that were brought down raiding London," he said. "Since they came from the east, I feel they will head back to the east, and I strongly advise residents of the country around Chapleau and White River to be on the watch.

"They should, if they spot any of these men, use any force necessary to hold them until military aid can arrive."

Information on the mass breakaway, as it reached authorities here, was sketchy.

But it was said the men were all accounted for when the usual nightly roll-call was taken about 8 p.m. By 1 a.m. the men were known to have escaped.

Most Remote Camp.

The escape was engineered in one of the most remote camps in the country.

Thus, officials here said, the prisoners are handicapped by lack of knowledge of the rough country through which only men skilled in the ways of the bush would attempt to travel any great distance.

A body of men might be able to impose their will on settlers to obtain aid but, it was said here, the hunt is being pressed with vigor. The escaped prisoners would have little time to stop anywhere and settlements in the area are few and far between.

One authority suggested hunger would be the greatest factor in driving the men back into the arms of internment authorities.

The camp from which the prisoners broke lies only a few miles from the shoreline of Lake Superior. The thinly peopled area is studded with rocks and lakes and streams swollen by spring floods.

Some of the nearby settlements are Schrieber, Rossport, Dublin, Ozone, Jack Fish, Heron Bay, Struthers, Brenner and White River. Lumber camps and mining outfits are scattered through the wild country surrounding the camp.

About 50 members of the Algonquin Regiment left the Lakehead this morning for the camp district to assist in the search for the escapees. Lakehead police are watching all trains from the east. Three men were picked up this morning from a Canadian National Railways freight train but they were found only to be transients.

Inspector Ingram described the escape area as "nothing but rock and Christmas trees" and said the prisoners would have no chance to escape, other than along the railroad, or by airplane.

The Secretary of State Department spokesman said all prisoners in the camp had been accounted for at 8 p.m. when the usual nightly check-up was made.

It was 1 a.m. when the escapes were discovered.

"The camp from which the wholesale escape was made is the most isolated camp in Canada," said the spokesman.

"The bush is thick and extends on all sides of the camp for miles and miles. There are no roads to speak of and the only quick means of moving through the densely wooded country is on the Canadian Pacific Railway's right-of-way."

500 Miles To Border.

The spokesman said there was no settlement in the area from which the escaped prisoners could obtain food or other aid.

"If these men are heading for the United States border as other prisoners have done they will have to travel 500 or 600 miles around Lake Superior," said the spokesman.

"If a wholesale break had to come it could not have come in a better place from the standpoint of placing men in country that is difficult to travel through," he added.

The camp commandant notified the Department, in charge of interment operations, of the escape. The first brief word gave no details of how the break occurred.

Col. Stethem's assistant confirmed the report.

"We have no details as yet," said the official. "We merely have been advised that 28 men have escaped from a northwestern Ontario camp."

The official added that of course guards were sent out immediately to try and track down the escaped prisoners.

Some Skilful Dodgers

He would not hazard a guess as to how the escapes took place. But in the past it has been determined that the German prisoners of war usually planned for some time before making any attempt to gain their freedom.

One official previous stated they showed great skill and ingenuity at thinking up means of breaking away. Quite often one or more prisoners have shielded the actions of their fellow prisoners in order to aid an escape attempt.

The country where the 28 men broke away during the night is rugged rock and evergreen country in the area where the one prisoner who has been killed to date in an escape attempt died under the fire of an internment guard.

He was Ernest Nueller who, with a companion, was located by guards in a shanty some miles from the camp he left and, when ordered to surrender, he charged the guard and died almost immediately under the guard's fire.

Of the 33 prisoners who previously escaped only one remains at large. He is Baron Franz von Werra who escaped from a prison train taking him to the interior from an east coast Canadian port.

The baron, a German air force officer, made his way to the United States and now is free there on bail on a charge of illegal entry.

Dollars To Doughnuts

By EDITH ELLINGTON

YESTERDAY: Bee successfully avoids meeting Jenkins but catches the full force of Miss Dane's anger when she returns to the floor. Bee knows she can't be fired now, pleads for her job. Suddenly Miss Dane bursts into tears, condemns the management that makes her act so sternly, and to Miss Getz: "It wasn't like this in the old days, was it, Getzie?"

DEFEAT FOR AN IDEA

CHAPTER XXI

Beatrice Huntington Davenport backed off, slowly and unbelievingly, from the spectacle of Miss Dane sobbing like a baby, her head on the capacious bosom of Miss Getz. Miss Dane's tortured words rang in her ears. "It wasn't like this in the old days. The store had some heart, then. Mr. Huntington wasn't hard-boiled, he didn't drive people . . ."

This, she thought slowly, this is what's at the root of the whole trouble with this store. Everybody's being driven. The store has become a Frankenstein—running wild on the momentum of its own strength, its own power.

The store made money for Grandfather. But he loved it, too. It was his servant, his child—never his master.

And now it's making more money. Now the love is gone, there's nothing but profit behind it. Profit, no matter what the cost.

She looked down at herself, her hands touching her sides curiously. "The store has been run to make money for me. For me. Because I was useless, because Bruce Sheldrake and the trust company thought it was what I wanted . . ."

A moment later, she denied that to herself. "No! They were doing it for themselves. Because they had the power over it. Because it made them strong and feared. They knew I didn't care. I simply didn't count. I got the money and they had the power."

Her lips tightened, grimly. "That's all over now. I'll show them!"

Miss Dane and Miss Getz had disappeared into the cubicle where Miss Dane worked over her purchasing records. Beatrice decided, "I'm going up to see Mr. Bruce Sheldrake right now!" She marched to the elevator, the light of battle in her eyes.

• • •

But when the elevator door opened, Anthony Bradley walked out. "Anthony, listen—" she began, before all the other considerations overwhelmed her. She stopped, and suddenly her heart stopped, too. For Anthony's face was bleak and tired, there wasn't even any joy at seeing her in his eyes.

"Anthony, what's the matter?"

"He turned me down," Anthony said hoarsely. "He—he listened to it all. He made me explain a dozen times. And then—" he winced, "Then he laughed. He said I was crazy. He told me—" Oh, the pain in his voice, the bitter, bitter pain! "He told me to go back to floorwalking."

"He dared! He dared to—to—" The enormity of that sneering dismissal stabbed her.

"Yes, he dared, all right." Anthony moved his head as if to clear it. "He kicked me out, because he's the merchandise manager and I'm just a hired man."

"Wait, Anthony! Come back there with me! I'll fix him!"

"What could you do?" Anthony asked wearily. "It's no use, Bee. I'm licked."

She stood very still, searching his eyes. Anthony's hands were curled into fists. He struck at a counter savagely. "No, I'm not licked! I'll show him yet! I'll show them all!"

"Anthony," she said steadily, "If you could go right into Bruce Sheldrake's office—if you could take this idea straight to the Duchess herself—would you do it?"

"What did you say?"

"If you could march right over the head of the merchandise manager and convince someone higher up that you're right—"

"You don't understand!" he cried impatiently. "It's not the satisfaction of getting the best of him! It's not even the prestige of having an idea of my own tried out. That's not what I'm after! I want it proved, don't you see? Any crackpot notion might be presented to Sheldrake, or that Davenport girl, and tried out and it wouldn't mean anything. Just that the guy who presented it knew how to coax and flatter. This thing is mine. It's solid! It's good! I want to shove it down their throats, not have it put over on account of anyone's influence."

He lowered his voice, apologetically. "Oh, the deuce with it! I could have pussyfooted around, pulling strings, but I thought the hard way was better. So that leaves me holding the bag, and it leaves him laughing."

"How could you have pulled strings, Anthony?"

"There are always ways . . ." He was striding to the Budget Department, and she had to run to keep up with him. "Never mind. Our idea's down a sewer. But I won't give up! I'll get another idea sometime."

Beatrice realized then that she couldn't march into Bruce Sheldrake's office in the high-handed, devastating manner she had envisioned a moment ago. Something Anthony had said, a moment ago, stuck in her mind. "I want it proved."

She wanted her conclusions about this store proved, too. Just to descend on Mr. Sheldrake, screaming that the store was heartless and unjust, could too easily be put down to a temperamental vagary, she saw slowly. He'd soothe her, he'd get oily and unctuous after she had summoned Mr. Weeming and t he president of the trust company. But they'd all be like grownups handling a child in a tantrum. They wouldn't take her seriously.

The indignity of realizing how richly she merited not being taken seriously was like a cold slap of water in her face. "But all they know about me is that I was wildly extravagant, and I bought Clarence an airplane and suits and a string of polo ponies. They think I'm spoiled, stupid, and criminally irresponsible."

Unconsciously, she had slowed down her pace behind Anthony through the crowded aisles. She stopped at a counter, now, and stared at a shining chromium toaster. "I've got to do this the hard way, like Anthony. I must have proof. How can I get it?"

Through her mind there whirled half-remembered details of financial reports, profit statements, employe turnover, loss of work hours. . . . She couldn't straighten them out and realized, sadly, she wasn't fitted to cope with them.

"I need a lawyer. I need Weemie! But I can't go to him now. He'd think, too, I didn't trust his former stewardship. . . ." Only, Mr. Weeming hadn't anything to do with the store. That was the trust company, and Mr. Sheldrake. "I need a lawyer. I need a brilliant, honest, humane lawyer. I need someone to go into every nook and cranny and every single detail of the organization and operation of this store. Accountants, maybe. Personnel experts. Dozens of people. . . ."

Grandfather had always said, "Beatrice, the possession of great wealth is a tremendous, a solemn responsibility." She had never believed him. But now she stood at a counter of the store she owned, and tears stung her eyes. A voice inside her sobbed, "Oh, Grandfather, you were right! What shall I do?"

Japs Nab Ningpo To Cut Off Chiang's Capital

SHANGHAI, April 19 (AP)—Apparently seeking to choke off all remaining channels of the Chinese government in Chungking, Japanese troops, supported by warships and aircraft, were reported today to have taken the Chekiang province port of Ningpo in a nine-hour offensive.

Ningpo, one of the first Chinese ports opened under the Nanking treaty of 1842, is 100 miles south of Shanghai and has been serving as an important communications link between northern Chinese and the Chunking government, neutral observers said.

A military spokesman said the Japanese carried out several successful surprise landings on the coasts of Chekiang and Fukien provinces. Ningpo had not previously been molested during the four-year war in China.

Advices reaching here said occupation of the treaty porty culminated a week of Japanese bombing raids during which most of the civilian population of 200,000 was removed. These reports also said the Japanese had captured Shaohing, a town inland from Ningpo on the Ningpo-Hangchow-Shanghai railroad.

Nazis Hurl In Troops From Slavia

Australians Holding 10 Divisions South Of Olympus

ATHENS, April 19—(AP).—Heavy German attacks along the entire British-Greek defence line failed to penetrate at a single point, British army headquarters in Athens announced today.

"Despite all efforts, our front has nowhere been penetrated and our flanks nowhere turned," a communique said.

(The German High Command claimed today that Larisa, Greek city 40 miles south of Mount Olympus, where British troops have been reported fighting, had been taken.)

Official circles in Athens, however, made no attempt to minimize the seriousness of the situation which was complicated by the unexpected death late yesterday of Alexandros Korizis, Premier of wartime Greece for 80 days.

The Athens News Agency said Korizis, who succeeded the late Premier Gen. John Metaxas upon his death in the midst of the fight against Italy last January 29, had been replaced by Kosta Kotzias, former Military Governor of Athens.

Kotzias, who was sent to Thrace as emporary governor last month to inspect Bulgarian frontier defences and to rally the populace behind the government in resisting Germany immediately pledged himself to the policy of both Metaxas and Korizis

Last Minute News

ROME—(AP)—Fascist spokesmen asserted that a British declaration that Italians are ready to drop bombs on the Vatican in case of a British air attack on Rome was an "incredible manifestation of infamous, slanderous and disloyal propaganda." Knox Sunday School To Celebrate Anniversary

On Sunday, Knox Church Sunday School will celebrate its 69th anniversary with the Rev. Archer Wallace, M.A., D.D., of United Church Publications, Toronto, as the guest speaker. At the conclusion of the evening service Dr. Archer Wallace will give one of his famous travelogues, this one entitled "London by Day and Night." It will be about one hour in length and some 75 slides will be shown, twenty of which have been taken since January this year, and will show some of the bombed areas.

Knox Sunday School, like its Master, was born in a stable. That was the only building available in 1872 when T. W. Nisbitt and nine scholars began a work that resulted in Knox United Church. Although there was at this time no other church south of Charlotte Street, those who cleaned out these strange premises for the Sunday School were gratified to know that this very building, on the east side of Aylmer Street, between Charlotte and King had been the home of the first Presbyterian Church in Peterborough.

When the school had grown to some one hundred members it erected a new building on Dalhousie Street between Stewart and Rubidge Streets, the burden of the finance being borne by St. Paul's Presbyterian Church. It is interesting to note that after Knox had moved to its present quarters on Park and Wolfe Streets, St. John's Church opened a mission in the former building, which resulted in the erection of All Saints' Church. Moreover, Park Street Baptist Church made use of the building on Dalhousie Street for its earliest efforts.

Through all these years Knox has continued to serve efficiently and well along with her neighbor churches in the south of the city, and it is hoped that on this milestone in her years of progress she may have an anniversary celebration befitting her remarkable growth and development.

Questions Concerning Bible

There are some questions which every thoughtful Christian man is bound to ask concerning the Bible. The more one studies it the more urgent these questions become. The minister of religion should have a reasonable and convincing answer to these enquiries. We shall enumerate a few of them.

(1) Where did our present Bible come from? was it written at first just as we have it today, if not how did it assume its present form?

(2) We have heard a good deal about modern criticism of the Bible, some people say that it has undermined the authority of the Bock, others that it has made it a more vital bock. Which of these two positions is true?

(3) Many people are perplexed about the inspiration of the scriptures. The old time fundamentalist says that the authors of the various books were mere writing machines in the hands of a God who dictated to them. The modernist says that they were free will agents just like the rest of men. Which side gives the true opinion?

(4) We have met people who assert that all the books of the Bible have the same authority, and spiritual value. They quote proof texts from the book of Esther, with the same emphasis as from the book of Isaiah or the Gospel of John. Is this a reasonable and correct thing to do.

These critical questions will be dealt with in St. Andrew's church on next Sunday night.

Two Disciples Comforted By Christ's Kind Words

By REV. E. R. JAMES

JESUS said unto them: What manner of communications are these that ye have one to another, as ye walk, and are sad?"—St. Luke 24:17.

Cleopas and his friend are two every day, ordinary disciples of the Lord. They do not belong to the Apostolic band. They are little sheep of the flock for whom the Lord died. They are sad and downcast. So the Lord Jesus, the Comforter, comes to cheer and encourage them.

St. Paul tells us out of his personal experience that "Jesus Christ is the same yesterday, today and for ever." By that he means that His actions are the same. He is the same Man He was in the days of His flesh. He is full of compassion. He is truly the Good Shepherd and never so good as when men are in trouble and anxiety. He thinks so much of the little sheep that He spends the greater portion of His first resurrection day in opening the Scriptures to these rank and file men. They are men whose very bearing shows that they are sad. They are talking of the tragedy which they cannot understand. What does it all mean?

Perhaps they had climbed a steep hill and stand to rest and continue their conversation. Suddenly a sympathetic Voice breaks in with the enquiry: "What manner of communications are these that ye have one to another, as ye walk, and are sad?" The Passover Season was a time for rejoicing.

They look into His Face. They do not recognize the Stranger. "Their eyes were holden that they should not know Him," remarks the Evangelist. Forty-eight hours earlier He was hanging on the Cross bearing both the physical agony of the cruel scourging and awful pains of the crucifixion. Above all He was the sin bearer and His human soul is full of agony. Something of that agony is still seen in His Face, remarks a modern artist.

They are astonished that there should be any one who did not know the awful happenings of that week. "What things?" enquires the Stranger. They open their hearts to Him. They feel sure He is not an enemy. They had heard the news of the resurrection. Their friends had made enquiries. Can you not hear the sob in the speaker's voice: "But Him they saw not."

Then followed a wonderful Bible study. "He opened unto them the Scriptures." We have no account of what Scriptures He referred to but we may be sure He quoted Isaiah: "The Lord hath opened mine ear and I was not rebellious neither turned away back. I gave my back to the smiters and my cheeks to them that plucked off the hair; I hid not my face from shame and spitting. He was numbered with the transgressors." Again: "He was wounded for our trangressions; He was bruised for our iniquities and the chastisement of our peace was upon Him and with his stripes we are healed. He hath poured out His soul unto death."

Every age has stumbled at these words. Yet here and there a man has discovered that through his suffering he has in some mysterious way brought redemption to his brethren. He has caught a glimpse of the mystery of redemption through suffering and he has understood to some little extent how Christ was an is the Redeemer of the world.

They are standing at the cottage door. The Stranger's Face is towards the west as though He would go further. They stand one on each side and constrain Him to say: "Abide with us." "He went in to tarry with them."

The simple meal is quickly prepared. As devout Jews they say Grace. With one accord they look at their Guest. "He took bread and blessed it and brake and gave to them. And their eyes were opened and they knew Him, and He vanished out of their sight."

What is the lesson for us? Two of you are walking together—lovers—husband and wife. You have your problems. The Lord's Heart goes out to you. He will draw near to you if you desire Him? He will open your eyes to see Him, the Invisible One, in your little home. He understands hardship and poverty. He will strengthen and comfort you. "He is full of compassion."

HE COMFORTED THEM AND SPAKE KINDLY UNTO THEM."
